REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 13th AUGUST 1884.

GENERAL REMARKS.—In the Madras Presidency the rainfall for the week under report has been heavier than that recorded for some time past, and prospects have been improved. Rain has fallen throughout Mysore, and there is no longer anxiety for the crops. In South Coorg more rain is wanted. Rain fell throughout the Bombay Presidency, but more is still needed in parts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country. In the Berars and Hyderabad the rainfall has been slight, but the crops continue in good condition. There was good rain in most of the Central India States, particularly in Nowgong, where 23 inches fell. In the Rajputana States the rainfall has been generally light, but the prospects of the crops both in these and in the Central India States are good, save in Neemuch and Jeypore. Heavy rain is still reported from the Central Provinces and is proving injurious to the crops; a break is greatly needed. Good rain has fallen everywhere in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh; in the Jhansi district some 50 houses have been washed away by the overflowing of the Dhussai river. In the Punjab rain fell in seven districts; more is wanted in Peshawar. Good rain has fallen in Assam, but in Bengal it was again insufficient and has affected the prospects of the standing crops as well as retarded transplanting operations.

The last report of the Meteorological Department, dated the 14th instant, states that rain has fallen over Burma, Assam, Northern Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and in the north of the Central Provinces, as well as along the west coast and in Madras.

Harvesting continues, with poor outturns, in four districts of the Madras Presidency; the recent rains have revived the standing crops and sowings are also being vigorously pushed on. Kharif sowings are retarded in places in the Bombay Presidency for want of rain; elsewhere prospects are favourable. In the Punjab, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the Central India States, and the Berars the kharif crops are in good condition. In the Central Provinces juari and cotton have been injured in places by the heavy rain which also retarded weeding. In Bengal early rice and jute are being harvested, with an estimated average outturn. In Assam the reaping of aus and the transplanting of sali crops continue.

Cholera and small-pox are generally prevalent in all provinces, but the public health is on the whole good.

In Bengal the price of rice is rising slightly; elsewhere prices are generally stationary.

3. The votes of the subscribers have affirmed the resolution passed at the General Meeting of the 28th January last, respecting the proposal to transfer the Fund to the Government. The following votes were recorded:—

	For.	Against.
Active subscribers in India	259	9
Ditto in England	43	2
Annuitants	182	1
Total ...	484	12

The matter being one of great importance to the Service, the Managers are anxious to have the benefit, in dealing with it, of the advice and assistance of their late colleague Mr. Westland. They propose therefore to defer making any communication regarding it to the Government until Mr. Westland's return to India, which will probably take place in the middle of September next.

4. The proposed grant of a good service pension to Mr. J. Wetherill was also confirmed, 213 subscribers having voted for, and 3 against the proposal.

5. The Managers have under Article XVI announced their intention to propose—

"That they be authorised, in accordance with the opinion of Counsel, to refund to Mrs. Bruce Lane, with interest at 5 per cent., the subscriptions paid by her to keep up her late husband's interest in the Fund."

The facts of the case, which was one of considerable difficulty, are fully set forth in the appendix to this report, from which it will be seen that the Managers felt themselves obliged to consult Counsel as to the powers of the subscribers to deal with the matter. In the opinion of Mr. Evans Mrs. Bruce Lane can never participate in the benefits of the Fund. The Managers have made a communication in accordance with this opinion to Mrs. Lane, and desire now to obtain the sanction of the subscribers to the refund, with interest, of the subscription paid by Mrs. Lane to keep alive her late husband's interest in the Fund.

6. Mr. W. C. Plowden has incurred the penalty prescribed by Article XXXVII of the Rules by failure, for more than one year, to pay the necessary subscriptions to the Fund. Mr. Plowden states that the omission was entirely due to misapprehension, as he believed that deductions on account of Fund subscriptions were being made from his allowance by the India Office. Arrears of subscription, together with interest at 8 per cent., as required by the Rules, have now been paid, and the Managers recommend Mr. Plowden's case to the favourable consideration of the Meeting.

Mr. H. Lushington has incurred the penalty prescribed by Article XXXVII of the Rules, by his omission, for more than one year, to pay the necessary subscriptions to the Fund on his annuity. Mr. Lushington states that he was not aware of the existence of Article XXXVII, and that he supposed that "in the absence of any machinery for collecting the subscriptions of annuitants in this country, all arrears, if any, due by subscribers at home, after decease would be deducted from the pensions of widows and children." Mr. Lushington has now paid all arrears of subscription, together with interest at 8 per cent., as required by the Rules, and the Managers recommend his case to the favourable consideration of the Meeting.

Mr. J. H. Prinsep has incurred the penalty prescribed by Article XXXVII of the Rules by failure, for more than one year, to pay subscriptions to the Fund on his annuity. Mr. Prinsep states that he has been under the impression that the amount deducted by the India Office from his quarterly annuity represented both deductions on account of income tax and subscriptions to the Civil Fund. Mr. Prinsep has now paid all arrears of subscription, together with interest at 8 per cent. as required by the Rules, and the Managers recommend his case to the favourable consideration of the Meeting.

Mr. C. Steer has incurred the penalty prescribed by Article XXXVII of the Rules by his omission, for more than one year, to pay subscriptions to the Fund on his annuity. Mr. Steer states that the omission was due to an oversight. All arrears of subscription, together with interest at 8 per cent., as required by the Rules, have now been paid by Mr. Steer, and the Managers recommend his case to the favourable consideration of the Meeting.

Mr. R. D. Hime, who retired on an invalid annuity, with effect from the 8th September 1881, has incurred the penalty prescribed by Article XXXVII of the Rules by his omission, for more than one year, to pay subscriptions to the Fund. Mr. Hime states that owing to his ignorance of the Rules, he was not aware that he could obtain any benefits from the Fund either immediately or prospectively, owing to the fact that at the time of his retirement he had neither wife nor child. Having married again, he is anxious to secure, if possible, the benefits of the Fund to his wife and to any children whom he may leave at his death. As all arrears of subscription, together with interest at 8 per cent., have now been paid by Mr. Hime, the Managers recommend his case to the favourable consideration of the Meeting.

7. An application has been received from Mrs. C. Chapman, widow of Mr. C. Chapman, for an increase to the pension of her son, Mr. Edmund Frere Chapman, who is incapacitated from earning his own livelihood. Mrs. Chapman on a former occasion requested that her son's name might be allowed to continue on the list of incumbents after he had attained the age of 21 years, and the Managers granted the request. This circumstance was reported in the proceedings of the General Meeting of the 29th January 1883, and was confirmed by the subscribers present. Mrs. Chapman now states that her son's mental condition is such as to necessitate his being placed under the charge of a medical man at great expense. The Managers, taking into consideration the fact that Mrs. Chapman is dependent entirely on her pension, and that the cost of the maintenance of her son exceeds £100 a year have, under the powers vested in them by Article XXIX of the Rules, granted, until further orders, the full pension of £150 a year to Mr. E. F. Chapman.

8. In accordance with Article XXII of the Rules, the Managers have to report that the Hon'ble Mr. Justice O'Kinealy having on his departure from India on leave resigned his office as an elected Manager, they have elected the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beverley to fill the vacancy thus caused.

Proposed by Mr. Lyall, seconded by Mr. Logan, and carried unanimously—

That the Managers' proceedings in admitting the families of the late Messrs. H. Armstrong, Russell M. Skinner, J. Samuel Armstrong, Sir Edward Clive Bayley, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., and Mr. J. H. Carter to the benefits of the Fund be confirmed.

Proposed by Mr. Collier, seconded by Mr. Atkinson, and carried unanimously—

That the Managers be authorized, in accordance with the opinion of Counsel and, subject to the approval of the Service, to sanction the refund, with interest, of the subscriptions paid by Mrs. Lane to keep alive her late husband's interest in the Fund.

Proposed by Mr. Cotton, seconded by Mr. Logan, and carried unanimously—

That Messrs. W. C. Plowden, H. Lushington, J. H. Prinsep, C. Steer, and R. D. Hime be restored to the rights of subscribers.

Proposed by Mr. Logan, seconded by Mr. Lyall, and carried unanimously—

That the action of the Managers in allowing Mr. E. F. Chapman to draw the full pension of £150 a year, until futher orders, be approved and confirmed.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman was proposed by Mr. Harrison, seconded by Mr. Justice Tottenham, and carried unanimously.

C. L. PEEL.

The Indian Civil Service Family Pension Regulations, established under the orders of the Secretary of State for India, for the provision of pensions for the widows and orphans of covenanted civilians in the service of the Government of India.

The following regulations are designed to secure suitable provisions for the widows and orphans of members of the Covenanted Indian Civil Service not being subscribers to the Bengal, Madras, or Bombay Civil Funds.

The Secretary of State for India in Council reserves to himself the absolute right to regulate from time to time the contributions to be required from Civil Servants under these regulations, and to make any alterations in the regulations themselves that may appear to him equitable: provided always that the scale of pensions fixed thereby shall not be reduced in the case of actual incumbents. The Secretary of State in Council will endeavour to adjust the contributions to be levied from officers exactly, so that they shall neither be too large nor too small to supply the pensions provided for by these regulations. But if it should appear on experience that they have been fixed too low, the Government will not require any supplementary retrospective payments; and if they are found to have been fixed too high, no claim to refund will be admitted.

No insurance fund is established by these regulations. The contributions will be credited and the pensions charged directly to the Indian revenues as civil receipts and charges. But in order to adjust the rates of contribution from time to time to what is necessary to supply the pensions provided for by these regulations, and no more, a separate pro formâ account will be kept of all contributions levied and all payments made under these regulations, and of the interest which would have been allowed upon such contributions if a mutual insurance fund had actually been established.

In accordance with the principle announced in this notification, that the Government does not intend that the pensions provided by these regulations shall bring any charge on the Indian revenues in excess of the amount specially sanctioned for the purpose, the rates of interest and of exchange with England, to be allowed in this pro formâ account, will be the rates which may be fixed from time to time by the Secretary of State in Council, upon a consideration of the market rates of the day. For the present the rates to be used are 4½ per cent. interest, and 1s. 8*d*. per rupee exchange; and the contributions now prescribed have been calculated at these rates.

All needful statistics of ages, births, deaths, and marriages will be carefully registered, and these statistics, with the pro formâ accounts, will be submitted at such periods as may be determined by the Secretary of State in Council to such actuary or actuaries as he may select, with instructions to investigate and ascertain whether the rates of contribution are such as will, at the rate of interest and exchange then to be reconsidered and refixed, supply the pensions payable under these regulations, and no more. The expense of such actuarial inquiries and reports shall be debited in the pro formâ accounts reported upon.

Upon the report of the actuary or actuaries the Secretary of State in Council will order any necessary alterations in the rates of contribution.

The report of the actuary or actuaries, with the orders of the Secretary of State in Council thereupon, shall be published in the Gazette of India, and no alteration ordered in the rates of contribution will take effect before the beginning of the month following the date of such publication. No retrospective adjustments will be made.

The benefits provided at the cost of the State are shown in the regulations; but should it at any time appear from a valuation that the aggregate liabilities on account of those benefits, when the pension list shall have reached a normal state, will exceed 35,000*l.* per annum, they will be subject to such reduction as may be necessary to restrict the annual assistance to 35,000*l.* per annum, but the reduction shall in no case affect the benefits payable to incumbent annuitants.

REGULATIONS FOR THE PROVISION OF PENSIONS FOR THE WIDOWS AND ORPHANS OF COVENANTED CIVILIANS IN THE SERVICE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

Every covenanted civil servant, not being entitled to the benefits of any of the late Civil Funds, must, as a condition of his appointment, make the contributions and payments prescribed by these regulations according to his class, whether he is married or unmarried, and with or without children. RESOLUTION.—In the Notification published by the Director General of Post Offices on 1st November 1877, in which [illegible] the introduction of the "value-payable" system in respect of inland parcels was announced, it was intimated that "the system of 'value-payable' parcels would shortly be extended to 'overland parcels' booked in London for India."

2. This intimation called forth a protest from the Calcutta Trades Association contained in a letter from the Secretary to the Association addressed to the Director General of Post Offices, dated 8th December 1877, in which objections to the intended extension of the system to overland parcels were set forth, and it was stated that the Association would prefer to "see the entire scheme abandoned rather than it should be adopted in its present objectionable form." This letter was laid before the Government of India by the Director General of Post Offices.

3. The Secretary, Calcutta Trades Association, then addressed a letter, dated 23rd February 1878, to the Government of India. In this it was stated that the Committee of the Association were of opinion that the requirements of the general public were fully met, so far as Government is justified in providing for them, by the facilities of procuring goods from England by the overland parcel post, and of paying for them by money orders; that it is not a part of the duty of the Government of India to collect bills for traders either within or without the country; that a consideration of the broad principles involved had led the Committee to alter the opinion previously expressed in favour of the introduction of the scheme as regards inland parcels; and that the Committee would now prefer to see the scheme abandoned in its entirety. It was also stated that serious injury would be caused to the interests of those engaged in trade in India.

4. The opinions of other representative bodies were then obtained on the question whether the extension of the system to overland parcels would or would not be a boon to the public.

5. The results of this enquiry were announced, and the opinion of the Government of India on the whole question was stated in the Resolution read in the preamble, which was published in the Gazette of India, dated 12th October 1878. With the exception of the Chamber of Commerce, Madras, and the Trades Associations of Madras and Bombay, which supported the view of the Trades Association, Calcutta, all the representative bodies consulted, including the Chambers of Commerce of Bengal and Bombay, approved of the proposed extension. The remarks of the several Trades Associations and Chambers of Commerce were invited on the Resolution, with special reference to the opinion expressed by the Bombay Trades Association that they would be inclined to look with favour on the proposed extension, if the scheme were also extended to parcels booked in India for England as well as to parcels booked in London for India.

6. The Chamber of Commerce, Madras, and the Trades Associations of Calcutta and Madras replied to this Resolution by intimating that their former views were adhered to, and advancing further arguments in support of those views. The Calcutta Trades Association also intimated that their views were shared by 177 Mofussil firms whom they had consulted. The Bombay Trades Association did not reply.

7. The Government of India believed the idea to be unfounded, that Indian tradesmen who dealt in foreign goods would be injured by the extension of the value-payable system to overland parcels. But the whole value-payable scheme, both inland and foreign, being at that time new, it was thought better to drop for the time being the foreign branch of it, to which objection was taken.

8. Since that decision further experience has been gained in the inland value-payable system. The following table shows the number and value of articles transmitted by value-payable post since the introduction of the system:—

Year.	Number.	Value.
		Rs.
1877-78	413	6,721
1878-79	7,408	1,32,109
1879-80	25,589	3,40,857
1880-81	49,389	5,76,574
1881-82	99,416	10,80,543
1883-84	2,64,266	25,07,649

9. These figures conclusively prove the growing appreciation of the value-payable post, both by the general public and by tradesmen. The Governor General in Council is disposed to think that the opposition formerly shown to the scheme may prove to have been modified by the experience which has been gained of the working of the inland value-payable system, and that, in so far as the extension of the system to the overland parcel post would facilitate the importation of small objects of European manufacture into India, the measure, while not injurious to tradesmen, would be of great advantage and convenience to the general public. It is believed that the German Post Office now exchanges annually more than a million value-payable articles with other countries, and that it also has an Agency in England. There seems to be no reason why similar facilities should not exist between India and England.

10. Before, however, proceeding further in the matter, the Governor General in Council desires to ascertain the present state of public opinion on the subject.

11. He therefore directs that this Resolution be published in the Gazette of India, and that it be communicated—

(a) to all Local Governments and Administrations, with the request that they will consult representative bodies and individuals in their respective jurisdictions, and send copies of the replies, together with their own opinion, on the proposal;

(b) to the Chambers of Commerce and the Trades Associations of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, with the request that they will communicate their opinion on the proposal; and

(c) to the Director General of the Post Offices of India.

*Prepayment of Reply.

Rule 37.—The sender of a message can prepay a reply, depositing for this purpose a sum not less than eight annas and not more than two rupees, and not including any fraction of an anna, but the message to which a reply is prepaid must not be addressed to more than one person. On depositing the corresponding sum, the sender can add (free) the words Reply paid or Answer paid and the amount to which he wishes the reply to be limited. The terminal station pays to the receiver in telegraph or postage stamps, or in money, the amount prepaid, leaving it to him to send his answer how, when and to what address he pleases, or not to send one at all. The reply if sent is considered in every respect as a fresh message.

When a message to which a reply is prepaid is addressed to a station where there is no Telegraph Office, the amount is forwarded to destination from the nearest Government Telegraph Office in postage stamps in an insured cover; the sender must accordingly prepay the postal insurance fee (two annas).

Should it be impossible to effect delivery of a Reply paid message, the terminal station sends a service telegram to that effect to the sender, and the amount deposited will be refunded on application being made to the Telegraph Check Office, Calcutta.

It should be distinctly understood that it is not compulsory on the addressee to send a reply. The duty of the terminal station consists simply in paying to him in stamps or in money the amount prepaid, leaving him at liberty to do what he pleases with it.

* The sender of a State message addressed to a Government official may not prepay a reply; and in the case of a State message addressed to other than a Government official, any sum deposited by the sender under this rule must be intended for no other purpose than to cover the cost of a return telegram.

CHAPTER III.

TAXATION.

General Provisions.

Taxes which may be imposed.

39. (1) Subject to any general rules or special orders which the Governor General in Council may make in this behalf, and to any rules made by the Local Government under this Act, a committee may, from time to time, for the purposes of this Act, and in the manner by this Act directed, impose in the whole or any part of the municipality any of the following taxes, namely:—

(A) with the previous sanction of the Local Government—

(a) a tax on buildings and lands either—

(i) not exceeding in any municipalities which may be constituted at the places specified in the schedule hereto annexed 10 per cent., and elsewhere 7½ per cent., on the annual value; or

(ii) not exceeding in the said municipalities one anna four pies, and elsewhere one anna, per square yard of the ground area; or

(iii) not exceeding in the said municipalities four rupees, and elsewhere three rupees, per running foot of frontage in streets or bázárs;

(b) a tax on persons practising any profession or art or carrying on any trade or calling in the municipality;

(c) a tax on all or any vehicles, boats, animals used for riding, driving, draught or burden, and dogs, kept within the municipality;

(d) a tax on vehicles and animals used as aforesaid entering the municipality;

(e) a tax on menial and domestic servants;

(f) an octroi on animals for slaughter or goods or both brought within the octroi-limits for consumption or use therein; and

(B) with the previous sanction of the Local Government and of the Governor General in Council, any other tax.

(2) In this section, "annual value" means the gross annual rent for which buildings and lands liable to taxation may reasonably be expected to let, and in the case of houses, may be expected to let unfurnished:

Provided that, in the case of land assessed to land-revenue or of which the land-revenue has been wholly or in part released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned, if the Local Government so directs, the annual value shall be deemed to be double the aggregate of the following amounts, namely:—

(a) the amount of the land-revenue for the time being assessed on the land, whether such assessment is leviable or not; or, when the land-revenue has been wholly or in part compounded for or redeemed, the amount which, but for such composition or redemption, would have been leviable; and

(b) when the improvement of the land due to canal irrigation has been excluded from account in assessing the land-revenue, the amount of the owner's rate or water-advantage rate or other rate imposed in respect of such improvement.

Scavenging-tax.

40. When a committee has, in exercise of the powers conferred by this Act, provided for the performance, with regard to any buildings or lands, by its agents of the duties usually performed by sweepers, it may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, in the manner by this Act directed, impose upon those buildings and lands, in addition to any other tax imposed upon them under this Act, a tax to be called the scavenging-tax, at such rate or of such amount as it thinks fit:

Provided that in fixing the rate or amount regard shall be had to the principle that the total net proceeds of the tax should not exceed the cost of the performance of the said duties.

Water-tax.

41. (1) Besides the taxes mentioned in the foregoing sections, a committee, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, may, for the purpose of constructing or maintaining works for the supply of water to the municipality or paying the principal or interest of any loan raised for the construction of such works, impose, in the manner by this Act directed, a tax, to be called the water-tax, upon buildings or lands which are so situated that their occupiers can benefit by the works.

(2) The rate or amount of the tax so imposed on different buildings or lands may be determined with reference, among other considerations, to their distance from the nearest point at which the water is deliverable by the works and to their level; but in fixing it regard shall be had to the principle that the total net proceeds of the tax, with the estimated income from payments for water supplied from the works under special contracts, should not exceed the amount required for the said purposes.

Procedure in imposing taxes.

42. (1) A committee may, at a special meeting, pass a resolution to propose the imposition of any tax under section 39, section 40, or section 41.

(2) When such a resolution has been passed, the committee shall publish a notice, defining the class of persons or description of property proposed to be taxed, the amount or rate of the tax to be imposed and the system of assessment to be adopted.

(3) Any inhabitant objecting to the proposed tax may, within thirty days from the publication of the notice, submit his objection in writing to the committee; and the committee shall, at a special meeting, take his objection into consideration.

(4) If no such objection is received within the said period of thirty days, or if such objection, having been considered as aforesaid, is deemed insufficient, the committee may forward its proposals to the Local Government, with the objections (if any) which have been submitted as aforesaid, and its decision thereupon.

(5) The Local Government, on receiving such proposals, may sanction the same, or refuse to sanction them, or return them to the committee for further consideration.

(6) When the Local Government sanctions any such proposals which require the further sanction of the Governor General in Council, it shall submit the same to the Governor General in Council, with the objections (if any) received through the committee; and the Governor General in Council may sanction the proposals, or refuse to sanction them, or return them to the Local Government for further consideration.

(7) When the proposals of a committee have been sanctioned by the Local Government, or by the Local Government and the Governor General in Council, as the case may be, the committee may, at a special meeting, direct the imposition of the tax in accordance with such proposals.

(8) In giving such direction the committee shall fix a date from which the tax shall come into force:

Provided that—

(a) no tax shall come into force until it has been notified;

(b) no tax leviable by the year shall come into force except at the commencement of the year by which it is leviable; and

(c) no other tax shall come into force less than six months from the date of the meeting at which its imposition is directed.

(9) A notification of the imposition of a tax under this Act shall be conclusive evidence that the tax has been imposed in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

Power to abolish or reduce tax.

43. A committee may, by a resolution passed at a special meeting and confirmed by the Local Government, abolish or reduce in amount any tax imposed under the foregoing sections.

Power to exempt from taxation.

44. (1) A committee may exempt, in whole or in part, from the payment of any such tax any person who by reason of poverty may in its opinion be unable to pay the same.

(2) A committee may, by resolution passed at a special meeting and confirmed by the Local Government, and the Local Government may by order, exempt in whole or in part from the payment of any such tax any person or class of persons or any property of description of property.

Power for Local Government to suspend levy of tax.

45. (1) If at any time it appears to the Local Government, on complaint made or otherwise, that any tax imposed under the foregoing sections is unfair in its incidence, or that the levy thereof or of any part thereof is injurious to the interests of the general public, it may require the committee to take within a specified period measures to remove the objection; and if within that period the requirement is not complied with to the satisfaction of the Local Government, the Local Government may by notification suspend the levy of the tax or of such part thereof until the objection has been removed.

(2) The Local Government may at any time, by notification, rescind any such suspension.

Taxes not invalid for defect of form.

46. No tax imposed under this Act shall be invalid merely for defect of form; and it shall be enough in any such tax on property, or any assessment of value for the purpose of any such tax, if the property taxed or assessed is so described as to be generally known; and it shall not be necessary to name the owner or occupier thereof.

Taxes when payable.

47. Any tax imposed under the foregoing sections and payable periodically shall be payable on such dates and in such instalments (if any) as the committee, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, may, by rule, from time to time direct.

Receipts to be given.

48. For all sums paid on account of any tax under this Act, a receipt, stating the amount and the tax on account of which it is paid, shall be given by the person receiving the same, on request by the person making the payment.

Appeals against taxation.

49. (1) An appeal against the assessment or levy of any tax under this Act shall lie to the Deputy Commissioner, unless he is a member of the committee, in which case the appeal shall lie to the Commissioner or other officer empowered by the Local Government in this behalf.

(2) If, on the hearing of an appeal under this section, any question as to the liability to, or the principle of, assessment of, a tax arises, on which the officer hearing the appeal entertains reasonable doubt, he may, either of his own motion or on the application of any person interested, draw up a statement of the facts of the case and the point on which doubt is entertained, and refer the statement with his own opinion on the point for the decision of the Chief Court.

(3) On a reference being made under sub-section (2) the subsequent proceedings in the case shall be, as nearly as may be, in conformity with the rules relating to references to the High Court contained in Chapter XLVI of the Code of Civil Procedure. XIV of 1882

Limitation of appeal.

50. (1) No appeal shall lie in respect of a tax on any land or building, unless it is preferred within one month after the publication of the notice prescribed by section 56, and no appeal shall lie in respect of any other tax unless it is preferred within one month from the time when the demand for the tax is made:

Provided that an appeal may be admitted after the expiration of the period prescribed therefor by this section if the appellant satisfies the officer before whom the appeal is preferred that he had sufficient cause for not presenting the appeal within that period.

(2) No appeal shall be entertained unless the amount of the tax to which it relates is deposited with the committee before the appeal is preferred.

Taxation not to be questioned except under this Act.

51. No objection shall be taken to any valuation or assessment, nor shall the liability of any person to be assessed or taxed be questioned, in any other manner or by any other authority than in this Act is provided.

Taxes leviable under Act IV of 1873 to be deemed to be taxes under this Act.

52. All taxes leviable in any local area under the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, at the time when a committee having authority over that local area comes into existence under this Act IV of 1873.

Panjáb Municipal Act, 1883.
(Chapter III.—Taxation.—Sections 53-61.)

shall, so far as their imposition and assessment are consistent with this Act and within the powers conferred thereby, be deemed to have been imposed and assessed under this Act.

Taxes on Immoveable Property.

Preparation of assessment-lists.

53. (1) The committee shall cause an assessment-list of all buildings and lands on which any tax is imposed to be prepared, containing—

(a) the name of the street or division in which the property is situate;

(b) the designation of the property, either by name or by number, sufficient for identification;

(c) the names of the owner and occupier, if known;

(d) the annual value, area or length of frontage on which the property is assessed; and

(e) the amount of the tax assessed thereon by the committee.

(2) For the purpose of preparing the list, the committee may require the owners or occupiers of the buildings or lands to furnish it with returns of the measurements and of the rent or annual value.

Publication of notice of assessments.

54. When the assessment-list has been completed, the committee shall give public notice thereof, and of the place where the list or a copy thereof may be inspected; and every person claiming to be either owner or occupier of property included in the list, or the agent of any such person, shall be at liberty to inspect the list and to make extracts therefrom without charge.

Public notice of time fixed for revising assessment-list.

55. (1) The committee shall at the same time give public notice of a time, not less than one month from the publication of the notice, when it will proceed to revise the valuation and assessment; and in all cases in which any property is for the first time assessed, or the assessment thereof is increased, it shall also give notice thereof to the owner or occupier of the property.

(2) All objections to the valuation and assessment shall be made in writing before the time fixed in the notice or orally or in writing at that time.

Settlement of list.

56. (1) After the objections have been enquired into and the persons making them have been allowed an opportunity of being heard either in person or by authorized agent as they think fit and the revision of the valuation and assessment has been completed, the amendments made in the list shall be authenticated by the signatures of not less than two members of the committee, who shall at the same time certify that no valid objection has been made to the valuation and assessment contained in the list, except in the cases in which amendments have been entered therein; and, subject to such amendments as may thereafter be duly made, the tax so assessed shall be deemed to be the tax for the whole year by which it is leviable next following that in which the assessment is made.

(2) The list when amended under this section shall be deposited in the committee's office, and shall there be open during office-hours to all owners and occupiers of property comprised therein, and a public notice that it is so open shall forthwith be published.

Further amendments of assessment-list.

57. (1) The committee may at any time amend the list by inserting the name of any person whose name ought to be inserted, or by inserting any property which ought to have been inserted, or by altering the assessment on any property which has been insufficiently valued or assessed through mistake, oversight or fraud, after giving notice, to any person interested in the amendment, of a time, not less than one month from the date of service of such notice, at which the amendment is to be made.

(2) Any person interested in any such amendment may tender his objection to the committee in writing before the time fixed in the notice, or orally or in writing at that time, and shall be allowed an opportunity of being heard in support of the same in person or by authorized agent as he thinks fit.

New list need not be prepared every year.

58. It shall be in the discretion of the committee to prepare a new assessment-list every year; or to adopt the valuation and assessment contained in the list for any year, with such alterations as may in particular cases be deemed necessary, as the valuation and assessment for the year following, giving the same notice of the valuation and assessment as if a new assessment-list had been prepared.

Remission of tax on unoccupied immoveable property.

59. (1) When a tax payable under section 39, sub-section (1), clause (a), or under section 40 or section 41, is payable in one sum in respect of an entire year, and the property in respect of which it is payable is unoccupied throughout the year, or when such a tax is payable in instalments and the property is unoccupied throughout the period in respect of which an instalment is payable, the amount payable in respect of the property for the year, or the instalment, as the case may be, shall be remitted:

Provided that it shall be in the discretion of the committee to direct that no remission shall be granted unless notice in writing of the vacancy has been given to it within such time from the beginning of the year or of the period as it may, from time to time, fix in this behalf.

(2) When in any case not provided for by the foregoing part of this section a building in respect of which a tax is payable under section 39, sub-section (1), clause (a), or under section 40 or section 41, is wholly or in greater part demolished or destroyed by fire or otherwise, the committee may remit such proportion of the tax as it thinks equitable.

Taxes on immoveable property by whom payable.

60. (1) A tax payable under section 39, sub-section (1), clause (a), shall be paid by the owner of the property in respect of which it is payable.

(2) A tax payable under section 40 or section 41 shall be paid by the occupier of the property in respect of which it is payable.

Recovery of taxes payable by owner.

61. (1) When any sum is due on account of a tax payable under this Act in respect of any property by the owner thereof, the committee shall cause a bill for the amount, stating the property and the period for which the charge is made, to be presented to the person liable to pay the same.

(2) If the bill is not paid within ten days from the presentation thereof, the committee may cause a notice of demand to be served on that person; and if he does not, within seven days from the service of the notice, pay the sum due, with any fee leviable for the notice, or show sufficient cause for non-payment, the sum due, with the fee, shall be deemed to be an arrear of tax.

(3) The amount of every such arrear, besides being recoverable in any other manner provided by this Act, shall, subject to any claim on behalf of Her Majesty, be a first charge on the property in respect of which it is payable, and shall be recoverable, on application made in this behalf by the committee to the Deputy Commissioner, as if the property were an estate assessed to land-revenue and the arrear were an arrear of such revenue due thereon:

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall authorize the arrest of a defaulter.

Octroi and Tolls.

Power to search where octroi is leviable.

62. If any person, bringing or receiving a conveyance or package within the octroi-limits of a municipality in which octroi is leviable, refuses, on the demand of an officer authorized by the committee in this behalf, to permit the officer to inspect the contents of the conveyance or package for the purpose of ascertaining whether it contains any articles in respect of which octroi is payable, the officer may cause the conveyance or package to be taken without unnecessary delay before a Magistrate, who shall cause the inspection to be made in his presence.

Power to examine article liable to octroi.

63. Every person bringing or receiving within the octroi-limits of any municipality any article on which octroi is payable shall, when required by any officer authorized by the committee in this behalf, and so far as may be necessary for ascertaining the amount of tax chargeable,—

(a) permit that officer to inspect, examine, weigh and otherwise deal with the article; and

(b) communicate to that officer any information and exhibit to him any bill, invoice or document of a like nature he may possess relating to the article.

Presentation of bill for octroi.

64. Every officer demanding octroi by the authority of the committee shall tender to every person introducing or receiving any article on which the tax is claimed a bill specifying the article taxable, the amount claimed and the rate at which the tax is calculated.

Recovery of octroi and tolls.

65. (1) In case of non-payment of any octroi or of any toll on demand, the officer empowered to collect the same may seize any article on which the octroi is chargeable, or any vehicle or animal on which the toll is chargeable, or any part of its burden of sufficient value to satisfy the demand.

(2) The committee may cause any property so seized, or so much thereof as is necessary, to be sold by auction to satisfy the demand, with the expenses occasioned by the seizure, custody and sale thereof, unless the demand and expenses are in the meantime paid, after the lapse of five days from the seizure, and after the issue of a proclamation fixing the time and place of sale:

Provided that, by order of the president or a vice-president, articles of a perishable nature which could not be kept for five days without serious risk of damage may be sold after the lapse of such shorter time as he may, having regard to the nature of the articles, think proper.

Power to lease the collection of octroi or tolls.

(2) All property vested in Her Majesty under sub-section (1) shall be applied under the orders of the Local Government to discharging the liabilities imposed on the Secretary of State for India in Council under that sub-section, or for the promotion of the safety, health, welfare or convenience of the inhabitants of the local area.

168. PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 9 OF 1884.

A Bill to legalize the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of certain functions assigned to the Governor General in Council.

WHEREAS certain functions which are by enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces assigned to the Governor General in Council are in practice discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those Provinces, and it is expedient that these functions should continue to be so discharged, and that their discharge in the past should be legalized;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Transfer to Lieutenant-Governor of certain functions of Governor General in Council.

The sections of the enactments hereto scheduled which are specified in the third column of the schedule shall have effect, and, so far as may be necessary to validate anything heretofore done under them by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, shall be deemed to have had effect, as if the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces were therein referred to instead of the Governor General in Council.

THE SCHEDULE.

(a) Regulations of the Bengal Code.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
V of 1799	To limit the interference of the Zilá and City Courts of Díwání Adálat in the execution of wills and administration to the estates of persons dying intestate.	7
II of 1800	For laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Gházipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty.	10 & 14
IX of 1832	To modify certain portions of Regulation VII of 1832 and Regulation IV of 1828; to provide for the more speedy and satisfactory decision of judicial questions cognizable by officers of Revenue employed in making settlements under the above Regulations; for enforcing the production of the village accounts; for the more extensive employment of native agency in the Revenue Department; and to declare the intent of section 5, Regulation VII of 1822, touching claims to málikána.	16, 17 & 25

(b) Act of the Governor General in Council.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
XII of 1856.	To amend the law respecting the employment of amíns of the Civil Courts in the Presidency of Fort William.	2

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER certain enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces certain functions are assigned to the Governor General in Council, which in practice are now discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those provinces. Thus, by sections 10 and 14 of Bengal Regulation XXXIII of 1800 (for laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Ghâzipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty), the Governor General in Council is empowered to sanction the allowances and establishment of the dâroghas of the stone-quarries referred to, to fix the rate of duty payable in respect of stone excavated from those quarries, and to make further rules respecting the quarries. As these quarries have now become Provincial both financially and administratively, they have long been under the control of the Local Government, which has been in the habit of exercising the powers above noticed, though they are by law assigned to the Governor General in Council.

2. As the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of these and similar functions assigned by other enactments to the Governor General in Council, though in accordance with existing administrative arrangements, would seem to be of doubtful legality, the present Bill has been prepared with the object of empowering the Lieutenant-Governor to continue to discharge these functions in the future and legalizing their discharge by him in the past.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 10 OF 1884.*

A Bill to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882; It is hereby enacted as follows :— IV of 1882.

1. For the fifth clause of section 1 of the said Act the following shall be substituted, namely :— Amendment of section 1 of Act IV of 1882.

"And any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette,—

"(a) exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, any part of the territories administered by such Local Government from all or any of the following provisions, namely :—

"Sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one-hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three; or

"(b) direct, either retrospectively or prospectively, that section forty-one shall not apply throughout any part of those territories to any property in which a member of any race, sect, tribe or class specified in the notification is interested."

2. The following clause shall be deemed to have been added to the first section of the said Act from the date on which it came into force, namely :— Addition to same section.

"Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing part of this section, sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall not extend or be extended to any district or tract of country excluded from the operation of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, under the power conferred by the first section of that Act or otherwise." III of 1877.

3. To section 4 of the said Act the following shall be added, namely :— Addition to section 4 of same Act.

"And sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall be read as supplemental to the Indian Registration Act, 1877." III of 1877.

4. In section 69 of the said Act— Amendment of section 69 of same Act.

(a) after the words "is valid in the following cases" the words "and in no others" shall be inserted; and

(b) after the words "Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist," in both places where they occur, there shall be inserted the words "or a member of any other race, sect, tribe or class from time to time specified by the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, in the local official Gazette in this behalf."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE last clause of section 1 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, provides that any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, throughout the whole or any part of the territories administered by such Local Government, the members of any race, sect, tribe or class from all or any of the following provisions, namely, sections 41, 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3), 59, 69, 107 and 123.

54. * * Such transfer, in the case of tangible immoveable property of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards, or in the case of a reversion or other intangible thing, can be made only by a registered instrument.

In the case of tangible immoveable property of a value less than one hundred rupees, such transfer may be made either by a registered instrument or by delivery of the property.

59. Where the principal money secured is one hundred rupees or upwards, a mortgage can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses.

Where the principal money secured is less than one hundred rupees, a mortgage may be effected either by an instrument signed and attested as aforesaid, or (except in the case of a simple mortgage) by delivery of the property.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to render invalid mortgages made in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchi and Rangoon, by delivery to a creditor or his agent of documents of title to immoveable property, with intent to create a security thereon.

107. A lease of immoveable property from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year, or reserving a yearly rent, can be made only by a registered instrument.

All other leases of immoveable property may be made either by an instrument or by oral agreement.

123. For the purpose of making a gift of immoveable property, the transfer must be effected by a registered instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor, and attested by at least two witnesses.

For the purpose of making a gift of moveable property, the transfer may be effected either by a registered instrument signed as aforesaid or by delivery.

Such delivery may be made in the same way as goods sold may be delivered.

2. In a letter, dated the 6th September, 1882, the Chief Commissioner of Assam asked for an expression of opinion from the Government of India as to the effect which the exemption under that clause, of "any race, sect, tribe or class" from the provisions of section 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3) and sections 59, 107 and 123, which are set out on the margin, has upon transactions, one of the parties concerned in which is a member of such race, sect, tribe or class, while the other party does not belong to an exempted class.

3. To this reference the Government of India, on the 13th December, 1882, replied that the precise manner in which the exemption would operate under the circumstances described was a matter of some difficulty; and the only satisfactory means by which an intelligible operation might be given to section 1 of the Act seemed to be the amendment of that section so as to make the exemption from sections 54, 59, 107 and 123 local and not personal.

4. The Chief Commissioner, in a letter dated 12th January, 1883, suggested as an alternative, and in his opinion a preferable one, a power to exempt not persons or places but transactions in which one or both of the parties might be members of the race, sect, tribe or class for which the sections in question might be deemed unsuitable.

5. It was thought desirable to obtain the opinions of the other Local Governments on the two alternative proposals thus put forward, and accordingly, on the 7th May, 1883, a circular was issued for this purpose.

6. It will be observed that the question thus raised was confined to the power conferred by section 1 of the Act to exempt from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123; but, attention having been once drawn to the subject, it was natural that the effect of an exemption from the other two sections of the Act (41 and 69) mentioned in section 1 and set out in the margin should also be considered; and, on looking into the matter, it was found that, while an exemption under either of those sections would give rise to questions very similar to those raised by the Chief Commissioner of Assam in the case of the sections referred to by him, there was this further difficulty in regard to section 69 that the object of allowing any power to exempt from it was not apparent. The circular accordingly asked for the opinions of the Local Governments in regard to these sections also.

41. Where, with the consent, express or implied, of the persons interested in immoveable property, a person is the ostensible owner of such property and transfers the same for consideration, the transfer shall not be voidable on the ground that the transferor was not authorized to make it: provided that the transferee, after taking reasonable care to ascertain that the transferor had power to make the transfer, has acted in good faith.

69. A power conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee, or on any person on his behalf, to sell or concur in selling, in default of payment of the mortgage-money, the mortgaged property, or any part thereof, without the intervention of the Court, is valid in the following cases (namely)—

(a) where the mortgage is an English mortgage, and neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist;

(b) where the mortgagee is the Secretary of State for India in Council;

(c) where the mortgaged property or any part thereof is situate within the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchi or Rangoon.

But no such power shall be exercised unless and until—

(1) notice in writing requiring payment of the principal money has been served on the mortgagor or one of several mortgagors, and default has been made in payment of the principal money, or of part thereof, for three months after such service; or

(2) some interest under the mortgage amounting at least to five hundred rupees is in arrear and unpaid for three months after becoming due.

When a sale has been made in professed exercise of such a power, the title of the purchaser shall not be impeachable on the ground that no case had arisen to authorise the sale, or that due notice was not given, or that the power was otherwise improperly or irregularly exercised; but any person damnified by an unauthorized, or improper or irregular exercise of the power shall have his remedy in damages against the person exercising the power.

The money which is received by the mortgagee, arising from the sale, after discharge of prior incumbrances, if any, to which the sale is not made subject, or after payment into court under section fifty-seven of a sum to meet any prior incumbrance, shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be held by him in trust to be applied by him, first, in payment of all costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him as incident to the sale or any attempted sale; and, secondly, in discharge of the mortgage-money and costs and other money, if any, due under the mortgage; and the residue of the money so received shall be paid to the person entitled to the mortgaged property or authorized to give receipts for the proceeds of the sale thereof.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to powers conferred before this Act comes into force.

The powers and provisions contained in sections six to nineteen (both inclusive) of the Trustees and Mortgagees' Powers Act, 1866, shall be deemed to apply to English mortgages, wherever in British India the mortgaged property may be situate, when neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist.

7. The replies of the Local Governments have now been received and considered by the Government of India, and the following are the conclusions to which they seem to point.

8. In the first place, as regards the power of exempting from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123, it seems to the Governor General in Council best to make it simply a power of exempting locally, that is to say, the exemption should be absolute and cover transactions relating to any immoveable property within the specified area, whether both or one or none of the parties may belong to those races or tribes for whose benefit the exemption is intended. To give a personal character to the exemption and restrict it, as some suggest, to transactions within the area, to which either both parties or one of the parties are of particular races, would give rise to uncertainty of title and other difficulties and doubts noticed by Sir C. Turner and others. With a local exemption clause of an absolute character an intending purchaser has to look to nothing but the situation of the property.

9. It is true that there may be advanced people living in exempted localities for whom the sections in question would provide a law more suitable than that which prevails where they do not apply, but it must be remembered that these people always could, and Europeans, it is believed, generally would, follow the practice of having formally executed and registered documents, and this would to a great extent give them the benefits aimed at by the Act; for it must be borne in mind that in the places in question titles would not usually be complicated, and in any case the sections of the Act referred to are not an essential part of the law, but merely an improvement of it, which is not in force as yet in great provinces like Bombay, the Panjáb and British Burma. Again, on the other hand, it is true that there may be members of wild tribes settled in some non-exempted localities, and that they may find it difficult to learn to act up to the law; but, as has been observed by some of the authorities consulted, wild people scattered in this way among a population the great mass of which is civilized soon get into the ways of the people among whom they live.

In either case the objection is one that must apply to most of our enacted laws, and indeed to a good deal of the customary law of the country. We cannot get a law that will suit everybody; we must be content with a reasonably close approximation.

10. The first section of the Bill accordingly amends section 1 of the Act so as to empower a Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to exempt any part of the territories under its administration from the operation of any of these sections.

11. Next, as regards the powers to exclude the operation of section 41, the considerations to be borne in mind are fully stated by the Chief Justice of Madras in his opinion.

Sir C. Turner observes that the general rule that no one can confer a higher right in property than he himself possesses in some cases worked obvious hardship; and, as the science of jurisprudence advanced, it was limited by the exception declared in section 41, on the principle that, where one of two innocent persons must suffer from the fraud of a third party, the loss should fall on him who has created or could have prevented the opportunity for the fraud. To races which have not made a substantial progress in civilization, this rule appears to Sir Charles Turner to be unsuited for the following reasons, as stated in his own words:—

"Regarding the question in its sentimental aspect, it is certain that a member of a race unacquainted with the refinements of equity would fail to recognize the justice of a rule which caused him to be deprived of his property by what is ex hypothesi a fraud.

"I do not contend that legislation is to be governed by sentimental considerations, but I have heretofore asserted, and still hold, that legislation should only be so far in advance of the general understanding that its justice should be recognized by the more enlightened.

"There is, however, a substantial reason to be deduced from the rule itself, which shows its inapplicability to uncivilized races. The rule affords protection only to a purchaser for consideration who acts in good faith after reasonable inquiry.

"The imposition of these conditions on the purchaser suggests to persons who have occasion to create an ostensible ownership of their property in others, the prudence of providing certain safeguards. If they are well advised, they are careful to secure evidence of the actual ownership, so that a purchaser, on making due inquiry, must either ascertain the true character of the transaction, or entertain such suspicion of its character that he can no longer assert that he acted in good faith.

"The transactions of uncivilized races in the matter of property are of the simplest character; they are unacquainted with the precautions which technical skill has devised to secure property.

"Again, as society progresses, men are habituated to exercise greater caution in their dealings with their fellows, and have larger opportunities for selecting agents who are reputed either to be worthy of confidence or to be in a position to answer for a breach of confidence. A prudent man selects for an office of trust a person of tried probity and some substance. The uncivilized races have less choice in the selection of agents and less opportunity for forming a judgment of the character and position of their agents."

12. The conclusion to which these remarks seem to point is that the Government should be empowered to direct that section 41 should not apply throughout any particular local are to any property in which a member of any particular race, sect, tribe or class is interested, and it is on these lines that sub-clause (b) of the new fifth clause which the Bill proposes to insert in the first section of the Act has been framed.

13. The discussion regarding section 69 has opened out questions extending beyond the particular difficulty first brought to notice, and it is fortunate that the Government have had in considering them the assistance of Sir C. Turner, who was a member of the Commission by which the Transfer of Property Bill was settled.

The circumstances under which the section was enacted will be found stated in the following extract from his Minute: "

"In England, it is usual to confer on a mortgagee, in case of default, a power to sell the mortgaged property without the intervention of a Court of justice; and, where the instrument of mortgage does not confer the power, but does not in express terms negative it, a mortgagee is empowered by statute to sell on the expiry of twelve months after the date of default and of six months from the date on which notice is given of his intention to exercise the power—23 & 24 Vic., c. 145. This statutory provision was, by Act XXVIII of 1866, extended to mortgages in this country to which the English law is applicable.

"On the other hand, the simple mortgage in India did not authorize a sale without the order of a Court, and by Regulation XVII of 1806 in the Bengal Presidency it had been enacted that a mortgage by conditional sale should not become foreclosed without the service of a notice through the District Court, and on the expiry of a year of grace. Inferring the policy of the legislature from this Regulation, the Sadr Diwáni Adálat refused to give effect to an express power of sale—S. D. A., 1847-354. In the Bombay Presidency, Mr. Justice Melville expressed a doubt whether a private sale of property in the Mufassal, effected by a mortgagee under a power, would be valid—VIII Bombay H. C., A. C., 153.

"On the other hand, I entertained the opinion, and I believe acted on it before the Transfer of Property Act came into operation, that, in the absence of a prohibition of law, the owner of property was competent to confer on a mortgagee what powers he himself possessed, and that, if a mortgagor having, as owner, authority to sell, created a power of sale in a mortgagee, and the mortgagee duly exercised the power, the Courts were bound to recognize the validity of the sale.

"In Bhanoomutty Chowdhain vs. Premchund Nenger, XV B. L. R. 28, property in the Mufassal had been mortgaged by an instrument in the English form containing a power of sale, and subsequently mortgaged to a third party by a conditional sale. The first mortgagee then exercised his power of sale, and subsequently to the sale the second mortgagee took proceedings to foreclose. It was held that the purchaser under the power was entitled to notice of foreclosure, and impliedly that a sale under a power might be valid."

"In this state of the authorities," Sir Charles Turner continues, "it fell to the Law Commission to offer for the acceptance of the legislature a proposal to settle the law. It was felt that, in accordance with the principles of freedom of contract, an owner of property should be at liberty to confer on a mortgagee any of the powers which he could himself exercise, and that a borrower might more readily obtain accommodation, or obtain it on easier terms, if he could offer a security which would be speedily converted by the tender without the delay and the cost of an application to a Court of justice. On the other hand, it was recognized that in this country the large majority of mortgage-securities are created by persons who are poor and illiterate in favour of more sharpwitted creditors, and that, in an agricultural country, landed securities are subject to sudden and excessive variations in value, which are rarely foreseen by borrowers. The Commission came to the conclusion that, while more wealthy borrowers in the country and all borrowers in the presidency-towns might be left to deal with their property as they pleased, it was necessary in the present state of British India to create a legislative safeguard for the poorer classes in the country. They, therefore, proposed that the creation of a power of sale should be declared invalid except in mortgages where the principal money secured exceeded Rs. 500, or in mortgages to the Secretary of State or in mortgages of property in the presidency-towns. In Committee, the section was recast. Instead of declaring that a power of sale conferred by the instrument of mortgage is invalid except in the cases specified, the section, as it now stands, declares that in certain cases it is valid."

Sir Charles Turner adds—

"Unless it be held that the express declaration of the validity of such a power in certain cases is tantamount to a declaration of its invalidity in other cases, which I incline to doubt, the object sought by the Law Commission has not been attained, and the validity of the power in cases other than those specified is still left an open question.

"It may have been desirable that the protection the Law Commission intended to confer in the case of mortgages for small amounts should have been extended to mortgages for somewhat larger sums, but I think it is to be regretted that the amendment should have been effected in such terms as to leave the question doubtful whether any protection is given to mortgages of any class or amount, and I trust advantage may be taken of the opportunity to consider the provisions of the section. It will be seen that the section, as it now stands, ects only—

"(1) parties to an English mortgage, i.e., a mortgage in the English form, who are not Hindús, Muhammadans or Buddhists (an inexact enumeration of the creeds held by natives of India);

"(2) parties to a mortgage to the Secretary of State;

"(3) parties to mortgages of property in the presidency-towns.

"As the section now stands, I do not see any reason for including it in the class of sections which certain races may be exempted; I apprehend it was included before it was recast."

14. Section 4 of the Bill accordingly amends section 69 of the Act so as to express clearly at was actually intended, and no power to exempt from the main provisions of the section s been retained; but, as Mr Justice Muthúswami Aiyar has pointed out that there are other sses whom it is even more necessary to exclude from the operation of the exceptional ovision in clause (a) than Hindús, Muhammadans and Buddhists, words have been added to at clause to provide a power of excluding them.

15. Section 2 of the Bill is intended merely to remove a formal defect in the Act which s been brought to notice in the course of the recent discussions. It was of course never ended that the provisions of the Act which assume the existence of a registration system ould take effect in those tracts which are excluded from the operation of the Registration Act; t the Act omitted to make any express provision to that effect, and that omission is now pplied.

16. The addition which it is proposed to make to section 4 of the Act by section 3 of the ll has for its object merely to remove a difficulty which has been felt in some quarters as to e bearing which the provisions of the Act relating to registration and the Registration Act ve on one another.

Removal or alteration of telegraph line or post on property not belonging to a local authority.

10. (1) When, under the foregoing provisions of this Act, a telegraph line or post has been placed by a telegraph authority under, over, along, across, in, or upon any property, not being property vested in or under the control of a local authority, and any person entitled to do so desires to deal with that property in such a manner as to render it necessary or convenient that the telegraph line or post should be removed to another part thereof or to a higher or lower level or altered in form, he may tender to the telegraph authority the amount requisite to defray the expense of the removal or alteration and call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter the line or post accordingly, and, if the telegraph authority refuses or omits to do so, may apply to the District Judge within whose jurisdiction the property is situate to order the removal or alteration.

(2) A District Judge receiving an application under this section may, in his discretion, reject the same or make an order absolutely or subject to conditions for the removal of the telegraph line or post to any other part of the property or to a higher or lower level or for the alteration of its form, and the order so made shall be final and conclusive.

Amendments of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876.

Amendment of the definition of "telegraph" in Act I of 1876.

11. To the definition of "telegraph" in section 3 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, the following shall be added, namely:— I of

"Provided that the fines so imposed shall not exceed the following limits, namely:—

"(1) when the licensee or lessee is punishable for the breach, one thousand rupees, and in the case of a continuing breach a further fine of two hundred rupees for every day after the first during the whole or any part of which the breach continues;

"(2) when a servant of the licensee or lessee or any other person is punishable for the breach, one-fourth of those amounts."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE main object of this Bill is to give power to the Government, and to any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially empowered in this behalf, to place telegraph lines under or over property belonging whether to private persons or to public bodies.

2. The attention of the Government has recently been directed to the fact that, as the law now stands, the Governor General in Council and his licensees have no power to place telegraph lines upon the land of municipal or other similar bodies or of private persons. In England the requisite powers are conferred on the Postmaster General, who works and maintains the telegraphs in that country, by 26 & 27 Vic., cap. 112, as amended by 41 & 42 Vic., cap. 76; and as it seems desirable that the Government in which the exclusive privilege of establishing telegraphs in this country is vested should possess somewhat similar powers, the present Bill has been prepared.

3. Section 3 empowers the Government or any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially authorized by a Government officer to place and maintain telegraph lines and posts under, over, along, across, in or upon the property of any "person", which term includes a body corporate. It is considered that licensees should have these powers, because the licenses granted always strictly limit the area of the operations of the licensees, and it would be somewhat anomalous for local bodies and private persons to have the power to neutralize the licenses granted by the Governor General in Council by objecting to the licensees' operations, or by hampering them by the exaction of fees for permission to work under their licenses. The powers thus given are, however, to be exercised so as to do as little damage as possible, and their exercise is moreover made subject to important restrictions and conditions.

4. When the property belongs to a municipal board or other local authority, the powers conferred by the Act cannot be exercised over it without the consent of that authority; and that consent may be given subject to conditions. Among other conditions which can be imposed is one requiring that any expenses to which the local authority may be put by the exercise of the power shall be made good; but it will be observed that no provision is made for the payment of compensation on any other account to a local authority whose property is made use of for this purpose, it being considered that, as the construction of telegraphs is a matter in which the public are interested, no charge should be made for accommodation of this sort when it can be granted without inconvenience to the public or expense to the local authority concerned.

5. It may sometimes happen that, though at the time when a telegraph authority desires to exercise its powers over some property of a local authority there may be no reasonable ground for objecting, and the local authority may thus find itself compelled to consent, a state of things may subsequently arise under which the continued exercise of the powers would be felt as a grave public inconvenience or a cause of serious loss. Land, e.g., which was waste at the time the telegraph line was constructed over it might afterwards be required for some important public object or might acquire great value for building purposes, and, as no compensation (except for actual expenses out of pocket) would have been paid to the local authority at the time the line was constructed, it is but just that provision should be made for the removal or alteration of the line in such an event. This accordingly is done by section 5 of the Bill, which empowers the local authority to call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter its telegraph or post, and, in the event of the telegraph authority refusing or neglecting to do so, gives an appeal to the Local Government.

6. In the event, which it is believed will be rare, of a local authority arbitrarily refusing its consent to the exercise by a telegraph authority of the powers conferred by the Bill or clogging its consent with unreasonable conditions, it will (section 7) be open to the telegraph authority to appeal to the Local Government, whose decision will be final.

7. Turning now to the case in which it may be desired to exercise the powers given by the Bill over the property of private persons, it will be seen that here provision is made for the payment of full compensation, the amount of which in the event of dispute will (section 9) be determined by the Civil Court, and that, in the event of a person upon whose property a telegraph line or post has been placed desiring subsequently to deal with the property in such a way as would make it necessary or convenient that the line or post should be removed to another part of it or to a higher or lower level or altered in form, he can (section 10) tender the cost of the work and call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter the line or post, and, if that authority refuses to do so, can appeal to the Civil Court.

8. It may be observed, however, that in practice in this country the power of taking telegraph lines through private property is not likely to be exercised either by the Government or by its licensees except on rare occasions, and then as a rule only to the extent of crossing with the wire, a post being scarcely ever erected on private land. Private property has hitherto been always avoided as much as possible, and it is likely to be still more carefully avoided in future if it is made clear, as it is proposed to do by this Bill, that full compensation will have to be paid for exercising the power over private and not for exercising it over public property.

9. The present opportunity has been taken to make three amendments of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, which experience has shown to be desirable. The first has for its object the emendation of the definition of "telegraph" so as to bring it into more exact conformity with the construction put upon the definitions in the English Acts by a recent decision of the High Court of Justice in England.

10. The second is intended to provide for the regulation of telegraph lines constructed by the Government but leased to companies or individuals by whom they are worked. The position of such lines under the Act as it at present stands is far from clear, and the object of the amendment proposed in section 12 of the Bill is to put them on much the same footing as licensed lines.

11. The object of the third amendment, which is made by section 13 of the Bill, is to prescribe penalties for the breach of the rules made under section 8 of the Act for the conduct of telegraphs worked under license or lease. In such cases, as the Act now stands, the only remedy is to revoke the license or lease, but this course would in most cases cause such great public inconvenience that it is impracticable. The result is that at present there is virtually no penalty for the infringement of the rules made under section 8 of the Act. To remedy this state of things, the Bill adds a clause to that section empowering the Governor General in Council to prescribe by the rules moderate fines for the breach of them.

From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 1218., dated 9th June, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].
Extract from the Tribune of 14th June, 1884 [Papers No. 9].

2. Instead of repealing the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, and bringing the new law into force at once, as was proposed in the Bill as introduced, we have thought it better (section 4 of the amended Bill) to require the Local Government to apply the new law to any place to which that Act had been extended, unless the Local Government comes to the conclusion, and declares by notification in the official Gazette, that the provisions of the Act are not suited to any such place. The Local Government is at the same time empowered to continue in office the members of the present committees as if they had been elected or appointed under the new law for any term not exceeding three years which it may fix. When the new law is thus made applicable to any place to which the Act of 1873 had been extended, that Act will cease to apply, and other consequences will follow, which are set forth in section 12. In the Supplemental chapter, the Local Government is further empowered to withdraw the area of any municipality from the operation either of Act IV of 1873 or of the new law, if the latter has been made applicable. The Local Government will thus be enabled to abolish any municipality constituted under Act IV of 1873, if it appears undesirable to continue municipal institutions in the area under its control.

3. The provisions as to the term of office of members, the removal of members and the filling up of casual vacancies in the committee have been assimilated, as nearly as possible, to the corresponding provisions in the District Boards Act.

4. On the recommendation of the Local Government, we have by section 14 empowered the Commissioner of a division to approve of the election of a president by a second class committee, and to appoint the president of a committee of this class where the committee is not empowered to elect, or fails or does not desire to exercise the power.

5. The provision in section 25 enabling the president or, in his absence, a vice-president to exercise the powers of the committee in cases of emergency has been limited to the power, at the cost of the municipality, to direct the execution of any work or the doing of any act which he considers necessary for the service or safety of the public; and, when he exercises this power, he is required to report his proceedings to the next following meeting of the committee. Where the case is sufficiently provided for by the rules of business under section 24, as to the exercise of the executive authority of the committee, the extraordinary powers given by section 25 of course will not arise, as there would not then be a case of emergency.

6. In section 27 we have provided that nothing done under the Act should be questioned on account of the existence of a vacancy in a committee or joint committee or of any merely formal defect.

7. We have not retained the provision of the Bill as introduced requiring the sanction of the Commissioner of the division to the removal of a paid secretary, and his sanction to the appointment is confined (section 28) to the appointment of a paid secretary and to the rate of pay to be allowed, and does not extend to approval of the person selected. The responsibility for appointing a proper person will thus rest exclusively with the committee. In cases, however, in which Government officers were employed in the service of a municipality before the passing of this Bill into law, section 12 provides for their remaining in the service of the new committee, and prohibits their dismissal unless under the sanction of the Local Government.

8. The employment of other officers and servants (when there is available budget provision) is made subject only (section 29) to what is necessary and proper for the efficient execution of the duties of the committee, and to any rules which the Local Government may make as to the employment of persons appointed to offices requiring professional skill; but power is given to the Commissioner of the division, subject to an appeal by the committee to the Local Government (section 30), to require the reduction of excessively large or expensive establishments or of unduly high rates of pay.

9. We have raised the limit of the power of first class committees (section 33) to delegate the authority to enter into contracts on their behalf to 500 rupees, and have required all contracts for larger amounts on behalf of any committee to be sanctioned at a meeting of the committee before they can be entered into. It has been suggested that separate provision is required for contracts which do not fix the quantity of work to be done, but only the rate to be paid per unit of work; but we are of opinion that these contracts can be brought within this section by fixing a maximum limit, not exceeding five hundred rupees, on the sum which may become payable under them.

10. In section 34 the limit of value above which contracts are required to be in writing has been increased from Rs. 20 to Rs. 100 in the case of first class committees, and Rs. 50 in the case of second class committees.

11. The prohibition in section 35 of members, officers or servants of the committee being interested in contracts with the committee, unless with the Commissioner's permission, has been assimilated to section 62 of the District Boards Act.

12. Section 36, which takes the place of section 99 of the Bill as introduced, has been modified so as to require notice to be given of all suits against committees, or against their officers for their official acts; the sub-sections as to limitation and as to tender of amends being omitted as unnecessary. The protection thus given corresponds with that given to Government and to public officers by section 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, except that the notice required is shorter.

13. In the Taxation chapter the taxes which committees are empowered to propose for the general purposes of the Act are brought together in section 39, a higher rate of tax on buildings and lands being allowed in certain scheduled municipalities, all of which are hill-stations, than that which is fixed as the maximum elsewhere.

14. In the second sub-section of section 39 we have defined the expression "annual value" as meaning the gross annual rent for which buildings or lands might reasonably be expected to let, and we have omitted the first proviso, as, though it has been the practice in hill-stations to let houses furnished, the furniture supplied is ordinarily of small value; and as most of us are of opinion that the rent to be considered in estimating the annual value is the sum for which they would let if unfurnished, we have added words making this clear.

15. Special powers are also given to impose a scavenging-tax and a water-tax as payment for services rendered to the occupiers of any buildings or land or for the construction and maintenance of works for the supply of water from which such occupiers may benefit. No special power has been thought necessary to enable committees to charge fees for the use of schools or other public institutions maintained by them, as they may impose any conditions they may think proper upon persons who wish to avail themselves of the benefit of such institutions.

16. We have modified the procedure for imposing and assessing taxes (section 42) by providing that new taxes leviable by the year should not come into force except at the commencement of the year, and other new taxes until at least six months have elapsed from the date of the meeting at which, after the requisite sanction has been obtained, their imposition is directed.

17. We have enabled the Local Government (section 45), where any tax appears unfair in its incidence or injurious to the interests of the public, to require the committee to take the necessary measures to remove the objection and, if it fails to comply with the requisition, to suspend the levy of the tax.

18. We have (section 49) given an appeal against assessments, on account of octroi, as in the case of other taxes, and we have also enabled officers hearing appeals against assessments, if they entertain reasonable doubt on any question as to the liability to, or principle of, the assessment, to state a case for the decision of the Chief Court.

19. We have (section 52) saved taxes leviable under the Municipal Act now in force so far as they are consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, the new law.

20. We have in section 59 conferred upon the committee a power to remit a tax on buildings on certain equitable grounds.

21. We have made taxes on buildings and lands, other than the scavenging-tax and the water-tax, payable by the owner and also a charge upon the property, and have therefore found it unnecessary to make them recoverable from the occupier if not paid by the owner after notice.

22. We have added a section (62) giving power to inspect the contents of a conveyance or package to ascertain whether octroi is payable by having it brought before a Magistrate for the purpose, if the person bringing or receiving it within the municipality refuses to allow the necessary inspection, and have in other respects amended the provisions of the Bill as introduced on the subject of the recovery of octroi.

23. The provisions of the Bill on the subject of the municipal fund and of municipal property have been brought together in a new chapter (Chapter IV). In this chapter we have provided (section 68) for prior charges on the municipal fund for loans, establishment-charges and payments for maintenance of pauper-lunatics, audit of accounts, and services rendered to the committee by Provincial Departments of Government, and have empowered the Local Government to make rules with respect to the relative priority to be given to the other duties of the committee. We have also (section 71) declared certain descriptions of property held for municipal purposes to vest in the committee, and have (section 72) introduced a clause, based on a somewhat similar provision of the Bombay Municipal Act, providing that the administration of every public institution maintained out of municipal funds shall vest in the committee, but that the extent of the independent authority of the committee may be prescribed by the Local Government.

24. The sections relating to municipal police have also been collected in a separate chapter (Chapter V). We have added a section (78) defining the powers and duties of the police in respect of offences against the Act or rules made thereunder. By this section they are empowered to arrest persons committing such offences when necessary, and are required to give immediate information of the commission of such offences to the committee, and to assist members or officers of the committee in the exercise of their lawful authority.

25. Another new chapter (Chapter VI) sets forth the powers of the committee to do, or to require others to do, or to abstain from doing, particular acts. This and the following chapter, which deals with offences affecting the public health, safety or convenience, take the place of the powers to make rules for the prevention of nuisances, and for entry on private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances, given by section 67 of the Bill as introduced, and of the powers to issue injunctions and make conditional orders as to nuisances given by sections 68 to 70, and this chapter also embodies the additional powers to make rules and other powers expressly given by the Bill as introduced.

26. In framing these sections, the existing bye-laws of the principal municipalities, and the detailed Municipal Acts in force in other provinces of British India, have been referred to, and we have endeavoured to give all the powers not elsewhere given in the Bill which it appears to be necessary or proper that Panjab municipalities should possess. While there may be municipalities in which some of these powers are not required, these municipalities can be excepted by the Local Government under one of the provisions contained in the Supplemental chapter from the sections giving the powers which the circumstances of the municipality render unnecessary.

27. Instead of enabling committees to make rules regulating for sanitary reasons the crops which may be grown within municipal limits, we have, by section 116, empowered the Local Government to prohibit by notification the cultivation of any crop, the use of any manure or the irrigation of land in any manner, which is reported by the Sanitary Commissioner to be injurious to health, or to impose such conditions thereupon as may remove the risk of injury, and have provided for compensation where the practice prohibited was of long standing.

28. In section 117, which relates to the regulation of offensive or dangerous trades, and corresponds with section 74 of the Bill as introduced, we have omitted manufactories of gunpowder or fireworks, which can now be regulated by rules made by the Local Government under the Explosives Act, IV of 1884, and shops for smoking opium, as these must be licensed under the Opium Act, and the Local Government may, if it thinks proper, instruct Deputy Commissioners to consult municipalities before granting a license under that Act.

29. In section 119 we have extended the power given by the Bill as introduced to make rules for the inspection and proper regulation of lodging-houses to houses occupied by members of more than one family, and have stated in greater detail the subjects with which such rules may deal. This power, with that given in section 115, to prohibit the use for human habitation of houses unfit to be so used, will enable committees to exercise more effective control than hitherto over the arrangements for the accommodation of human beings where this appears necessary for the preservation of the public health, and will, it is believed, be of special importance, not only in hill-stations, but in places the population of which is liable to be largely increased at particular seasons by the resort of pilgrims or the holding of large fairs.

30. Chapter VII provides for the punishment of certain offences affecting the public health, safety and convenience and of disobedience to orders given by the committee under the powers conferred by the preceding chapter.

31. In Chapter VIII, which deals with control, the changes made have been in the direction of assimilation with the provisions of the Panjáb District Boards Act. We have also revised the list of subjects on which the Local Government is empowered to make rules.

32. In the Supplemental chapter (Chapter IX) we have added provisions that copies of rules should be kept by committees available for inspection and for sale to the public (section 160); that rules or bye-laws made under the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, should, so far as consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, this Bill, continue in force until repealed by new rules, which the proper authority is required to make and take the necessary steps for bringing into force so soon as may be (section 161); and we have included provisions for altering the boundaries of municipalities or the class to which they belong (sections 165 to 169), for excepting them from the operation of such parts of the Bill as are not suited to their circumstances (section 170), and for withdrawing them from the operation of the law relating to municipalities (section 171).

33. A special section applicable only to Simla (section 177) has also been added to save the land-tax which has been substituted for the ground-rent formerly charged by Government, and which is levied concurrently with a tax on the annual value of property.

REVENUE AND AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 20th AUGUST 1884.

GENERAL REMARKS.—Rain fell in varying quantities in all districts of the Madras Presidency, and, except in a few places where the drought continues, prospects have much improved. In Mysore there has been very little rain again, and the condition of the standing crops is critical; sowings have also been retarded owing to the deficiency of rain. In Coorg there has been a fair amount of rain, and prospects are on the whole good. In the Bombay Presidency moderate showers fell in most districts, but the rainfall is insufficient in parts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country, where, in some places, the young crops are suffering from drought. In the Berars and Hyderabad the rainfall has been slight, but the crops are doing well. There was rain generally throughout the Central India States, but more is wanted in several places. In Sutna over 13 inches fell during the week, and the town of Rewah was flooded and sustained considerable damage. In Nowgong also the total rainfall has been very great. In the Rajputana States the rainfall of the week under report was slight, and more is wanted in Sirohi, Harowti, Ajmere, Jeypore, and Ulwur. In the Central Provinces the rainfall has not been so heavy as that hitherto recorded; there have been occasional breaks, allowing weeding and ploughing, but a longer break is still required. Good rain has fallen in all districts of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and crop prospects are generally excellent. In the Punjab there was slight rain in a few districts, but prospects continue good. There was heavy rain in the Assam districts, over 18 inches being registered at Sylhet. In Bengal the rainfall was heavier than that of last week, and the prospects of the crops have been improved in places, and transplanting has been resumed; on the whole, however, prospects are not satisfactory, and more rain would be beneficial.

The last report of the Meteorological Department, dated the 21st instant, states that rain has generally fallen throughout the Punjab, the North-Western and Central Provinces, Central India, Burma, and along the Western Coast. In Bengal and Madras the rain has been light and partial; in Rajputana it has fallen only at Jeypore and Mount Abu; while in Sind, Guzerat, and the Bombay Deccan the only station reporting rain is Ahmedabad.

Agricultural operations remain for the most part unchanged. Harvesting continues in Madras. Kharif sowings have been completed in the Bombay Presidency, and are still in progress in the Punjab. In the Central Provinces preparations for rabi are in progress. In Bengal harvesting of aus and jute is in progress; the outturn of the former is estimated between 8 to 12 annas. Indigo manufacture has commenced in Sarun, but the yield is poor. In Assam reaping of the aus crop has been completed, and transplanting of sali dhan is in progress. The prospects of tea are good.

Cholera and small-pox are slightly prevalent in most provinces, but the public health is generally good. Prices are generally stationary, with local fluctuations.

RESOLUTION.

In Home Department circular letter No. 3986-96, dated 31st August 1869, it was decided that Civil Surgeons should attend personally on all Uncovenanted officers, being at the head-quarter station of the district, whose appointments are notified in the official gazette by the Government of India or by any Local Government or Administration. As no general rules have been laid down regulating the gazetting of appointments, it is found that in one Province subordinate officers, in consequence of being gazetted, are entitled to attendance from the Civil Surgeon, while in another Province officers of the same class who are not gazetted are not so entitled. It appeared to the Government of India that a general ruling entitling all officers drawing a pay of Rs. 250 and over, whether gazetted or not, to the attendance of Civil Surgeons would be a better arrangement, and remove all cause for dissatisfaction in this respect, and the opinions of Local Governments and Administrations were invited on the subject.

2. From the replies read in the preamble, it appears that the rule proposed by the Government of India meets with very general approval. The Governor General in Council is accordingly pleased to decide that all officers of Government in the Bengal Presidency living at the head-quarter station of a district and drawing a salary (as defined in the Codes of the Financial Department) of Rs. 250 and over, whether gazetted or not, shall in future be entitled to gratuitous medical attendance at their own residences from Civil Surgeons. Gazetted officers drawing less than Rs. 250 a month will no longer be entitled to the gratuitous medical attendance of a Civil Surgeon. The only exceptions to the rule now laid down will be probationers appointed under the Statutory Civil Service Rules and Assistant Superintendents of Police who, though drawing a salary of less than Rs. 250 a month, will still be entitled to the personal attendance of the Civil Surgeon.

ORDER.—Ordered, that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to Local Governments and Administrations (except Madras and Bombay) for information and guidance; that a copy be forwarded to the Government of Madras for information; and that a copy be forwarded to the Government of Bombay for information, with the remark that the Government of India see no sufficient reason to make an exception in favour of mamlutdars in Bombay when the corresponding officers—tahsildars—in all other Provinces are not to be exceptions to the rule.

Ordered also, that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Surgeon General with the Government of India for information and for the issue of further necessary orders, and to the several Departments of the Government of India for information; and that the Resolution be published in the Gazette of India for general information.

CHAPTER III.

General Provisions.

Taxes which may be imposed.

39. (1) Subject to any general rules or special orders which the Governor General in Council may make in this behalf, and to any rules made by the Local Government under this Act, a committee may, from time to time, for the purposes of this Act, and in the manner by this Act directed, impose in the whole or any part of the municipality any of the following taxes, namely :—

(A) with the previous sanction of the Local Government—

(a) a tax on buildings and lands either—

(i) not exceeding in any municipalities which may be constituted at the places specified in the schedule hereto annexed 10 per cent., and elsewhere 7½ per cent., on the annual value; or

(ii) not exceeding in the said municipalities one anna four pies, and elsewhere one anna, per square yard of the ground area; or

(iii) not exceeding in the said municipalities four rupees, and elsewhere three rupees, per running foot of frontage in streets or bázárs;

(b) a tax on persons practising any profession or art or carrying on any trade or calling in the municipality;

(c) a tax on all or any vehicles, boats, animals used for riding, driving, draught or burden, and dogs, kept within the municipality;

(d) a tax on vehicles and animals used as aforesaid entering the municipality;

(e) a tax on menial and domestic servants;

(f) an octroi on animals for slaughter or goods or both brought within the octroi-limits for consumption or use therein; and

(B) with the previous sanction of the Local Government and of the Governor General in Council, any other tax.

(2) In this section, "annual value" means the gross annual rent for which buildings and lands liable to taxation may reasonably be expected to let, and in the case of houses, may be expected to let unfurnished :

Provided that, in the case of land assessed to land-revenue or of which the land-revenue has been wholly or in part released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned, if the Local Government so directs, the annual value shall be deemed to be double the aggregate of the following amounts, namely :—

(a) the amount of the land-revenue for the time being assessed on the land, whether such assessment is leviable or not; or, when the land-revenue has been wholly or in part compounded for or redeemed, the amount which, but for such composition or redemption, would have been leviable; and

(b) when the improvement of the land due to canal irrigation has been excluded from account in assessing the land-revenue, the amount of the owner's rate or water-advantage rate or other rate imposed in respect of such improvement.

Scavenging-tax.

40. When a committee has, in exercise of the powers conferred by this Act, provided for the performance, with regard to any buildings or lands, by its agents of the duties usually performed by sweepers, it may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, in the manner by this Act directed, impose upon those buildings and lands, in addition to any other tax imposed upon them under this Act, a tax to be called the scavenging-tax, at such rate or of such amount as it thinks fit :

Provided that in fixing the rate or amount regard shall be had to the principle that the total net proceeds of the tax should not exceed the cost of the performance of the said duties.

Water-tax.

41. (1) Besides the taxes mentioned in the foregoing sections, a committee, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, may, for the purpose of constructing or maintaining works for the supply of water to the municipality or paying the principal or interest of any loan raised for the construction of such works, impose, in the manner by this Act directed, a tax, to be called the water-tax, upon buildings or lands which are so situated that their occupiers can benefit by the works.

(2) The rate or amount of the tax so imposed on different buildings or lands may be determined with reference, among other considerations, to their distance from the nearest point at which the water is deliverable by the works and to their level; but in fixing it regard shall be had to the principle that the total net proceeds of the tax, with the estimated income from payments for water supplied from the works under special contracts, should not exceed the amount required for the said purposes.

Procedure in imposing taxes.

42. (1) A committee may, at a special meeting, pass a resolution to propose the imposition of any tax under section 39, section 40 or section 41.

(2) When such a resolution has been passed, the committee shall publish a notice, defining the class of persons or description of property proposed to be taxed, the amount or rate of the tax to be imposed and the system of assessment to be adopted.

(3) Any inhabitant objecting to the proposed tax may, within thirty days from the publication of the notice, submit his objection in writing to the committee; and the committee shall, at a special meeting, take his objection into consideration.

(4) If no such objection is received within the said period of thirty days, or if such objection, having been considered as aforesaid, is deemed insufficient, the committee may forward its proposals to the Local Government, with the objections (if any) which have been submitted as aforesaid, and its decision thereupon.

(5) The Local Government, on receiving such proposals, may sanction the same, or refuse to sanction them, or return them to the committee for further consideration.

Panjáb Municipal Act, 1884.
(Chapter III.—Taxation.—Sections 43-52.)

(6) When the Local Government sanctions any such proposals which require the further sanction of the Governor General in Council, it shall submit the same to the Governor General in Council, with the objections (if any) received through the committee; and the Governor General in Council may sanction the proposals, or refuse to sanction them, or return them to the Local Government for further consideration.

(7) When the proposals of a committee have been sanctioned by the Local Government, or by the Local Government and the Governor General in Council, as the case may be, the committee may, at a special meeting, direct the imposition of the tax in accordance with such proposals.

(8) In giving such direction the committee shall fix a date from which the tax shall come into force:

Provided that—

(a) no tax shall come into force until it has been notified;

(b) no tax leviable by the year shall come into force except at the commencement of the year by which it is leviable; and

(c) no other tax shall come into force less than six months from the date of the meeting at which its imposition is directed.

(9) A notification of the imposition of a tax under this Act shall be conclusive evidence that the tax has been imposed in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

Power to abolish or reduce tax.

43. A committee may, by a resolution passed at a special meeting and confirmed by the Local Government, abolish or reduce in amount any tax imposed under the foregoing sections.

Power to exempt from taxation.

44. (1) A committee may exempt, in whole or in part, from the payment of any such tax any person who by reason of poverty may in its opinion be unable to pay the same.

(2) A committee may, by resolution passed at a special meeting and confirmed by the Local Government, and the Local Government may by order, exempt in whole or in part from the payment of any such tax any person or class of persons or any property or description of property.

Power for Local Government to suspend levy of tax.

45. (1) If at any time it appears to the Local Government, on complaint made or otherwise, that any tax imposed under the foregoing sections is unfair in its incidence, or that the levy thereof or of any part thereof is injurious to the interests of the general public, it may require the committee to take within a specified period measures to remove the objection; and if within that period the requirement is not complied with to the satisfaction of the Local Government, the Local Government may by notification suspend the levy of the tax or of such part thereof until the objection has been removed.

(2) The Local Government may at any time, by notification, rescind any such suspension.

Taxes not invalid for defect of form.

46. No tax imposed under this Act shall be invalid merely for defect of form; and it shall be enough in any such tax on property, or any assessment of value for the purpose of any such tax, if the property taxed or assessed is so described as to be generally known; and it shall not be necessary to name the owner or occupier thereof.

Taxes when payable.

47. Any tax imposed under the foregoing sections and payable periodically shall be payable on such dates and in such instalments (if any) as the committee, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, may, by rule, from time to time direct.

Receipts to be given.

48. For all sums paid on account of any tax under this Act, a receipt, stating the amount and the tax on account of which it is paid, shall be given by the person receiving the same, on request by the person making the payment.

Appeals against taxation.

49. (1) An appeal against the assessment or levy of any tax under this Act shall lie to the Deputy Commissioner, unless he is a member of the committee, in which case the appeal shall lie to the Commissioner or other officer empowered by the Local Government in this behalf.

(2) If, on the hearing of an appeal under this section, any question as to the liability to, or the principle of assessment of, a tax arises, on which the officer hearing the appeal entertains reasonable doubt, he may, either of his own motion or on the application of any person interested, draw up a statement of the facts of the case and the point on which doubt is entertained, and refer the statement with his own opinion on the point for the decision of the Chief Court.

(3) On a reference being made under sub-section (2) the subsequent proceedings in the case shall be, as nearly as may be, in conformity with the rules relating to references to the High Court contained in Chapter XLVI of the Code of Civil Procedure. XIV of 1882.

Limitation of appeal.

50. (1) No appeal shall lie in respect of a tax on any land or building, unless it is preferred within one month after the publication of the notice prescribed by section 56, and no appeal shall lie in respect of any other tax unless it is preferred within one month from the time when the demand for the tax is made:

Provided that an appeal may be admitted after the expiration of the period prescribed therefor by this section if the appellant satisfies the officer before whom the appeal is preferred that he had sufficient cause for not presenting the appeal within that period.

(2) No appeal shall be entertained unless the amount of the tax to which it relates is deposited with the committee before the appeal is preferred.

Taxation not to be questioned except under this Act.

51. No objection shall be taken to any valuation or assessment, nor shall the liability of any person to be assessed or taxed be questioned, in any other manner or by any other authority than in this Act is provided.

Taxes leviable under Act IV of 1873 to be deemed to be taxes under this Act.

52. All taxes leviable in any local area under the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, at the time when a committee having authority over that local area comes into existence under this Act IV of 1873.

shall, so far as their imposition and assessment are consistent with this Act and within the powers conferred thereby, be deemed to have been imposed and assessed under this Act.

Taxes on Immoveable Property.

Preparation of assessment-lists.

53. (1) The committee shall cause an assessment-list of all buildings and lands on which any tax is imposed to be prepared, containing—

(a) the name of the street or division in which the property is situate;

(b) the designation of the property, either by name or by number, sufficient for identification;

(c) the names of the owner and occupier, if known;

(d) the annual value, area or length of frontage on which the property is assessed; and

(e) the amount of the tax assessed thereon by the committee.

(2) For the purpose of preparing the list, the committee may require the owners or occupiers of the buildings or lands to furnish it with returns of the measurements and of the rent or annual value.

Publication of notice of assessments.

54. When the assessment-list has been completed, the committee shall give public notice thereof, and of the place where the list or a copy thereof may be inspected; and every person claiming to be either owner or occupier of property included in the list, or the agent of any such person, shall be at liberty to inspect the list and to make extracts therefrom without charge.

Public notice of time fixed for revising assessment-list.

55. (1) The committee shall at the same time give public notice of a time, not less than one month from the publication of the notice, when it will proceed to revise the valuation and assessment; and in all cases in which any property is for the first time assessed, or the assessment thereof is increased, it shall also give notice thereof to the owner or occupier of the property.

(2) All objections to the valuation and assessment shall be made in writing before the time fixed in the notice or orally or in writing at that time.

Settlement of list.

56. (1) After the objections have been enquired into and the persons making them have been allowed an opportunity of being heard either in person or by authorized agent as they think fit and the revision of the valuation and assessment has been completed, the amendments made in the list shall be authenticated by the signatures of not less than two members of the committee, who shall at the same time certify that no valid objection has been made to the valuation and assessment contained in the list, except in the cases in which amendments have been entered therein; and, subject to such amendments as may thereafter be duly made, the tax so assessed shall be deemed to be the tax for the whole year by which it is leviable next following that in which the assessment is made.

(2) The list when amended under this section shall be deposited in the committee's office, and shall there be open during office-hours to all owners and occupiers of property comprised therein, and a public notice that it is so open shall forthwith be published.

Further amendments of assessment-list.

57. (1) The committee may at any time amend the list by inserting the name of any person whose name ought to be inserted, or by inserting any property which ought to have been inserted, or by altering the assessment on any property which has been insufficiently valued or assessed through mistake, oversight or fraud, after giving notice, to any person interested in the amendment, of a time, not less than one month from the date of service of such notice, at which the amendment is to be made.

(2) Any person interested in any such amendment may tender his objection to the committee in writing before the time fixed in the notice, or orally or in writing at that time, and shall be allowed an opportunity of being heard in support of the same in person or by authorized agent as he thinks fit.

New list need not be prepared every year.

58. It shall be in the discretion of the committee to prepare a new assessment-list every year; or to adopt the valuation and assessment contained in the list for any year, with such alterations as may in particular cases be deemed necessary, as the valuation and assessment for the year following, giving the same notice of the valuation and assessment as if a new assessment-list had been prepared.

Remission of tax on unoccupied immoveable property.

59. (1) When a tax payable under section 39, sub-section (1), clause (a), or under section 40 or section 41, is payable in one sum in respect of an entire year, and the property in respect of which it is payable is unoccupied throughout the year, or when such a tax is payable in instalments and the property is unoccupied throughout the period in respect of which an instalment is payable, the amount payable in respect of the property for the year, or the instalment, as the case may be, shall be remitted:

Provided that it shall be in the discretion of the committee to direct that no remission shall be granted unless notice in writing of the vacancy has been given to it within such time from the beginning of the year or of the period as it may, from time to time, fix in this behalf.

(2) When in any case not provided for by the foregoing part of this section a building in respect of which a tax is payable under section 39, sub-section (1), clause (a), or under section 40 or section 41, is wholly or in greater part demolished or destroyed by fire or otherwise, the committee may remit such proportion of the tax as it thinks equitable.

60. (1) A tax payable under section 39, sub-section (1), clause (a), shall be paid by the owner of the property in respect of which it is payable.

(2) If the bill is not paid within ten days from the presentation thereof, the committee may cause a notice of demand to be served on that person; and if he does not, within seven days from the service of the notice, pay the sum due, with any fee leviable for the notice, or show sufficient cause for non-payment, the sum due, with the fee, shall be deemed to be an arrear of tax.

(3) The amount of every such arrear, besides being recoverable in any other manner provided by this Act, shall, subject to any claim on behalf of Her Majesty, be a first charge on the property in respect of which it is payable, and shall be recoverable, on application made in this behalf by the committee to the Deputy Commissioner, as if the property were an estate assessed to land-revenue and the arrear were an arrear of such revenue due thereon:

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall authorize the arrest of a defaulter.

Octroi and Tolls.

Power to search where octroi is leviable.

62. If any person, bringing or receiving a conveyance or package within the octroi-limits of a municipality in which octroi is leviable, refuses, on the demand of an officer authorized by the committee in this behalf, to permit the officer to inspect the contents of the conveyance or package for the purpose of ascertaining whether it contains any articles in respect of which octroi is payable, the officer may cause the conveyance or package to be taken without unnecessary delay before a Magistrate, who shall cause the inspection to be made in his presence.

Power to examine article liable to octroi.

63. Every person bringing or receiving within the octroi-limits of any municipality any article on which octroi is payable shall, when required by any officer authorized by the committee in this behalf, and so far as may be necessary for ascertaining the amount of tax chargeable,—

Cultivation, use of manure or irrigation injurious to health, after prohibition.

Provided that when on any land to which the notification applies that description of crop has been cultivated, that kind of manure has been used or irrigation has been practised in that manner during the five years preceding the notification with such continuity as the ordinary course of husbandry admits of, compensation shall be paid from the municipal fund to all persons interested in that land for any damage caused to them by the prohibition or regulation.

(2) All property vested in Her Majesty under sub-section (1) shall be applied under the orders of the Local Government to discharging the liabilities imposed on the Secretary of State for India in Council under that sub-section, or for the promotion of the safety, health, welfare or convenience of the inhabitants of the local area.

ACT No. XIV OF 1884.

An Act for the validation of decisions passed by certain Settlement-officers in the Panjáb.

XIX of 1865. WHEREAS section 21 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1865, after conferring certain powers on the Local Government in any district in which a settlement of land-revenue might be in progress, provided as follows, namely:—"The Local Government may also, with the previous sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, invest any special officer in such district with the civil powers of a Commissioner, Deputy Commissioner, Assistant Commissioner or Tahsíldár, as defined in this Act, for the purpose of deciding suits in respect to land, or the rent, revenue or produce of land, such powers to be exercised on the Revenue side";

and whereas doubts have recently been raised as to whether the said section conferred power to invest a special officer as aforesaid with power to decide appeals in such suits;

XVII of 1877. and whereas section 49 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1877, provides that the Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, invest any officer making or controlling a settlement of land-revenue in any local area with all or any of the powers of any Court constituted under that Act, for the purpose of trying all or any specified class of suits and appeals relating to land, or the rent, revenue or produce of land, arising in that local area;

XIX of 1865. XVII of 1877. and whereas certain officers making or controlling settlements of land-revenue have decided suits of the description mentioned in section 21 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1865, or section 49 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1877, and appeals in such suits, without being invested with power to decide the same;

and whereas it is apprehended that certain officers making or controlling settlements of land-revenue have exercised judicial powers when at places beyond the local limits of their jurisdiction;

and whereas for the quieting of titles and the avoidance of litigation it is expedient that the decisions passed by officers engaged in making or controlling settlements in suits of the description mentioned in section 21 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1865, and in section 49 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1877, and in appeals in such suits, should not be impeached for want of authority in such officers, and that the validity of such decisions should be affirmed;

XIX of 1865. XVII of 1877.

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Construction of section 21 of Act XIX of 1865.

1. In the portion of section 21 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1865, hereinbefore recited the word "suits" shall be deemed to have always included appeals. XIX of 1865.

Validation of decisions of certain unauthorized officers.

2. When any officer making or controlling a settlement of land-revenue has decided a suit of the description mentioned in section 21 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1865, or section 49 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1877, or an appeal in any such suit, and his decision would, if he had been duly invested with power under either of those sections to decide such suits or appeals, have been valid, the decision shall not be deemed invalid or deprived of any of its effect by reason of the objection that he was not so invested: XIX of 1865. XVII of 1877.

Provided that a decision heretofore declared by any competent Court to be invalid on the ground that the officer who decided the suit or appeal was not authorized to decide the same shall not be rendered valid by this section.

Validation of decisions passed beyond local limits of jurisdiction.

3. When the decision of an officer making or controlling a settlement of land-revenue would be deemed valid if it had been passed by him within a particular local area, it shall not be deemed invalid or deprived of any of its effect by reason of the objection that at the time when he passed it he was beyond the limits of that local area.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 9 OF 1884.

A Bill to legalize the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of certain functions assigned to the Governor General in Council.

WHEREAS certain functions which are by enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces assigned to the Governor General in Council are in practice discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those Provinces, and it is expedient that these functions should continue to be so discharged, and that their discharge in the past should be legalized;

Transfer to Lieutenant-Governor of certain functions of Governor General in Council.

The sections of the enactments hereto scheduled which are specified in the third column of the schedule shall have effect, and, so far as may be necessary to validate anything heretofore done under them by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, shall be deemed to have had effect, as if the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces were therein referred to instead of the Governor General in Council.

THE SCHEDULE.

(a) Regulations of the Bengal Code.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
V of 1799	To limit the interference of the Zilá and City Courts of Díwání Adálat in the execution of wills and administration to the estates of persons dying intestate.	7
II of 1800	For laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Gházipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty.	10 & 14
IX of 1833.	To modify certain portions of Regulation VII of 1832 and Regulation IV of 1828; to provide for the more speedy and satisfactory decision of judicial questions cognizable by officers of Revenue employed in making settlements under the above Regulations; for enforcing the production of the village accounts; for the more extensive employment of native agency in the Revenue Department; and to declare the intent of section 5, Regulation VII of 1822, touching claims to mú[illegible]na.	16, 17 & 25

(b) Act of the Governor General in Council.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
XII of 1856.	To amend the law respecting the employment of amíns of the Civil Courts in the Presidency of Fort William.	2

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER certain enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces certain functions are assigned to the Governor General in Council, which in practice are now discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those provinces. Thus, by sections 10 and 14 of Bengal Regulation XXXIII of 1800 (for laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Gházipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty), the Governor General in Council is empowered to sanction the allowances and establishment of the dároghas of the stone-quarries referred to, to fix the rate of duty payable in respect of stone excavated from those quarries, and to make further rules respecting the quarries. As these quarries have now become Provincial both financially and administratively, they have long been under the control of the Local Government, which has been in the habit of exercising the powers above noticed, though they are by law assigned to the Governor General in Council.

2. As the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of these and similar functions assigned by other enactments to the Governor General in Council, though in accordance with existing administrative arrangements, would seem to be of doubtful legality, the present Bill has been prepared with the object of empowering the Lieutenant-Governor to continue to discharge these functions in the future and legalizing their discharge by him in the past.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 10 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882; It is hereby enacted as follows :— IV of 1882.

1. For the fifth clause of section 1 of the said Act the following shall be substituted, namely :— Amendment of section 1 of Act IV of 1882.

"And any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette,—

"(a) exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, any part of the territories administered by such Local Government from all or any of the following provisions, namely :—

"Sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one-hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three; or

"(b) direct, either retrospectively or prospectively, that section forty-one shall not apply throughout any part of those territories to any property in which a member of any race, sect, tribe or class specified in the notification is interested."

2. The following clause shall be deemed to have been added to the first section of the said Act from the date on which it came into force, namely :— Addition to same section.

"Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing part of this section, sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall not extend or be extended to any district or tract of country excluded from the operation of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, under the power conferred by the first section of that Act or otherwise." III of 1877.

3. To section 4 of the said Act the following shall be added, namely :— Addition to section 4 of same Act.

"And sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall be read as supplemental to the Indian Registration Act, 1877." III of 1877.

4. In section 69 of the said Act— Amendment of section 69 of same Act.

(a) after the words "is valid in the following cases" the words "and in no others" shall be inserted; and

(b) after the words "Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist," in both places where they occur, there shall be inserted the words "or a member of any other race, sect, tribe or class from time to time specified by the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, in the local official Gazette in this behalf."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE last clause of section 1 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, provides that any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, throughout the whole or any part of the territories administered by such Local Government, the members of any race, sect, tribe or class from all or any of the following provisions, namely, sections 41, 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3), 59, 69, 107 and 123.

54. * * Such transfer, in the case of tangible immoveable property of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards, or in the case of a reversion or other intangible thing, can be made only by a registered instrument.

In the case of tangible immoveable property of a value less than one hundred rupees, such transfer may be made either by a registered instrument or by delivery of the property.

59. Where the principal money secured is one hundred rupees or upwards, a mortgage can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses.

Where the principal money secured is less than one hundred rupees, a mortgage may be effected either by an instrument signed and attested as aforesaid, or (except in the case of a simple mortgage) by delivery of the property.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to render invalid mortgages made in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchí and Rangoon, by delivery to a creditor or his agent of documents of title to immoveable property, with intent to create a security thereon.

107. A lease of immoveable property from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year, or reserving a yearly rent, can be made only by a registered instrument.

All other leases of immoveable property may be made either by an instrument or by oral agreement.

123. For the purpose of making a gift of immoveable property, the transfer must be effected by a registered instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor, and attested by at least two witnesses.

For the purpose of making a gift of moveable property, the transfer may be effected either by a registered instrument signed as aforesaid or by delivery.

Such delivery may be made in the same way as goods sold may be delivered.

2. In a letter, dated the 6th September, 1882, the Chief Commissioner of Assam asked for an expression of opinion from the Government of India as to the effect which the exemption under that clause, of "any race, sect, tribe or class" from the provisions of section 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3) and sections 59, 107 and 123, which are set out on the margin, has upon transactions, one of the parties concerned in which is a member of such race, sect, tribe or class, while the other party does not belong to an exempted class.

3. To this reference the Government of India, on the 13th December, 1882, replied that the precise manner in which the exemption would operate under the circumstances described was a matter of some difficulty; and the only satisfactory means by which an intelligible operation might be given to section 1 of the Act seemed to be the amendment of that section so as to make the exemption from sections 54, 59, 107 and 123 local and not personal.

4. The Chief Commissioner, in a letter dated 12th January, 1883, suggested as an alternative, and in his opinion a preferable one, a power to exempt not persons or places but transactions in which one or both of the parties might be members of the race, sect, tribe or class for which the sections in question might be deemed unsuitable.

5. It was thought desirable to obtain the opinions of the other Local Governments on the two alternative proposals thus put forward, and accordingly, on the 7th May, 1883, a circular was issued for this purpose.

6. It will be observed that the question thus raised was confined to the power conferred by section 1 of the Act to exempt from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123; but, attention having been once drawn to the subject, it was natural that the effect of an exemption from the other two sections of the Act (41 and 69) mentioned in section 1 and set out in the margin should also be considered; and, on looking into the matter, it was found that, while an exemption under either of those sections would give rise to questions very similar to those raised by the Chief Commissioner of Assam in the case of the sections referred to by him, there was this further difficulty in regard to section 69 that the object of allowing any power to exempt from it was not apparent. The circular accordingly asked for the opinions of the Local Governments in regard to these sections also.

41. Where, with the consent, express or implied, of the persons interested in immoveable property, a person is the ostensible owner of such property and transfers the same for consideration, the transfer shall not be voidable on the ground that the transferor was not authorized to make it: provided that the transferee, after taking reasonable care to ascertain that the transferor had power to make the transfer, has acted in good faith.

69. A power conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee, or on any person on his behalf, to sell or concur in selling, in default of payment of the mortgage-money, the mortgaged property, or any part thereof, without the intervention of the Court, is valid in the following cases (namely)—

(a) where the mortgage is an English mortgage, and neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist;

(b) where the mortgagee is the Secretary of State for India in Council;

(c) where the mortgaged property or any part thereof is situate within the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchí or Rangoon.

But no such power shall be exercised unless and until—

(1) notice in writing requiring payment of the principal money has been served on the mortgagor or one of several mortgagors, and default has been made in payment of the principal money, or of part thereof, for three months after such service; or

(2) some interest under the mortgage amounting at least to five hundred rupees is in arrear and unpaid for three months after becoming due.

When a sale has been made in professed exercise of such a power, the title of the purchaser shall not be impeachable on the ground that no case had arisen to authorise the sale, or that due notice was not given, or that the power was otherwise improperly or irregularly exercised; but any person damnified by an unauthorised, or improper or irregular exercise of the power shall have his remedy in damages against the person exercising the power.

The money which is received by the mortgagee, arising from the sale, after discharge of prior incumbrances, if any, to which the sale is not made subject, or after payment into court under section fifty-seven of a sum to meet any prior incumbrance, shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be held by him in trust to be applied by him, first, in payment of all costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him as incident to the sale or any attempted sale; and, secondly, in discharge of the mortgage-money and costs and other money, if any, due under the mortgage; and the residue of the money so received shall be paid to the person entitled to the mortgaged property or authorized to give receipts for the proceeds of the sale thereof.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to powers conferred before this Act comes into force.

The powers and provisions contained in sections six to nineteen (both inclusive) of the Trustees and Mortgagees' Powers Act, 1866, shall be deemed to apply to English mortgages, wherever in British India the mortgaged property may be situate, when neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist.

7. The replies of the Local Governments have now been received and considered by the Government of India, and the following are the conclusions to which they seem to point.

8. In the first place, as regards the power of exempting from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123, it seems to the Governor General in Council best to make it simply a power of exempting locally, that is to say, the exemption should be absolute and cover transactions relating to any immoveable property within the specified area, whether both or one or none of the parties may belong to those races or tribes for whose benefit the exemption is intended. To give a personal character to the exemption and restrict it, as some suggest, to transactions within the area, to which either both parties or one of the parties are of particular races, would give rise to uncertainty of title and other difficulties and doubts noticed by Sir C. Turner and others. With a local exemption clause of an absolute character an intending purchaser has to look to nothing but the situation of the property.

9. It is true that there may be advanced people living in exempted localities for whom the sections in question would provide a law more suitable than that which prevails where they do not apply, but it must be remembered that these people always could, and Europeans, it is believed, generally would, follow the practice of having formally executed and registered documents, and this would to a great extent give them the benefits aimed at by the Act; for it must be borne in mind that in the places in question titles would not usually be complicated, and in any case the sections of the Act referred to are not an essential part of the law, but merely an improvement of it, which is not in force as yet in great provinces like Bombay, the Panjáb and British Burma. Again, on the other hand, it is true that there may be members of wild tribes settled in some non-exempted localities, and that they may find it difficult to learn to act up to the law; but, as has been observed by some of the authorities consulted, wild people scattered in this way among a population the great mass of which is civilized soon get into the ways of the people among whom they live.

In either case the objection is one that must apply to most of our enacted laws, and indeed to a good deal of the customary law of the country. We cannot get a law that will suit everybody; we must be content with a reasonably close approximation.

10. The first section of the Bill accordingly amends section 1 of the Act so as to empower a Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to exempt any part of the territories under its administration from the operation of any of these sections.

11. Next, as regards the powers to exclude the operation of section 41, the considerations to be borne in mind are fully stated by the Chief Justice of Madras in his opinion.

Sir C. Turner observes that the general rule that no one can confer a higher right in property than he himself possesses in some cases worked obvious hardship; and, as the science of jurisprudence advanced, it was limited by the exception declared in section 41, on the principle that, where one of two innocent persons must suffer from the fraud of a third party, the loss should fall on him who has created or could have prevented the opportunity for the fraud. To races which have not made a substantial progress in civilization, this rule appears to Sir Charles Turner to be unsuited for the following reasons, as stated in his own words:—

"Regarding the question in its sentimental aspect, it is certain that a member of a race unacquainted with the refinements of equity would fail to recognize the justice of a rule which caused him to be deprived of his property by what is ex hypothesi a fraud.

"I do not contend that legislation is to be governed by sentimental considerations, but I have heretofore asserted, and still hold, that legislation should only be so far in advance of the general understanding that its justice should be recognized by the more enlightened.

"There is, however, a substantial reason to be deduced from the rule itself, which shows its inapplicability to uncivilized races. The rule affords protection only to a purchaser for consideration who acts in good faith after reasonable inquiry.

"The imposition of these conditions on the purchaser suggests to persons, who have occasion to create an ostensible ownership of their property in others, the prudence of providing certain safeguards. If they are well advised, they are careful to secure evidence of the actual ownership, so that a purchaser, on making due inquiry, must either ascertain the true character of the transaction, or entertain such suspicion of its character that he can no longer assert that he acted in good faith.

"The transactions of uncivilized races in the matter of property are of the simplest character; they are unacquainted with the precautions which technical skill has devised to secure property.

"Again, as society progresses, men are habituated to exercise greater caution in their dealings with their fellows, and have larger opportunities for selecting agents who are reputed either to be worthy of confidence or to be in a position to answer for a breach of confidence. A prudent man selects for an office of trust a person of tried probity and some substance. The uncivilized races have less choice in the selection of agents and less opportunity for forming a judgment of the character and position of their agents."

12. The conclusion to which these remarks seem to point is that the Government should be empowered to direct that section 41 should not apply throughout any particular local area to any property in which a member of any particular race, sect, tribe or class is interested, and it is on these lines that sub-clause (b) of the new fifth clause which the Bill proposes to insert in the first section of the Act has been framed.

13. The discussion regarding section 69 has opened out questions extending beyond the particular difficulty first brought to notice, and it is fortunate that the Government have had in considering them the assistance of Sir C. Turner, who was a member of the Commission by which the Transfer of Property Bill was settled.

The circumstances under which the section was enacted will be found stated in the following extract from his Minute:

"In England, it is usual to confer on a mortgagee, in case of default, a power to sell the mortgaged property without the intervention of a Court of justice; and, where the instrument of mortgage does not confer the power, but does not in express terms negative it, a mortgagee is empowered by statute to sell on the expiry of twelve months after the date of default and of six months from the date on which notice is given of his intention to exercise the power—23 & 24 Vic., c. 145. This statutory provision was, by Act XXVIII of 1866, extended to mortgages in this country to which the English law is applicable.

"On the other hand, the simple mortgage in India did not authorize a sale without the order of a Court, and by Regulation XVII of 1806 in the Bengal Presidency it had been enacted that a mortgage by conditional sale should not become foreclosed without the service of a notice through the District Court, and on the expiry of a year of grace. Inferring the policy of the legislature from this Regulation, the Sadr Díwání Adálat refused to give effect to an express power of sale—S. D. A., 1847-354. In the Bombay Presidency, Mr. Justice Melville expressed a doubt whether a private sale of property in the Mufassal, effected by a mortgagee under a power, would be valid—VIII Bombay H. C., A. C., 113.

"On the other hand, I entertained the opinion, and I believe acted on it before the Transfer of Property Act came into operation, that, in the absence of a prohibition of law, the owner of property was competent to confer on a mortgagee what powers he himself possessed, and that, if a mortgagor having, as owner, authority to sell, created a power of sale in a mortgagee, and the mortgagee duly exercised the power, the Courts were bound to recognize the validity of the sale.

"In Bhanoomutty Chowdhun vs. Premchund Nesgee, XV B. L. R. 28, property in the Mufassal had been mortgaged by an instrument in the English form containing a power of sale, and subsequently mortgaged to a third party by a conditional sale. The first mortgagee then exercised his power of sale, and subsequently to the sale the second mortgagee took proceedings to foreclose. It was held that the purchaser under the power was entitled to notice of foreclosure, and impliedly that a sale under a power might be valid."

"In this state of the authorities," Sir Charles Turner continues, "it fell to the Law Commission to offer for the acceptance of the legislature a proposal to settle the law. It was felt that, in accordance with the principles of freedom of contract, an owner of property should be at liberty to confer on a mortgagee any of the powers which he could himself exercise, and that a borrower might more readily obtain accommodation, or obtain it on easier terms, if he could offer a security which would be speedily converted by the tender without the delay and the cost of an application to a Court of justice. On the other hand, it was recognized that in this country the large majority of mortgage-securities are created by persons who are poor and illiterate in favour of more sharpwitted creditors, and that, in an agricultural country, landed securities are subject to sudden and excessive variations in value, which are rarely foreseen by borrowers. The Commission came to the conclusion that, while more wealthy borrowers in the country and all borrowers in the presidency-towns might be left to deal with their property as they pleased, it was necessary in the present state of British India to create a legislative safeguard for the poorer classes in the country. They, therefore, proposed that the creation of a power of sale should be declared invalid except in mortgages where the principal money secured exceeded Rs. 500, or in mortgages to the Secretary of State or in mortgages of property in the presidency-towns. In Committee, the section was recast. Instead of declaring that a power of sale conferred by the instrument of mortgage is invalid except in the cases specified, the section, as it now stands, declares that in certain cases it is valid."

Sir Charles Turner adds—

"Unless it be held that the express declaration of the validity of such a power in certain cases is tantamount to a declaration of its invalidity in other cases, which I incline to doubt, the object sought by the Law Commission has not been attained, and the validity of the power in cases other than those specified is still left an open question.

"It may have been desirable that the protection the Law Commission intended to confer in the case of mortgages for small amounts should have been extended to mortgages for somewhat larger sums, but I think it is to be regretted that the amendment should have been effected in such terms as to leave the question doubtful whether any protection is given to mortgages of any class or amount, and I trust advantage may be taken of the opportunity to re-consider the provisions of the section. It will be seen that the section, as it now stands, affects only—

"(1) parties to an English mortgage, i.e., a mortgage in the English form, who are not Hindús, Muhammadans or Buddhists (an inexact enumeration of the creeds held by natives of India);

"(2) parties to a mortgage to the Secretary of State;

"(3) parties to mortgages of property in the presidency-towns.

"As the section now stands, I do not see any reason for including it in the class of sections for which certain races may be exempted; I apprehend it was included before it was recast."

14. Section 4 of the Bill accordingly amends section 69 of the Act so as to express clearly what was actually intended, and no power to exempt from the main provisions of the section has been retained; but, as Mr Justice Muthuswami Aiyar has pointed out that there are other classes whom it is even more necessary to exclude from the operation of the exceptional provision in clause (a) than Hindús, Muhammadans and Buddhists, words have been added to that clause to provide a power of excluding them.

15. Section 2 of the Bill is intended merely to remove a formal defect in the Act which has been brought to notice in the course of the recent discussions. It was of course never intended that the provisions of the Act which assume the existence of a registration system should take effect in those tracts which are excluded from the operation of the Registration Act; but the Act omitted to make any express provision to that effect, and that omission is now supplied.

16. The addition which it is proposed to make to section 4 of the Act by section 3 of the Bill has for its object merely to remove a difficulty which has been felt in some quarters as to the bearing which the provisions of the Act relating to registration and the Registration Act have on one another.

10. (1) When, under the foregoing provisions of this Act, a telegraph line or post has been placed by a telegraph authority under, over, along, across, in or upon any property, not being property vested in or under the control of a local authority, and any person entitled to do so desires to deal with that property in such a manner as to render it necessary or convenient that the telegraph line or post should be removed to another part thereof or to a higher or lower level or altered in form, he may tender to the telegraph authority the amount requisite to defray the expense of the removal or alteration and call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter the line or post accordingly, and, if the telegraph authority refuses or omits to do so, may apply to the District Judge within whose jurisdiction the property is situate to order the removal or alteration.

(2) A District Judge receiving an application under this section may, in his discretion, reject the same or make an order absolutely or subject to conditions for the removal of the telegraph line or post to any other part of the property or to a higher or lower level or for the alteration of its form, and the order so made shall be final and conclusive.

"(1) when the licensee or lessee is punishable for the breach, one thousand rupees, and in the case of a continuing breach a further fine of two hundred rupees for every day after the first during the whole or any part of which the breach continues;

"(2) when a servant of the licensee or lessee or any other person is punishable for the breach, one-fourth of those amounts."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

THE main object of this Bill is to give power to the Government, and to any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially empowered in this behalf, to place telegraph lines under or over property belonging whether to private persons or to public bodies.

2. The attention of the Government has recently been directed to the fact that, as the law now stands, the Governor General in Council and his licensees have no power to place telegraph lines upon the land of municipal or other similar bodies or of private persons. In England the requisite powers are conferred on the Postmaster General, who works and maintains the telegraphs in that country, by 26 & 27 Vic., cap. 112, as amended by 41 & 42 Vic., cap. 76; and as it seems desirable that the Government in which the exclusive privilege of establishing telegraphs in this country is vested should possess somewhat similar powers, the present Bill has been prepared.

3. Section 3 empowers the Government or any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially authorized by a Government officer to place and maintain telegraph lines and posts under, over, along, across, in or upon the property of any "person", which term includes a body corporate. It is considered that licensees should have these powers, because the licenses granted always strictly limit the area of the operations of the licensees, and it would be somewhat anomalous for local bodies and private persons to have the power to neutralize the licenses granted by the Governor General in Council by objecting to the licensees' operations, or by hampering them by the exaction of fees for permission to work under their licenses. The powers thus given are, however, to be exercised so as to do as little damage as possible, and their exercise is moreover made subject to important restrictions and conditions.

4. When the property belongs to a municipal board or other local authority, the powers conferred by the Act cannot be exercised over it without the consent of that authority; and that consent may be given subject to conditions. Among other conditions which can be imposed is one requiring that any expenses to which the local authority may be put by the exercise of the power shall be made good; but it will be observed that no provision is made for the payment of compensation on any other account to a local authority whose property is made use of for this purpose, it being considered that, as the construction of telegraphs is a matter in which the public are interested, no charge should be made for accommodation of this sort when it can be granted without inconvenience to the public or expense to the local authority concerned.

5. It may sometimes happen that, though at the time when a telegraph authority desires to exercise its powers over some property of a local authority there may be no reasonable ground for objecting, and the local authority may thus find itself compelled to consent, a state of things may subsequently arise under which the continued exercise of the powers would be felt as a grave public inconvenience or a cause of serious loss. Land, e.g., which was waste at the time the telegraph line was constructed over it might afterwards be required for some important public object or might acquire great value for building purposes, and, as no compensation (except for actual expenses out of pocket) would have been paid to the local authority at the time the line was constructed, it is but just that provision should be made for the removal or alteration of the line in such an event. This accordingly is done by section 5 of the Bill, which empowers the local authority to call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter its telegraph or post, and, in the event of the telegraph authority refusing or neglecting to do so, gives an appeal to the Local Government.

6. In the event, which it is believed will be rare, of a local authority arbitrarily refusing its consent to the exercise by a telegraph authority of the powers conferred by the Bill or clogging its consent with unreasonable conditions, it will (section 7) be open to the telegraph authority to appeal to the Local Government, whose decision will be final.

7. Turning now to the case in which it may be desired to exercise the powers given by the Bill over the property of private persons, it will be seen that here provision is made for the payment of full compensation, the amount of which in the event of dispute will (section 9) be determined by the Civil Court, and that, in the event of a person upon whose property a telegraph line or post has been placed desiring subsequently to deal with the property in such a way as would make it necessary or convenient that the line or post should be removed to another part of it or to a higher or lower level or altered in form, he can (section 10) tender the cost of the work and call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter the line or post, and, if that authority refuses to do so, can appeal to the Civil Court.

8. It may be observed, however, that in practice in this country the power of taking telegraph lines through private property is not likely to be exercised either by the Government or by its licensees except on rare occasions, and then as a rule only to the extent of crossing with the wire, a post being scarcely ever erected on private land. Private property has hitherto been always avoided as much as possible, and it is likely to be still more carefully avoided in future if it is made clear, as it is proposed to do by this Bill, that full compensation will have to be paid for exercising the power over private and not for exercising it over public property.

9. The present opportunity has been taken to make three amendments of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, which experience has shown to be desirable. The first has for its object the emendation of the definition of "telegraph" so as to bring it into more exact conformity with the construction put upon the definitions in the English Acts by a recent decision of the High Court of Justice in England.

10. The second is intended to provide for the regulation of telegraph lines constructed by the Government but leased to companies or individuals by whom they are worked. The position of such lines under the Act as it at present stands is far from clear, and the object of the amendment proposed in section 12 of the Bill is to put them on much the same footing as licensed lines.

11. The object of the third amendment, which is made by section 13 of the Bill, is to prescribe penalties for the breach of the rules made under section 8 of the Act for the conduct of telegraphs worked under license or lease. In such cases, as the Act now stands, the only remedy is to revoke the license or lease, but this course would in most cases cause such great public inconvenience that it is impracticable. The result is that at present there is virtually no penalty for the infringement of the rules made under section 8 of the Act. To remedy this state of things, the Bill adds a clause to that section empowering the Governor General in Council to prescribe by the rules moderate fines for the breach of them.

From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 1218., dated 9th June, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].
Extract from the Tribune of 14th June, 1884 [Papers No. 9].

2. Instead of repealing the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, and bringing the new law into force at once, as was proposed in the Bill as introduced, we have thought it better (section 1 of the amended Bill) to require the Local Government to apply the new law to any place to which that Act had been extended, unless the Local Government comes to the conclusion, and declares by notification in the official Gazette, that the provisions of the Act are not suited to any such place. The Local Government is at the same time empowered to continue in office the members of the present committees as if they had been elected or appointed under the new law for any term not exceeding three years which it may fix. When the new law is thus made applicable to any place to which the Act of 1873 had been extended, that Act will cease to apply, and other consequences will follow, which are set forth in section 12. In the Supplemental chapter, the Local Government is further empowered to withdraw the area of any municipality from the operation either of Act IV of 1873 or of the new law, if the latter has been made applicable. The Local Government will thus be enabled to abolish any municipality constituted under Act IV of 1873, if it appears undesirable to continue municipal institutions in the area under its control.

3. The provisions as to the term of office of members, the removal of members and the filling up of casual vacancies in the committee have been assimilated, as nearly as possible, to the corresponding provisions in the District Boards Act.

4. On the recommendation of the Local Government, we have by section 14 empowered the Commissioner of a division to approve of the election of a president by a second class committee, and to appoint the president of a committee of this class where the committee is not empowered to elect, or fails or does not desire to exercise the power.

5. The provision in section 25 enabling the president or, in his absence, a vice-president to exercise the powers of the committee in cases of emergency has been limited to the power, at the cost of the municipality, to direct the execution of any work or the doing of any act which he considers necessary for the service or safety of the public; and, when he exercises this power, he is required to report his proceedings to the next following meeting of the committee. Where the case is sufficiently provided for by the rules of business under section 24, as to the exercise of the executive authority of the committee, the extraordinary powers given by section 25 of course will not arise, as there would not then be a case of emergency.

6. In section 27 we have provided that nothing done under the Act should be questioned on account of the existence of a vacancy in a committee or joint committee or of any merely formal defect.

7. We have not retained the provision of the Bill as introduced requiring the sanction of the Commissioner of the division to the removal of a paid secretary, and his sanction to the appointment is confined (section 28) to the appointment of a paid secretary and to the rate of pay to be allowed, and does not extend to approval of the person selected. The responsibility for appointing a proper person will thus rest exclusively with the committee. In cases, however, in which Government officers were employed in the service of a municipality before the passing of this Bill into law, section 12 provides for their remaining in the service of the new committee, and prohibits their dismissal unless under the sanction of the Local Government.

8. The employment of other officers and servants (when there is available budget provision) is made subject only (section 29) to what is necessary and proper for the efficient execution of the duties of the committee, and to any rules which the Local Government may make as to the employment of persons appointed to offices requiring professional skill; but power is given to the Commissioner of the division, subject to an appeal by the committee to the Local Government (section 30), to require the reduction of excessively large or expensive establishments or of unduly high rates of pay.

9. We have raised the limit of the power of first class committees (section 33) to delegate the authority to enter into contracts on their behalf to 500 rupees, and have required all contracts for larger amounts on behalf of any committee to be sanctioned at a meeting of the committee before they can be entered into. It has been suggested that separate provision is required for contracts which do not fix the quantity of work to be done, but only the rate to be paid per unit of work; but we are of opinion that these contracts can be brought within this section by fixing a maximum limit, not exceeding five hundred rupees, on the sum which may become payable under them.

10. In section 34 the limit of value above which contracts are required to be in writing has been increased from Rs. 20 to Rs. 100 in the case of first class committees, and Rs. 50 in the case of second class committees.

11. The prohibition in section 35 of members, officers or servants of the committee being interested in contracts with the committee, unless with the Commissioner's permission, has been assimilated to section 62 of the District Boards Act.

12. Section 36, which takes the place of section 99 of the Bill as introduced, has been modified so as to require notice to be given of all suits against committees, or against their officers for their official acts; the sub-sections as to limitation and as to tender of amends being omitted as unnecessary. The protection thus given corresponds with that given to Government and to public officers by section 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, except that the notice required is shorter.

13. In the Taxation chapter the taxes which committees are empowered to propose for the general purposes of the Act are brought together in section 39, a higher rate of tax on buildings and lands being allowed in certain scheduled municipalities, all of which are hill-stations, than that which is fixed as the maximum elsewhere.

14. In the second sub-section of section 39 we have defined the expression "annual value" as meaning the gross annual rent for which buildings or lands might reasonably be expected to let, and we have omitted the first proviso, as, though it has been the practice in hill-stations to let houses furnished, the furniture supplied is ordinarily of small value; and as most of us are of opinion that the rent to be considered in estimating the annual value is the sum for which they would let if unfurnished, we have added words making this clear.

15. Special powers are also given to impose a scavenging-tax and a water-tax as payment for services rendered to the occupiers of any buildings or land or for the construction and maintenance of works for the supply of water from which such occupiers may benefit. No special power has been thought necessary to enable committees to charge fees for the use of schools or other public institutions maintained by them, as they may impose any conditions they may think proper upon persons who wish to avail themselves of the benefit of such institutions.

16. We have modified the procedure for imposing and assessing taxes (section 42) by providing that new taxes leviable by the year should not come into force except at the commencement of the year, and other new taxes until at least six months have elapsed from the date of the meeting at which, after the requisite sanction has been obtained, their imposition is directed.

17. We have enabled the Local Government (section 45), where any tax appears unfair in its incidence or injurious to the interests of the public, to require the committee to take the necessary measures to remove the objection and, if it fails to comply with the requisition, to suspend the levy of the tax.

18. We have (section 49) given an appeal against assessments, on account of octroi, as in the case of other taxes, and we have also enabled officers hearing appeals against assessments, if they entertain reasonable doubt on any question as to the liability to, or principle of, the assessment, to state a case for the decision of the Chief Court.

19. We have (section 52) saved taxes leviable under the Municipal Act now in force so far as they are consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, the new law.

20. We have in section 59 conferred upon the committee a power to remit a tax on buildings on certain equitable grounds.

21. We have made taxes on buildings and lands, other than the scavenging-tax and the water-tax, payable by the owner and also a charge upon the property, and have therefore found it unnecessary to make them recoverable from the occupier if not paid by the owner after notice.

22. We have added a section (62) giving power to inspect the contents of a conveyance or package to ascertain whether octroi is payable by having it brought before a Magistrate for the purpose, if the person bringing or receiving it within the municipality refuses to allow the necessary inspection, and have in other respects amended the provisions of the Bill as introduced on the subject of the recovery of octroi.

23. The provisions of the Bill on the subject of the municipal fund and of municipal property have been brought together in a new chapter (Chapter IV). In this chapter we have provided (section 65) for prior charges on the municipal fund for loans, establishment-charges and payments for maintenance of pauper-lunatics, audit of accounts, and services rendered to the committee by Provincial Departments of Government, and have empowered the Local Government to make rules with respect to the relative priority to be given to the other duties of the committee. We have also (section 71) declared certain descriptions of property held for municipal purposes to vest in the committee, and have (section 72) introduced a clause, based on a somewhat similar provision of the Bombay Municipal Act, providing that the administration of every public institution maintained out of municipal funds shall vest in the committee, but that the extent of the independent authority of the committee may be prescribed by the Local Government.

24. The sections relating to municipal police have also been collected in a separate chapter (Chapter V). We have added a section (78) defining the powers and duties of the police in respect of offences against the Act or rules made thereunder. By this section they are empowered to arrest persons committing such offences when necessary, and are required to give immediate information of the commission of such offences to the committee, and to assist members or officers of the committee in the exercise of their lawful authority.

25. Another new chapter (Chapter VI) sets forth the powers of the committee to do, or to require others to do, or to abstain from doing, particular acts. This and the following chapter, which deals with offences affecting the public health, safety or convenience, take the place of the powers to make rules for the prevention of nuisances, and for entry on private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances, given by section 67 of the Bill as introduced, and of the powers to issue injunctions and make conditional orders as to nuisances given by sections 68 to 70, and this chapter also embodies the additional powers to make rules and other powers expressly given by the Bill as introduced.

26. In framing these sections, the existing bye-laws of the principal municipalities, and the detailed Municipal Acts in force in other provinces of British India, have been referred to, and we have endeavoured to give all the powers not elsewhere given in the Bill which it appears to be necessary or proper that Panjáb municipalities should possess. While there may be municipalities in which some of these powers are not required, these municipalities can be excepted by the Local Government under one of the provisions contained in the Supplemental chapter from the sections giving the powers which the circumstances of the municipality render unnecessary.

27. Instead of enabling committees to make rules regulating for sanitary reasons the crops which may be grown within municipal limits, we have, by section 116, empowered the Local Government to prohibit by notification the cultivation of any crop, the use of any manure or the irrigation of land in any manner, which is reported by the Sanitary Commissioner to be injurious to health, or to impose such conditions thereupon as may remove the risk of injury, and have provided for compensation where the practice prohibited was of long standing.

28. In section 117, which relates to the regulation of offensive or dangerous trades, and corresponds with section 74 of the Bill as introduced, we have omitted manufactories of gunpowder or fireworks, which can now be regulated by rules made by the Local Government under the Explosives Act, IV of 1884, and shops for smoking opium, as these must be licensed under the Opium Act, and the Local Government may, if it thinks proper, instruct Deputy Commissioners to consult municipalities before granting a license under that Act.

29. In section 119 we have extended the power given by the Bill as introduced to make rules for the inspection and proper regulation of lodging-houses to houses occupied by members of more than one family, and have stated in greater detail the subjects with which such rules may deal. This power, with that given in section 115, to prohibit the use for human habitation of houses unfit to be so used, will enable committees to exercise more effective control than hitherto over the arrangements for the accommodation of human beings where this appears necessary for the preservation of the public health, and will, it is believed, be of special importance, not only in hill-stations, but in places the population of which is liable to be largely increased at particular seasons by the resort of pilgrims or the holding of large fairs.

30. Chapter VII provides for the punishment of certain offences affecting the public health, safety and convenience and of disobedience to orders given by the committee under the powers conferred by the preceding chapter.

31. In Chapter VIII, which deals with control, the changes made have been in the direction of assimilation with the provisions of the Panjáb District Boards Act. We have also revised the list of subjects on which the Local Government is empowered to make rules.

32. In the Supplemental chapter (Chapter IX) we have added provisions that copies of rules should be kept by committees available for inspection and for sale to the public (section 160); that rules or bye-laws made under the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, should, so far as consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, this Bill, continue in force until repealed by new rules, which the proper authority is required to make and take the necessary steps for bringing into force so soon as may be (section 161); and we have included provisions for altering the boundaries of municipalities or the class to which they belong (sections 165 to 169), for excepting them from the operation of such parts of the Bill as are not suited to their circumstances (section 170), and for withdrawing them from the operation of the law relating to municipalities (section 171).

33. A special section applicable only to Simla (section 177) has also been added to save the land-tax which has been substituted for the ground-rent formerly charged by Government, and which is levied concurrently with a tax on the annual value of property.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of gaming in British Burma.

2. It has long been the opinion of the most experienced District and Police Officers that the systematic gambling originally introduced by the low class Chinese who infest the towns and villages, and now carried on by them and by Burmans of a similar stamp, is doing great injury to the people of that province. In 1883, on the representation of the Inspector-General of Police of the prevalence of tis and of the inadequacy of the law to repress them effectually, the matter was taken up by the Chief Commissioner, who by a Resolution directed Commissioners to obtain an expression of public opinion on the question. With the Resolution were circulated various papers bearing on the subject, including a Bill for the suppression of unlawful gaming which was before the legislature of the Straits Settlements. Special inquiry was made as to whether the people of Burma desired, and were prepared to accept, a stringent gaming law similar to that Bill.

3. The answers showed clearly that the Burmans as a body regarded the prevalence of gambling, especially as practised in the ti,* as a very great evil. Government officers were almost equally strong in their denunciations of these tis. With a few exceptions the opinions received were in favour of suppressing this and other forms of public gaming, and the Bill proposed for the Straits Settlements was accepted as a guide to the direction which legislation should take.

4. The history of the means which the Courts have hitherto used to check the opening of tis is briefly as follows. For some years after the passing of Act III of 1867 it was held that a ti was a form of gaming, and that the lists and papers used in the ti were instruments of gaming, within the meaning of that Act. This view was confirmed by the High Court of Calcutta in 1869. In 1876 Mr. Wilkinson and Mr. Quinton, as Judges of the Special Court of British Burma, held that tis were lotteries, and that, since the enactment of section 294A of the Indian Penal Code, lotteries were punishable under that section and not under Act III of 1867. It is not clear what effect the learned Judges of the Special Court gave to section 15 of Act XXVII of 1870, the Act by which section 294A of the Indian Penal Code was enacted. However, since the date of this judgment, the prosecution of the promoters of tis under Act III of 1867 may be said to have ceased; tis have been regarded as lotteries and the persons concerned in them have been prosecuted under section 294A of the Indian Penal Code; and until lately no doubt of the applicability of that section to this particular kind of gambling has arisen.

5. Two recent rulings of the Judicial Commissioner have presented a different view of the law. In the first of the cases in question the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate, under section 13 of Act III of 1867, as having been engaged in a ti in a zayat or public rest-house beside a public road. The Judicial Commissioner called for the proceedings, and, having come to the conclusion that a ti was not a game of chance and was mere betting or wagering, he referred the matter to the Special Court. The Officiating Recorder, Mr. Allen, dissented from the Judicial Commissioner's opinion, and held that the conviction was right. Under the constitution of the Special Court the opinion of the referring Judge prevails. The Judicial Commissioner accordingly issued a circular in which his own view of the law is enjoined on the Courts subordinate to him,—in other words, on all Courts outside the jurisdiction of the Recorder of Rangoon,—and in which he lays down the doctrine that a ti is not a game nor a lottery, and that the papers used in collecting the money of the persons who take part in the ti are wrongly described as lottery-tickets. In the second of these cases the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate at Rangoon under section 294A of the Penal Code of keeping a lottery-office. On appeal to the Officiating Recorder, that officer referred the question of whether a ti is a lottery to the Special Court. The Judicial Commissioner held that it was not; the Officiating Recorder that it was. In this case also the opinion of the referring Judge prevailed. The Judicial Commissioner, however, has informed the Courts subordinate to him that his own view of the law is to be their guide. There are thus two contradictory judgments of the Special Court, and two diverse rules of law established for different parts of the province, each Judge holding to his own individual opinion.

6. The object of the present Bill is to obviate the effect of the judgments and circulars of the Judicial Commissioner above referred to, which bar all prosecutions for ti-gaming, and the effect of which has already been to give a fresh impetus to that kind of gambling.

It has not been thought expedient to copy the measure proposed by the Government of the Straits Settlements. The draft Ordinance is a very complicated piece of legislation, very stringent in its provisions, and very likely, unless worked under closer supervision than can be given to it in Burma, to become an engine of oppression. Moreover, it does not seem either necessary or desirable to endeavour to check gambling of every kind. A people like the Burmese must have amusement of some sort. It is quite possible to make gambling an expensive amusement, but to stop it altogether, if the people wish to indulge in it, is beyond the power of the law, and the attempt to do it would probably only result in systematic bribery and the corruption of the police. What appears to be chiefly needed is the repression of the professional ti-gambler, the man who makes his living by going about inducing people to game and as often as not swindling them out of their money. The urgent requisite is a law which will enable the authorities to deal with professional gamblers, and all who aid and abet them, with prompt severity, wherever they may be found. For other purposes the Act of 1867 appears to be sufficient, nor does the extension of all its provisions to the province generally appear even to be necessary.

* The nature of the game or lottery or series of bets called ti is as follows:—The banker, or professional gambler, who makes his living by the game, chooses one of 36 animals and deposits a piece of paper on which its name is written in a hollow bamboo or box. Then his emissaries go round asking people to name the animal so chosen and to back their guess by putting down their money. Any one who guesses rightly gets thirty times his stake; the others lose.

7. The present Bill has, therefore, been framed so as to deal particularly with ti-gaming, for which fresh legislation is urgently required.

Section 2 removes the doubt which has been felt as to the construction of section 294A of the Penal Code, by declaring the game of "ti" and other like games to be "lotteries" within the meaning of that section.

Section 3 similarly removes the doubt which has been felt as to the construction of Act III of 1867, by declaring that taking part in the game of "ti" and other like games shall be deemed to be "gaming" within the meaning of that Act. It also contains other provisions the chief effect of which will be to make it an offence to take part in such games in a private as well as in a public place.

The penalties imposed by section 4 on those who, as managers, daings, &c., conduct or assist in conducting such games have been advisedly made severe. Experience has shown that nothing but great severity of punishment will suffice to check this profitable form of gambling.

Section 6 of the Bill gives power to the Courts to demand security from persons who notoriously earn their living, or part of their living, by gaming of this description. The necessity for this provision arises to some extent from the fact that gambling of the kind which it is the object of the proposed enactment to suppress has been held to be an ostensible means of subsistence within the meaning of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

If this Bill becomes law, the powers in the hands of the authorities for the suppression of gambling will, it is believed, be sufficient and will at the same time be such as to secure, it may be confidently hoped, the desired results without risk of oppression.

PANJÁB MUNICIPALITIES BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. BARKLEY moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to make better provision for the organization and administration of Municipalities in the Panjáb be taken into consideration. He said :—

"When this Bill was introduced last year, I explained that it was required not so much to facilitate the development of local self-government in the towns of the Panjáb, the most important of which have possessed it in some measure since 1862, as to remove doubts as to the extent of the powers of municipal bodies which have arisen from the imperfections of the law under which they are at present constituted, and which have placed the committees in the unenviable position of not knowing accurately what they were legally competent to do, and have thus hampered their action in some cases in which, in the interests of the public, it would have been desirable to leave them greater scope. These defects were probably unavoidable when the existing law was passed, as there had not then been sufficient time to gain experience of the working of municipal institutions in the Panjáb to admit of the framing of anything approaching a complete Municipal Code, and much had therefore to be left to bye-laws to be made by the committees themselves, which can now be more satisfactorily provided for by substantive enactment.

"At the same time, as it was thought desirable to give municipal committees a more representative character and greater powers of initiative than they had hitherto possessed, the Bill dealt in greater detail than the existing law with the constitution of municipal bodies, and it also became necessary to state more fully the powers of control necessarily reserved to Government and its officers.

"Before proceeding to notice the principal changes which have been made in the Bill by the Select Committee, it may be convenient to attempt to give some idea of the number and size of the communities which at present have municipal institutions, and of the amount of the revenue which the municipalities have to administer. According to the census of 1881, the urban population of the province was upwards of 2,400,000, or more than one-eighth of the whole population, and inhabited 238 towns. The municipalities, however, were less numerous, as several cantonments and civil stations not included within municipal limits were classed as towns, and all places with a population of 5,000 or more inhabiting a compact group of houses were similarly classed, while many such places in the Panjáb are simply large agricultural villages with little or no non-agricultural population, except the persons occupied in supplying the ordinary wants of the residents of the village.

"When the census was taken, the number of municipalities in existence was 195, with a total population exceeding 2,000,000, though only 102 had a population exceeding 5,000. The latest returns, which are those for the year ending 31st March, 1883, give a total of 202 municipalities, with a population exceeding 2,100,000 and an income of about 28½ lákhs of rupees. Ten years before there were only 125, with an income of 16¾ lákhs. More than one-ninth of the population of the province reside within municipal limits.

"Of the 202 municipalities in existence, only 46 have a population over 10,000. These have a total population of 1,374,658, with an income exceeding 22,82,000 rupees. Of these, again, only 12 have a population over 25,000, their total population being 835,555, and their income exceeding Rs. 15,69,000. Three of these are cities with a population varying from 130,000 to 173,000 and a total income of Rs. 9,69,000, or more than one-third of the entire municipal income of the province. These are the two imperial cities of Delhi and and Amritsar, the sacred city of the Sikhs, and the centre of the confederation known as the Khálsa, which, before Ranjít Singh reduced the country north-west of the Sutlej under the rule of one sovereign, was the sole bond of union of the Sikh people. Of these, Delhi is surpassed in size by but three inland cities in India, Haidarábád of the Dakhan, Lucknow and Benares, and it is probably surpassed in trade by none; its commerce, including both exports and imports, being, according to the latest returns, over seven crores of rupees. Lahore resumed its place as the provincial capital under Ranjít Singh in 1798, and it continues to hold that place under our own Government. Amritsar, in addition to its religious importance in the eyes of the Sikhs, is, as a place of trade, second only to Delhi, and has large manufactures, especially in shawl wool, silk goods and embroidery. Besides these three cities, only three other municipalities in the province have an income exceeding one lákh of rupees. These are Pesháwar and Multán, both places of extensive trade, and Simla, in which this Council is now meeting. If we add the income of these three municipalities to that of the three great cities, we will find that six municipalities, with a population exceeding 616,000, have an income of over Rs. 14,19,000, which is more than half of the total municipal income of the province.

"It will thus be seen that, of the numerous municipalities now in existence, the great majority are in minor towns, and but a small number are in places of considerable importance. Eight, four of which are in the hills, are first class municipalities, and twenty are second class, the remainder belonging to the third class, which, as was stated when the Bill was introduced, it has not been thought necessary to continue; and the Local Government will therefore have to determine, with reference to each municipality of this class, whether it is fit to be constituted a municipality under the new law. The Select Committee has, therefore, thought it better, instead of repealing Act IV of 1873 and bringing the new law into force in all municipalities at once, and at the same time empowering the Local Government to withdraw any place from the operation of the Act, to require the Local Government, as soon as may be, to decide, as to each place where municipal institutions now exist, whether the provisions of the new Act are suited to that place, and, if they are, to declare it to be a municipality of the first or second class under the new Act. This is provided for by section 4, and, as section 171 empowers the Local Government to abolish any municipality, whether constituted under Act IV of 1873 or under the new Act, it will be able to put an end to any municipalities which it considers unfit to be brought under the new law. This change in the form of the Bill has made it necessary to empower the Local Government to continue in office for a term the members of the present committees when the new law is applied to any place which is now a municipality; and, for the same reason, we have found it necessary to declare, by section 12, the consequences which will follow when the new law is applied to such places, so as to provide for Act IV of 1873 ceasing to apply, and at the same time to maintain all existing rights and liabilities as if the committee under Act IV of 1873 continued in existence.

"In dealing with the constitution of committees we have not thought it necessary, in section 5, to retain the provision of the Bill requiring the sanction of the Governor General in Council to a direction of the Local Government substituting appointment for election for reasons affecting the public interests when no desire for a change has been expressed by the electors. Considering how numerous municipalities in the Panjáb are, and how small some of them are, it seemed better to leave it to the Local Government to decide whether circumstances exist which render a change in this respect desirable; and, as the Bill requires reasons to be given, and any person who is dissatisfied with the direction could lay his objections before the Government of India, no further check appeared to be required.

"In section 14, as the Local Government considered the approval by the Commissioner of the election of the president of a second class committee sufficient, we have altered the Bill accordingly, requiring the approval of the Local Government in the case of first class committees only. In other respects the changes made in the provisions of the Bill as to the constitution of committees have been aimed at assimilating them to the corresponding provisions of the Panjáb District Boards Act passed last year.

"In section 20, the Local Government desired that the concluding words of the proviso, relating to the transaction of business at adjourned meetings whether a quorum if present or not, when the adjournment of the original meeting was due to a quorum not having attended, should be omitted, a report to the Local Government when a quorum was not present at the adjourned meeting being substituted. The Select Committee, however, considered the proposed substitute inconvenient, and that it was desirable to retain the provision in order to guard against the risk of combinations among members to obstruct business by absenting themselves from meetings.

"In the Bill as introduced, both the appointment and the removal of a paid secretary by a committee was made subject to the sanction of the Commissioner of the division. The majority of the Select Committee, however, were of opinion that it was not desirable to carry control over appointments to this length; and section 28 of the Bill as now modified therefore only requires the Commissioner's consent to the appointment, as secretary, of a person not being a member of committee, and to the rate of pay proposed to be allowed to the person so appointed. The powers of control given by the Bill as introduced over the appointment of other officers and servants have also been greatly restricted, but by section 30 the Commissioner is empowered to interfere to prevent the employment of unduly large or expensive establishments or the grant of excessive salaries, while section 29 makes appointments to offices requiring professional skill subject to rules to be made by the Local Government as to the qualification of the persons to be appointed.

"In section 36, requiring notice to be given before suing committees or their officers for their official acts, we have omitted as unnecessary the provisions of the Bill as introduced as to limitation of suits, which is sufficiently dealt with by the Limitation Act, and as to the effect of tender of amends, in regard to which the Courts should require no guidance from the legislature. In consequence of these omissions, we have been enabled to make the section general in its application, while in the Bill as introduced it was confined to suits for compensation for wrongful acts. I shall, however, have an amendment to propose to provide for a point which was brought to notice since the Report of the Select Committee was presented.

"In the chapter on taxation, the taxes which may be imposed for the general purposes of the Act are brought together in section 39, a schedule being added allowing a higher rate of tax on lands and buildings in the hill-stations of Simla, Dharmsála, Dalhousie and Murree than that which is fixed as the maximum elsewhere. This tax has hitherto been imposed only in these hill-stations and at Abbottábád in the Hazára district, and the practice has been to levy it upon the estimated gross annual rental of houses without making any deduction for repairs or insurance, or in hill-stations, where houses are usually let furnished, on account of the proportion of the rent estimated to be paid on account of the furniture. In the Bill as introduced a proviso was added to the explanation of 'annual value' expressly authorizing the continuance of this practice, unless, in the case of furnished houses, the Local Government should otherwise order; but the majority of the Select Committee, while agreeing that, in order to facilitate assessments, they should be calculated on the gross annual rental, no deduction being made for repairs or insurance, were of opinion that the proportion of the rent estimated to be payable on account of furniture should not be liable to taxation, and have therefore omitted the proviso and added to the explanation words making the sum for which a house might be expected to let unfurnished the value on which it should be liable to be taxed. I may say that, in the opinion of the Local Government, there is no sufficient reason for departing from the existing practice, and that I propose to move an amendment restoring in substance the proviso which has been omitted from the Bill.

"At the end of the Bill a special section applicable only to Simla has been added, saving the land-tax, which has been substituted for the ground-rent formerly charged by Government, and which is levied concurrently with a tax on the annual value of property.

"In sections 40 and 41 we have given special powers to impose a scavenging-tax and a water-tax as payments for services rendered to the occupiers of any buildings or land, or for the construction and maintenance of works for the supply of water from which such occupiers may benefit.

"We have added provisions as to the time when new taxes shall come into operation, and have made other modifications of the provisions of the Bill on the subject of taxation, of which I need only say that they are sufficiently set forth in the Select Committee's report.

"In the chapter relating to the municipal fund and property we have brought together the provisions of the Bill as to the constitution, custody, investment and application of the municipal fund, and have added express provisions as to the vesting of municipal property and the management of public institutions maintained out of municipal funds. The Panjáb Municipal Act of 1873, unlike those in force in most other provinces, while, in section 10, it gives the municipal committee control over all property which may become vested in it, is silent as to what property vests in a municipal committee when constituted, and as to the manner in which property may be acquired by committees. As committees are now, by section 10 of the Bill, made bodies corporate, with power to acquire, hold and transfer property, and as property vesting in former committees for the purposes of the Act is transferred to the new committees by section 12, it appeared desirable to include in the Bill some specification of the property which should vest in these bodies. Section 71, which declares the property which is to belong to the committee, is, however, made subject to any special reservation which may be made by the Local Government, so as to enable that Government to retain any public property of the descriptions specified, situated within municipal limits, which it may not be thought desirable to allow the committees to become owners of. There are of course many public buildings within the limits of some of the larger municipalities which are held not for municipal but for Government purposes, and the effect of the section is that property of this nature, as well as any other public property of the descriptions specified which it is not desired to vest in a committee, would have to be reserved by order of Government. The orders given for this purpose will remove any doubt which may at present exist whether particular property belongs to the State or to the municipality. On this point also I propose to move an amendment which will render it unnecessary to reserve public buildings maintained for other than municipal purposes.

"Section 72 gives the administration of public institutions maintained out of municipal funds to the committee, but empowers the Local Government to give orders as to the extent of the independent authority of the committee in respect of any such institution. It will thus be possible for Government to lay down any regulations which may be necessary in regard to the management of schools, hospitals and other like institutions the management and control of which may be transferred to municipalities. As cases may arise in which committees may wish to be relieved of the charge of institutions or property, section 73 enables the committee, with the sanction of the Local Government, to transfer to Her Majesty any property which has vested in it under the preceding sections.

"In the chapter relating to municipal police the only new provision is section 78, which empowers the police to arrest persons committing offences against the Act or the rules made thereunder if their names and addresses cannot be ascertained, and requires them to give immediate information to the committee of the commission of such offences, and to assist members or officers of the committee in the exercise of their lawful authority.

"It will no doubt have been observed that the Bill has grown very much in size since it was referred to the Select Committee, and this is in great measure due to the change which has been made in the form of the part of the Bill at which I have now arrived. Chapters VI and VII, consisting the one of 46 and the other of 19 sections, take the place of 14 sections of the original Bill and of four sections of the present law. I may now briefly state how this has come about. While the present Municipal Act empowered committees to make rules for defining, prohibiting and abating certain nuisances, and for regulating the entry of their officers on private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances, the Act was silent as to many powers which are usually expressly conferred by law on municipal bodies. Some of these powers, which involved interference with rights of property and with the carrying on of particular trades, it was not thought advisable to leave to depend upon the authority of bye-laws made under the Act, and they were therefore expressly conferred in the Bill as introduced. But the Bill still contained a power to make rules prohibiting acts of the nature of nuisances, and regulating entry on private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances, and powers to issue injunctions and to make conditional orders for the removal of nuisances. With reference to this, Mr. Plowden, the Senior Judge of the Chief Court, had strongly urged upon the Local Government the desirability of specifying in detail in the Bill the acts and omissions not prohibited by the general law which should be punishable under the municipal law; and, in the letter of the Panjáb Government submitting the draft Bill to the Home Department, His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor admitted the force of Mr. Plowden's arguments in favour of this course, and expressed his willingness to go further in the direction of expressly defining the authority of committees if circumstances admitted of this. When the Bill came to be considered in committee, it was thought desirable either to append a schedule of municipal offences, which could be made applicable wholly or in part to any municipality as local circumstances might render necessary, or to make such offences punishable by the Bill itself. It was ultimately decided to adopt the latter course, and accordingly these two chapters have been substituted for the provisions of the original Bill dealing with the same subject, one setting forth with some fullness the powers of committees for sanitary and other purposes, and the other providing for the punishment of certain offences affecting the public health, safety or convenience.

"In framing the sections comprised in these chapters the bye-laws at present in force in the principal municipalities were referred to, as well as the bye-laws adopted for the municipalities of the North-Western Provinces, and the detailed Municipal Acts in force in other provinces of British India; and, while we have omitted matters which appeared to be sufficiently dealt with by other laws, as, for instance, the Indian Penal Code, the Code of Criminal Procedure and the Police Act of 1861, we have endeavoured to give in the Bill all powers which it seemed to be necessary or proper that Panjáb municipalities should possess, and to provide for the punishment of all offences partaking of the character of public nuisances which were not otherwise provided for by law.

"Some of the powers given may not be required in minor municipalities, and some of the offences constituted may not cause such injury to the public as to require to be made punishable in those municipalities; but, as by section 170 the Local Government is empowered to except any municipality from provisions of the Bill which it considers unsuited thereto, it will not be necessary that the whole of the provisions of these chapters should be brought into force in all municipalities.

"While we have thus been enabled to strike out the provisions of the Bill empowering municipalities to make rules as to nuisances and as to entry on property for the detection and abatement of nuisances, it has been necessary to continue the powers, given by the Bill as introduced, to make rules regulating other matters in the public interest, as no uniform rules which would suit all municipalities could be suggested. These powers are given by sections 119, and 120, and in the former of these sections the subjects with reference to which rules for the regulation of lodging-houses may be made are more fully stated than they were in the original Bill, and provision is made for making similar rules in regard to houses occupied by more than one family. Section 111 also provides, subject to an appeal, which is given by section 126, for prohibiting the use for human habitation of houses unfit to be so used. The want of powers like these has recently been much felt in Simla, and powers to regulate lodging-houses may also be found useful in places such as Amritsar and Thánesar, where the population is liable to be largely increased at particular seasons by the resort of pilgrims or the holding of large fairs.

"In regard to one matter which has hitherto been regulated by municipal bye-laws,—the cultivation of crops, use of manure or irrigation of land in such manner as to be injurious to health,—the Select Committee thought it better not to empower municipal committees to make rules; and in lieu of this power it has, in section 116, made provision for authorizing the Local Government, on the report of the Sanitary Commissioner, to prohibit or regulate such cultivation, manuring or irrigation, compensation being allowed if the practice interfered with was of long standing.

"Though these chapters add a good deal to what was contained in the original Bill, the additions have been so largely of the nature of enacting rules which are at present contained in municipal bye-laws that it has not been thought necessary to republish the Bill with a view to further discussion.

"In the chapter on the subject of control little change has been made, but its provisions have in some respects been assimilated to those of the Panjáb District Boards Act, and the list of subjects on which the Local Government is empowered to make rules has been revised. In some of the papers which have been considered by us the powers of interference given by this chapter have been objected to as much too wide and as being likely to be abused, but there is no reason to think that Commissioners or Deputy Commissioners will be disposed to interfere under section 147; 148 or 149, unless such interference is necessary to protect the interests of the public; and, if any injudicious interference should take place, it can be corrected by the Local Government when the report required by section 150 is made. It is obviously necessary that some control should exist over the action of corporations charged with public duties, whether their members are elected or nominated, and there can be no more suitable agency for the purpose than the officers in charge of divisions or districts, who will be guided by their local knowledge and experience in determining whether the circumstances have arisen which would justify their interference under the powers given by law, and also whether a suggestion from them would not be likely to induce the committee itself to do what was required, in which case recourse to those powers would not be necessary. Though the existing law, while it gave very large powers of interference to the Local Government, gave no similar powers to Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners, there was not the same necessity as there is now for such powers being possessed by them when the Deputy Commissioner was president of every municipal committee in his district and the other members were in part officials subordinate to him, and in part, unless in a few of the largest municipalities, nominated on his recommendation. There appears to be no reason to think that committees who endeavour faithfully to discharge their duties to the public will find themselves hampered by the existence of these powers of control, or will have any reason to think that they are viewed with an unfriendly eye by the executive officers of Government with whom they are brought into contact.

"In conclusion, I may be allowed to express a hope that the Bill, after the pains that have been bestowed upon it by the Select Committee, will be found to put the law applicable to municipalities in the Panjáb in a clear and satisfactory form, and that, whatever defects in it may hereafter be brought to light by experience, they will not be such as to prevent it from working smoothly and efficiently."

The Hon'ble Mr. Ilbert said:—"Of the various alterations made in this Bill by the Select Committee, there is only one to which I need refer on the present occasion, and that is the inclusion in the body of the Bill of certain powers and provisions which, under the Bill as at first introduced, were left to be given or made by rules or bye-laws. The question of how much should be put into the body of an Act of this kind, and how much power of regulating sanitary matters and suppressing nuisances should be left to be exercised by bye-laws, was discussed in connection with the recent Act for regulating municipalities in the North-Western Provinces; and, in the debate which took place on the passing of that Act, I said that, so far as my own opinion was concerned, I should be disposed to leave a reasonable amount of discretion to the Local Government. The Bill for the North-Western Provinces proposed to leave a great deal to bye-laws, the reason being that the Government of those Provinces had already framed a Code of model bye-laws which were understood to work well and which the Local Government apparently wished to leave as much as possible undisturbed. Under these circumstances, whilst we altered the form of the clause giving power to make bye-laws about nuisances, we did not think it necessary or desirable in that case to insert in the Bill provisions which had not been suggested by the Local Government, and which, if they had been inserted, the Local Government would not have had a sufficient opportunity for considering.

"But the case of the present Bill is different. In the first place, so far from there being in existence any model bye-laws which have worked well in the Panjáb, it is notorious that there has been the greatest difficulty not only in framing satisfactory bye-laws but in working the bye-laws which have been framed. In the next place, the Bill as originally framed went into much greater detail on sanitary matters and with respect to the provisions relating to nuisances than the North-Western Provinces Bill, and as it went so far there seemed no sufficient reason why it should not be carried farther. And, lastly, the municipal authorities themselves did not seem to be particularly anxious to have the power of framing these bye-laws, and they represented to the Local Government that the task of framing them required the possession of an amount of legal skill which would not ordinarily be at their disposal, unless special assistance was given to them by the Government.

"This being so, when the Bill came before the Select Committee last spring, I asked His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor whether he would prefer to leave the Bill in its existing form, leaving all these matters to be dealt with by bye-laws, or to have it expanded by inserting the necessary provisions in the body of the Bill. I pointed out that the adoption of the latter course would involve some delay, but that it would probably save a great deal of trouble in the long run, both to the local authorities who have to frame the bye-laws, and to the Local Government who would have to sanction them.

"The Lieutenant-Governor expressed his preference for adopting the latter course, and that course was accordingly adopted.

"I am very glad that it was adopted, because I think that the addition of these chapters effects a very considerable improvement in the Bill, and also because, after having inspected some of the bye-laws made or proposed under the existing law, I am bound to admit that there is a certain amount of risk in delegating to local authorities the power to legislate about nuisances and similar matters, even when that power is exercised subject to the approval of the Local Government.

"Chapter VII of the present Bill, the chapter relating to offences affecting the public health, safety or convenience, was based, as my hon'ble friend Mr. Barkley has told us, on a comparison of several existing sets of bye-laws; and, when I looked at the first draft of that chapter, I thought that a good many of the rules which it contained were open to serious objection. There were rules which repeated provisions of the Penal Code, of the Criminal Procedure Code and of the Police Act, with modifications which would have had the effect of making those provisions more absolute, more stringent and more severe; and there were other rules which, as it appeared to me, interfered with the liberty of the subject in an unnecessarily arbitrary, minute and vexatious manner. When the draft came before the Select Committee, we applied to it a very vigorous process of weeding, and, with the full approval of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, we reduced its dimensions by, I think, about one-half. Even in their present form these two chapters, as Mr. Barkley has said, do materially affect the size of the Bill, and the Bill has, as a consequence of their addition, grown in bulk since its original introduction; and hence it may be objected that it is in appearance somewhat more lengthy and elaborate than is either necessary or desirable. But it is obvious that the law which will have to be administered is to be found, not in the Act alone, but in the Act plus the rules and bye-laws made under it, and that the more you put into the Act the less you will have to put into the bye-laws. My belief is that, by adding to the bulk of the Act and thereby reducing the bulk of the rules, we have made the law more and not less easy to work."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. BARKLEY also moved that the following proviso be added to section 36 :—

"Provided that this section shall not apply to any suit instituted under section 54 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877."

He said :—

"The right given by this section to committees and their officers to receive notice of action before being sued is similar to that given by section 424 of the Civil Procedure Code to the Secretary of State in Council and to public officers, in respect of their official acts. It goes beyond section 19 of the present Municipal Act, as that section, as well as the corresponding sections in the Municipal Acts of other provinces, has been held to apply only to suits for damages or compensation for some wrongful act committed by the committee or its officers in the exercise or the honestly supposed exercise of the powers given to them by law, and not to a suit for specific recovery of land, irrespective of any damage. Notice to committees where the title to land is in question is quite as important and, if the committee finds that it has made a mistake, is quite as likely to lead to an adjustment of the dispute out of Court, as where the proposed suit is one for damages or compensation ; and, when we omitted the special provisions relating to limitation and tender of amends, there appeared to be no reason for not requiring notice in both cases, as in the section of the Civil Procedure Code applicable to suits against the Secretary of State.

"It has been pointed out, however, in a communication received by my hon'ble friend the Legal Member, that hardship might be caused in case an invasion of the plaintiff's right to, or enjoyment of, property was committed or threatened, under circumstances which would entitle him to apply to the Court for an injunction under Chapter X of Act I of 1877 (the Specific Relief Act, 1877), if he were required to give a month's notice before making the application, as the invasion might be continued, or the threatened invasion might be carried out, before the Court could be asked to interfere. This objection to the section as framed appeared to be a sound one, and the amendment of which I have given notice is proposed in order to remove it.

"I may mention that two sections of Chapter X of the Act to which I have referred provide for the grant of injunctions. Section 54 provides for the ordinary case where the injunction is required to prevent the breach of an obligation, that is, a duty enforceable by law, existing in favour of the applicant. Section 55 provides for the further case where it is desired, not merely to prevent the breach of the obligation, but to compel the other party to perform certain acts ; for instance, to pull down a wall by which lights are obstructed. Apparently the Court could exercise its powers under this section, if necessary, in any case in which a perpetual injunction under section 54 was applied for, as acts done after the application might render a mandatory injunction necessary, though the application was for a perpetual injunction only. The section simply enables the Court to grant further relief. But, if the plaintiff chooses to delay his application to the Court until the injury he complains of has been done, and then applies for a mandatory injunction under section 55, no presumption seems to arise that the case is of so urgent a character that he should be relieved of the obligation of giving a month's notice before he brings his suit ; and I have therefore not thought it necessary to propose to extend the exemption to suits instituted under section 55."

The Hon'ble MR. ILBERT said :—"I think this is a necessary and proper amendment. My own inclination is, as I have said on a previous occasion, to dispense with the requirement of notice in actions of this kind, on the ground that notice is not necessary for the protection of the local authorities, and that in the event of litigation ensuing it introduces an additional element of expense, complication and delay. But the Panjáb officials who were consulted expressed a strong opinion that the requirement of notice would tend to promote the amicable settlement of differences, and accordingly I deferred to their opinion on this point. If, however, the requirement is retained, it certainly ought to be qualified by the exception which the English Courts have found it necessary to engraft on similar provisions in the English Statute-law."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. BARKLEY also moved that in the explanation of "annual value," in sub-section (2) of section 39, the words "and in the case of houses may be expected to let unfurnished" be omitted; that after the words "Provided that" the words following be inserted:—

"(l) where in any municipality, or part of a municipality, houses are usually let furnished, it shall not be necessary to make any deduction from the estimated annual rent of a house in respect of so much of the estimated rent as would be payable for the use of such furniture as is usually supplied in the case of houses let furnished, unless it is shown that not less than one-fifth of the estimated rent would be payable in respect of such furniture, or such deduction is, by order of the Local Government, required to be made either generally or in any class of cases;"

and that the proviso following be numbered (2).

He said:—

"The object of this amendment, which only affects the hill-station municipalities, is to admit of the existing system of assessing the tax upon houses being maintained. While taxes upon buildings and lands are confined to a few municipalities, and therefore yield but a small portion of the municipal income of the province, they are an important source of income in hill-stations such as Simla; and, as in these stations it has been always the custom to let houses furnished without discriminating between the payment made for the use of the house and the payment made for the use of the furniture, the same considerations of convenience which have led to the house-tax being calculated upon the gross annual rent without making any deduction for repairs or insurance have also led to no deduction being made on the ground that the rent really includes a payment for furniture. If a uniform deduction were made, the result would obviously be the same as if the tax were assessed at a lower rate, and the effect of giving power to make no deduction will be the same as if the tax were to be assessed upon the net rental, but at a higher rate. If the deduction is to vary according as more or less of the rent is supposed to be paid on account of furniture, it will be necessary, not only to revise the assessment of every house in Simla, but to discover some standard of valuation by which to determine for what sum houses may reasonably be expected to let unfurnished. The most satisfactory standard obviously would be the rents found to be actually paid for unfurnished houses, but I believe I am right in saying that, if any houses in Simla have ever been let unfurnished, this has been a most exceptional occurrence. I do not know whether the houses taken as Government offices in recent years have been let unfurnished or with the usual furniture, but the demand for Government offices would tend to increase the rates of rent usually charged, the supply of houses to be let remaining the same, and the rents paid for them might therefore be considered not to afford a satisfactory standard by which to estimate rents generally.

"The result of the change made by the Select Committee will therefore be that, instead of estimates of rent being based on a comparison with actual rents as hitherto, the actual rent being accepted as the annual value in all ordinary cases, some deduction must be made from the actual rent where that is not itself exceptional; and this deduction, whether uniform or not, must be of a more or less arbitrary character, in default of any standard of the actual letting value of an unfurnished house being found. It must be a mere matter of opinion whether the deduction in any given case or in all cases should be five, ten, fifteen or twenty per cent. And the committee will be expected to solve this problem correctly for every house in Simla; for I apprehend that, in case of dispute, the burden of proof that the annual value assessed does not exceed the sum for which the house might be expected to let unfurnished must be borne by the committee.

"Another result will be to render a general re-assessment necessary at the very time when the committee will be engaged in considering what changes in its rules should be made before they are republished under the new Act; and still another result will be a reduction in the actual income of the committee of an unascertained amount, which may very probably necessitate proposals for fresh taxation, to enable it to meet its liabilities.

"There will thus be a considerable amount of inconvenience caused by the change in the existing law on this point which the Select Committee proposes to make; and I may add that the only objection to the provision of the original Bill maintaining the existing system, which has been received from any of the places where the house-tax exists, was made by a gentleman in the legal profession practising at Simla, who seemed to think that inequality of taxation must result between furnished and unfurnished houses or houses occupied by their owners. The answer to this is that, where the proviso will apply, houses are not ordinarily let unfurnished, and that the same standard would be applied to the valuation of houses occupied by the owners as if they were let furnished. It has been suggested that books, pictures and objects of art are included under the designation of furniture, but it is not likely that any other furniture would be included in the rents usually charged than such furniture as was necessary to the enjoyment of a house, and if, in any case, a higher rent is paid because a house contains objects not usually supplied by landlords, this case would be excluded by the terms of the amendment.

"Power is also proposed to be taken for the Local Government to order deductions for furniture, so that, if in any class of cases the rule was found to act harshly, this could be rectified by an order of Government prescribing such deductions as seemed proper. Another exception has been introduced, providing for cases in which it can be shown that not less than one-fifth of the rent is payable in respect of the furniture, but I attach little importance to this, as I doubt whether this could be shown in any case in which the furniture would be taxable under the other provisions of the section. I have retained the exception mainly because it was suggested in Select Committee, and, if any one attaches more value to it than I do, it may be allowed to stand for what it is worth.

"The case of furnished apartments, which has once, I believe, been raised in Simla, is different from that of a furnished house. Whether under the rules now in force, or under the Bill, with the proposed amendment, it would be the house, and not the apartment, which would be liable to taxation upon the amount for which it might be expected to let.

"If it is said that the amendment is objectionable in principle as making what professes to be a house-tax include a tax upon furniture, I reply that furniture is not taxed apart from the house to which it belongs, and, so far as it is taxed at all, is taxed only as an accessory of the house. Furniture belonging to the tenant or hired by him from a third party is not taxed. The tax includes a tax on furniture only in the same sense in which, if the letting-value of the house was increased by its having a good garden, it might be said to include a tax upon roses or fruit. The present system has the advantages of simplicity and certainty, and in questions of taxation these advantages are at least as important as precision of nomenclature."

The Hon'ble MR. QUINTON said:—

"As I was nominated a member of the Select Committee to which this Bill was originally referred, I think I ought not to give merely a silent vote on the question raised by the amendment of my hon'ble friend.

"I may say at once that, having been for many years of my life president of municipal committees, I approached the subject with a strong bias in favour of a measure which at first sight appeared so much to facilitate the assessment and collection of a house-tax. Nothing can be simpler than a fixed rate on the gross rentals of all classes of houses. The proposal had also in its favour to some extent the existing practice in several hill-stations, notably that in which we are now living.

"A closer examination of the subject has, however, led me to believe that the facility of assessment promised by the scheme put forward in the amendment could be achieved only by a disregard of sound economical principles, and the apparent simplification of the collection of the tax had not, I discovered, even the merit of success to recommend it, as in one of the papers printed relative to the Bill I found the Simla Municipal Committee asking that powers should be given to realize the large sum of Rs. 15,000 now due to them as arrears.

"The inconvenience likely to be caused by the disturbance of the existing practice in some places did not seem to me an argument of much weight. I have had some trying experiences of the necessity for readjusting municipal taxation; and although at first sight formidable obstacles to any change presented themselves, yet when the change became inevitable the obstacles gradually diminished in proportion and the new state of things turned out to be no worse than the old. Moreover, in framing a law of general application it is impossible to avoid altogether particular inconveniences.

"The amendment proposes to tax, under certain circumstances, chattels in the shape of the furniture of hired houses. If it had been made directly on section 39 (a), and thereby indicated clearly the intention to include among the species of property on which municipalities should be empowered to impose taxation, not merely houses and lands, but the furniture of hired houses, I cannot think that the claim would have been pressed. The unsuitability for taxation of property so perishable in its nature, so changeable in its value, and so easily made away with, has been generally accepted, and, so far as I am aware, the present proposal to treat it differently finds no precedent in the Indian Statute-book. The Municipal Acts of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh authorize the imposition of taxes on lands and houses, and direct, some of them, that the estimated gross rental be assumed as the annual value for the purposes of taxation; but they nowhere lay down that the furniture of a house is one of the constituents of this annual value, or that the owner is to pay the tax on the income derived from his furniture as well as from his house.

"It may be said that this objection only applies in a degree which is practically unimportant to the scheme of the amendment, inasmuch as the latter proposes to tax only furniture which bears a certain proportionate value to the value of the house in which it happens to be, but that this is so does not affect the unsoundness of the principle on which the scheme rests; and only in case of extreme necessity are we justified in adopting unsound economical principles to any extent as a basis for legislation.

"The scheme, however, is open to an objection still more practical, for it is impossible that it should not give rise to inequalities in the incidence of the house-tax. No distinction is made by it between the assessment on an unfurnished and a furnished house bringing in the same rental, so long as the estimated rent payable for the use of the furniture is under one-fifth of the full rental. The owner of the latter house pays a tax not only on his house, but on his furniture, while the owner of the former pays on his house only. Similarly, the owner of the furnished house is placed at a disadvantage as compared with the man who derives an income from letting out furniture for hire. The latter pays no tax on the profits flowing from this source, while the owner of the furnished house is compelled to do so.

"Further, the proposed system will entail separate valuations for separate classes of persons, from which inequalities in the incidence of the tax must arise. One estimate will have to be made for the owner who lives in his own house and is content with scanty furniture, a second for an owner similarly housed whose tastes demand more luxurious appliances, a third for the landlord who has little concern for the comfort of his tenants, and a fourth for one of a more liberal disposition. These several classifications and estimates cannot result in uniformity of taxation, and annual valuations of furniture, if properly carried out, are not likely to create a feeling in favour of the visits of the tax-collector. If the valuations be not annual and be not carefully made, the income of the municipality will suffer, and the reason for the proposal falls to the ground."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR said :—

"I shall vote for the amendment, and, in explaining my reasons for doing so, I will not detain the Council at any length.

"Of course, we are all familiar with the fact that, in England, the practice is to tax the unfurnished house, and we all know the reasons, so that I need not here refer to them. They are those sound economical principles to which my hon'ble friend Mr. Quinton has referred. There is perhaps the less reason to notice them, because I observe that the Select Committee has not been guided by those sound economical principles, and the English practice does not appear to have influenced them in framing the section now under consideration. Had the Committee considered those principles applicable to the case of Simla and other European settlements in the hills, in which alone I believe a house-tax is levied, I can hardly conceive they would, in complete disregard of them, have defined 'annual value' for purposes of taxation to be the 'gross annual rent', and have proceeded to tax that gross rental without any allowance for the cost of insurance, annual repairs and other similar outlay. Whatever may be said for or against taxing chattels, a tax on the rent of furniture is, after all, a tax on profits. But insurance and repairs are direct outlay, and a tax on a gross rental which includes these is, supposing the tax to fall on the landlord, a tax on expenditure which it is infinitely more difficult to justify than a tax on a furnished house.

"Speaking chiefly with reference to Simla, which is the hill-station I am best acquainted with, the principle of taxing the gross rental, without any deduction for insurance or for repairs or for furniture, seems to me the proper one to follow. By section 60 of the Bill, the house-tax is no doubt to be an owner's tax. But that simply means that the owner, and not the occupier, is liable to the municipality for the payment of it. The ultimate incidence of the tax is in no way affected; and it is notorious that the house-tax is, with hardly an exception, paid not by the owner, but by the tenant in addition to his rent. The all but universal arrangement is for the tenant to pay, say, Rs. 2,000 as rent, plus Rs. 200 house-tax at 10 per cent. Formerly the tax was 5 per cent., and when it was doubled, a year or two ago, the extra 5 per cent. was immediately thrown by the landlord upon the tenant. In the ordinary form of leases, of which I hold a copy in my hand, there is a formal clause binding the tenant to pay the house-tax over and above the rent. In hardly any case, therefore, does the tax fall upon the landlord at all. The only practical effect of the section of the Bill, if passed into law as it now stands, will be either that landlords will have to reduce proportionately the aggregate amount demanded from their tenants, or they will simply intercept a portion of the sum paid by tenants which in reality is the house-tax, and which should on all grounds, public and private, find its way into the municipal fund instead of sticking in the pockets of the landlord.

"Again, in 90 per cent. of the Simla houses, the furniture is of the most inferior and worthless description. In former days I was for many years a tenant in Simla under various landlords, and I had generally to relegate to the garret the bulk of the furniture supplied and put in furniture of my own. In nine cases out of ten there is no material difference between a furnished and an unfurnished house. and, as my hon'ble colleague Mr. Barkley has justly pointed out, there is no standard of what the rent of an unfurnished house should be. Why then put the committee to all the expense and trouble of trying to make a distinction in such matters without any appreciable difference but with all the chances of difference of opinion and dispute? Why for such a matter dislocate the arrangements which have hitherto prevailed between landlord and tenant? I can conceive no greater mischief than for the legislature to interfere in this way with the business customs of the community. There may of course be, and doubtless are, exceptional cases in which landlords supply a better class of furniture than usual; and there are cases in which owners occupy their own houses and furnish them both comfortably and elegantly. For such exceptional cases the amendment provides. But it throws upon those who seek exemption the onus of claiming it and of establishing their right to it; and that, I venture to think, is the correct position.

"Lastly, the section as it now stands upsets without sufficient reason what has been the continuous practice ever since the municipality was established—a practice which on the whole has worked well and satisfactorily. I am quite aware that, owing to the wretched way in which the bye-laws under Act IV of 1873 were framed, and to the defects in the law generally, there have been cases of dispute and even of hardship in connection with the house-tax, which led at one time to representations on the part of certain house-proprietors against the taxation of furniture. But I do not believe there have been half a dozen cases arising out of the furniture question during all the years the house-tax has been in force. The causes out of which they arose have been removed, partly by the decisions of the Courts, partly by the revision of the bye-laws; and such imperfections as may still remain will, it is to be hoped, be gradually removed under the new law. This continuous practice, I say, has on the whole worked well. The municipal committee unanimously desire its retention. The community desire no change. I can see no reason why a tax which is customary, which is fair in itself, which is paid on the whole without objection, which is acceptable to the general body of the community, and which is unanimously preferred by the representatives of the inhabitants, should be made to give place to arrangements which hardly anybody asks for, which are in themselves inconsistent, which disorganise business customs, which throw needless difficulties upon the municipal committee, which lessen no one's burdens, and which intercept for the private benefit of the landlord part of a payment which is in reality a public tax and which ought to find its way into the public treasury.

"For these reasons I shall vote for the amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. HOPE said:—"At the stage at which we have now arrived in discussing this question, it may, perhaps, be convenient that I should preface my remarks in opposition to this amendment by a very brief sketch of the way in which this question has arisen. In doing this I shall necessarily have to take the case of Simla, because, although I understand from the remarks of my hon'ble friend Mr. Barkley, and other members of Council, and from other sources, that the circumstances of other hill-stations are much the same, still the present complication has arisen out of Simla, and Simla is the municipality with the working of which we are all best acquainted.

"By rules made under the Panjáb Municipal Act of 1873 it was permitted to levy a tax on "the annual rental of each inhabited dwelling-house." After the introduction of these rules, the municipality, in that rough and ready way of doing injustice which it would appear some people still so much admire, proceeded to establish the practice of taxing on the whole gross rental, inclusive of what was paid for furniture, whereas these rules allowed them to tax on the rental of the dwelling only. If they thought that the rental of an inhabited dwelling-house included all its contents, then I do not know what need have prevented them from levying a poll-tax on the inhabitants and calling that a house-tax. However, in those days, furniture was extremely scanty, and people in general were ignorant of the rights and equities of the case; they simply came up here for a short time to enjoy themselves, took a house on the best terms that they could make, and so matters jogged along. The Simla municipality, however, as the place expanded, gradually carried their procedure so far as to put assessments upon the rent obtained for furnished apartments. Furnished apartments having gradually become much more numerous in Simla, this proceeding attracted attention, and eventually one of the owners of such houses resisted the claim. As to the more strictly legal aspects of a claim of this kind, I propose to leave any exposition that may be necessary to my hon'ble colleague the Law Member. I would merely state here that the question having been referred to a distinguished lawyer at Calcutta, Mr. Evans, he advised that, in the first place, any such interpretation of the power to take a tax on the annual rental as to include furniture, &c., was entirely contrary to all custom and to the usage followed in other well known localities, and that the contemplated assessments put upon gross rental was really a tax upon the ordinary profits of a lodging-house in addition to one on the estimated annual rental. Besides that, he pointed out that in other ways the rules and mode of procedure followed were ultra vires in the particular case, and I believe the municipality were consequently unable to recover the sums for which they made a claim.

"Foiled in this attempt to maintain their position in the face of advancing intelligence and civilization, the municipality proceeded in April last to put forth a new set of rules, with the sanction of the Local Government, containing provisions intended to get over the difficulty which they had already experienced. These rules contained an explanation that 'the words 'rental' and 'estimated rental' shall be deemed respectively to include also any sum paid, or agreed to be paid, or which might be expected to be paid, or to be agreed to be paid, directly or indirectly, on account of furniture, fittings (whether fixtures or not), furnishings and all other conveniences and benefits whatsoever intended to be enjoyed together with the house or other building.' I believe that the municipality are now endeavouring, although the middle of the year has passed over, to enforce these new rules; with what success I am not aware.

"At this stage, however, the matter came into the hands of the Select Committee. They found that in the original draft of the Bill laid before them provision was made for the inclusion of furniture in the taxation of houses.

"Part of section 34 provided that 'in municipalities where houses are usually let furnished it shall not be necessary in estimating the rental to make any deduction on account of the furniture unless the Local Government shall otherwise order.'

"After considerable discussion, a modified form of that provision was proposed, which very much corresponds with the amendment put forward by my hon'ble friend, namely, that a deduction shall not be made unless 'it is shown that not less than one-fifth of the estimated rent is in respect of the furniture.' The Select Committee carefully considered the original and the amended provisos, but have been unable to accept either of them, deeming them economically unsound and practically unworkable. It is this amended proviso, substantially, which my hon'ble friend now wishes to get the Council to re-insert.

"I should here like to refer to a statement of the hon'ble gentleman and to that of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor with reference to one preliminary point. The hon'ble gentleman, if I rightly understood him, said, with reference to the difficulty of dealing with furniture when owners lived in their own houses, that of course the committee in assessing would only take such furniture into consideration 'as was necessary to the enjoyment of the house.' Well, if that be the standard which the committee are intended to adopt, then it seems to me that this amendment is altogether unnecessary, and we need not trouble ourselves with it at all; because it only applies to municipalities in which the houses are let furnished, and, if furniture is taken to mean such furniture as is 'necessary to the enjoyment of a house,' all I can say is that there is no house in Simla in which there is sufficient furniture provided for any enjoyment of the house at all. For that statement I take the support of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, who argued that the houses in Simla are so exceedingly badly furnished that it was not worth the trouble of taking the furniture into consideration.

"However, to pass on to a more grave aspect of my objections, I would remark that this Council of course has the power to make this practice of taxing furniture legal; but I venture to say that it is beyond the power even of this Council to make such a provision either equitable or workable with tolerable smoothness.

"Taking, first, the equitable side of the question, it is perfectly evident that a house is a totally different kind of property from furniture. The moment we attempt to tax the two together, we drift into numerous anomalies and inequities. Why, for instance, should you take the moveables which are connected with a house and tax them, but not tax other moveables? On what principle are you to tax the chairs and tables in a house and not the crockery and glassware? And why, if you were to tax the crockery and glass which belong to the husband, should you not tax the trinkets or other moveables which belong to the wife? Again, we all know that here most of our houses contain in the first place a certain amount of furniture belonging to the landlord, and a certain further amount added by the tenant; but on what possible principle can the furniture of the landlord be liable to a tax, and not the furniture of the tenant standing side by side with it in the same room? I will not go further into these inconsistencies, because they have already been to a certain extent referred to by my hon'ble friend Mr. Quinton.

"Now, my hon'ble friend Mr. Barkley seems to be conscious of this inequity; for he proposes that there shall be some limit of exemption, and this limit he puts at one-fifth. I must confess that I am extremely puzzled to make out in the amendment what sort of a deduction is to be given when this one-fifth has been reached: the difficulty of reaching it I shall notice separately. What deduction is to be made? Is there to be a deduction made of the excess of rental over one-fifth attributable to furniture, or when the proportion is found to reach the fifth is the deduction to be made for the entire furniture? I cannot make out which is intended, though I have thought a good deal over it. It would appear, however, that, whichever view you take, it does not very much improve the case. If we say, for instance, that on reaching the fifth you are to make a deduction of the whole of the furniture, then consider the injustice of letting off a person whose furniture is found to be, for instance, Rs. 2,050 in value, or Rs. 50 over the one-fifth, and refusing to exempt a person whose furniture was found to be worth Rs. 1,950; consider, moreover, the extreme likelihood of frauds being successfully perpetrated in connection with valuation, and so on. But if, on the other hand, you are going to make the exemption only on the excess amount, and also even if you draw any line at all, you are practically after all giving no such relief and exemption as the hon'ble member would appear to think desirable, because the houses as a rule do not, as far as I am able to say, have such furniture as would come up to the one-fifth. Supposing, for instance, that I take a house rented for Rs. 1,000 annually; the one-fifth of that would be Rs. 200. If we capitalize that at 10 per cent. (the difficulties of capitalization I will notice separately), we get Rs. 2,000. I do not think that there is any doubt that houses which let for only Rs. 1,000 a year do not usually have as much furniture in them as would be represented by Rs. 2,000. And in the same way, taking a house letting for Rs. 3,500 annually, it is improbable that there would be Rs. 7,000 worth of landlord's furniture in it. But perhaps, in answer to this argument, I may be asked—Why do you object to all this if it is such a small matter, and the maxim 'de minimis,' &c, may be thrown at me. But my answer is that it is just in small cases that the greatest amount of hardship would occur. The lower you go down and the smaller the rent, the greater will be the amount of the tax taken without redress.

"The economic objections urged against the Select Committee's exclusion of furniture, as far as I recollect them, were only two. One was an objection drawn from the analogy of the course adopted by the Committee in the case of repairs. It was argued that, because the Committee refused to make a deduction on the gross annual value on account of repairs, they ought, in order to be consistent, to have followed the same course in this case and refused to make a deduction for furniture. But the essential difference is that a deduction for repairs is one the amount of which it is comparatively easy to ascertain in all cases. The matter is in fact so well ascertained in different parts of the world, especially in India, that there are some of our laws which contain a provision that 10 per cent. should be deducted on this account. If it had been possible similarly to ascertain with approximate accuracy the average value of the furniture usually let with houses in Simla, possibly the Committee might have taken another view of this question; but it is obvious that this is not the case. Another economic objection taken was with regard to the incidence of this taxation being on the tenant. As to that, I would simply say that to trace the incidence of taxation in particular cases is a most difficult problem, and I should suppose that it would be exceedingly difficult to establish the position that, here in Simla, for instance, there were not some houses for which very high competition rents were paid, and others the reverse.

"Passing on to the practical difficulties presented by the amendment, I would merely state my belief, which I am glad to see has been put in a much clearer form by my hon'ble friend Mr. Quinton than I now can put it, that the present amendment would involve endless disputes and difficulties. First of all it would be necessary to have in every disputed case a list of the landlord's furniture with a valuation of it, and in order to get this a considerable amount of inquisitorial procedure, and discrimination between the landlord's and tenant's furniture, would be necessary. Having got this list, it would next be necessary to compare the value with that of an imaginary standard of houses usually let furnished in Simla, because it is stated here that the deduction is to be 'of so much of the estimated rent as would be payable for the use of such furniture as is usually supplied in the case of houses let furnished.' Therefore, the municipality must make a complete inquiry, and strike an average, and set up a standard in their own minds with which this list must be compared. My hon'ble friend advanced it as an objection against the Bill as it stands that it would be necessary to have some standard of valuation of furniture in order to make a fair exclusion of the furniture allowed for in the rental; but I think that it would be very much more difficult to establish such a standard as he desires for taxing furnished houses in Simla. Thirdly, having got at the whole of the furniture and its value, we arrive at a further difficulty, which is, at what rate are you going to put the capitalization? Is this furniture to be capitalized at a fixed annual rate—10 per cent., 15 per cent. or at what rate? Are you going to include in it insurance against destruction? What rate of interest is to be considered as giving a fair return on the investment? Other minor details will probably suggest themselves.

"In talking of the standard I omitted to say, how will it be possible, in trying to frame this standard, to treat all the different classes of houses that we find here—hotels, boarding-houses, schools, &c.? Are you going to take a hotel here and compare it with other hotels in Simla, or with hotels elsewhere, or with your own ideas of what the furniture of a hotel ought to be, or are you going to cut up the hotel in your mind into private suites and proceed to tax them accordingly? For my own part I cannot foresee the amount of dispute and difficulty which may arise out of this matter.

"There is another point I must notice, and that is, whether owners or tenants cannot contract themselves out of this provision of the amendment altogether. The municipality may have to deal with a contract, duly signed and registered, in which it is provided that so much is to be paid for the house and so much for the use of the furniture. Now, if people can contract themselves out of this amendment, then the putting it in is purely illusory. If, on the other hand, they cannot contract themselves out of it, then it appears to me we are asked to sanction an extraordinary interference with the right of private contract and arrangement.

"Another consideration is that such a provision as this is exceedingly impolitic and undesirable in the interests of the whole community, because it imposes a penalty on the good furnishing of houses. If the furniture is put in distinct from the rent, there will be a practical encouragement to landlords to invest a fair amount of capital in furniture, and they will have the assurance that they will be able to reap from that investment what would be a fair and reasonable profit, undisturbed by any whimsical and fanciful legislation.

"With regard to what fell from my hon'ble friend Mr. Barkley as to the difficulties involved in carrying out the provision which the Bill as now before us proposes, I would contend that, so far from this Bill causing any special difficulties, it would cause the avoidance of difficulties. Why the municipality of Simla cannot in the course of the next two or three months make a revaluation of furnished houses, if called upon to do so, I am unable, notwithstanding the objections brought forward, to perceive. When once the deduction has been made we shall hear no more of it, whereas in the other case, owing to the action of the municipality, we shall be liable to be perpetually involved in disputes, and to be constantly supplying funds to a very worthy branch of the professional community.

"In reply to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor's final recommendation of the amendment, I have only to say that, if the present practice be customary, we are not called upon to continue bad customs. That the tax has been paid without objection by the people generally I simply attribute to the fact of the question never hitherto having been properly raised. I feel certain that, if, now that it has been properly raised, the Council were to allow the existing system to be continued, the difficulties arising from it would be numerous and intricate. Further, with regard to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor's remark that the continuance of this system is desired unanimously by the representatives of the people, I would say that, to the best of the information at my disposal, it is not by any means unanimously desired by the members of the municipal committee, some of whom are strongly opposed to it. But perhaps that is hardly a point within the cognizance of this Council, or on which it is necessary to offer an opinion.

"In conclusion, I would urge that the amendment is economically unsound, that it is practically unworkable, that it is undesirable and prejudicial to the interests of the community, and I trust that the Council will reject it accordingly."

"The Hon'ble MR. ILBERT said:—I must oppose this amendment. Its practical importance is trifling, for it affects only a small number of European houses in Simla and one or two other hill-stations; and, having regard to its very limited scope, I cannot help agreeing with my hon'ble friend Mr. Quinton that the practical inconvenience likely to be caused by leaving the Bill in the form in which it was settled by the Select Committee has been enormously exaggerated. My own belief is that the insertion of the proviso moved as an amendment will produce far greater difficulties and complications than its omission, and that its chief use will be to provide food for the members of my own learned profession. The question which this amendment raises was considered very carefully by the Select Committee, and the conclusion to which the majority of us came was that, although we were very anxious—I may say extremely anxious—to meet the wishes of the Simla municipality on this and other points, yet after thrashing the question out we found that it was really impossible for us to do so. There is a very attractive simplicity about the practice of taxing a house on the rent actually paid for it, without regard to the consideration that part of the rent represents the hire of furniture; and I do not in the least blame the Simla municipal authorities for having adopted this practice under the circumstances with which they had to deal. But a practice of this kind belongs to a state of things which, to the regret of some, to the satisfaction of others, but by the admission of all, is passing away in the Panjáb and in other parts of India. It belongs essentially to what may be called the pre-legal age. It is one of the conditions of the existence of such a simple, rough and ready, easy-going practice that it should not be too minutely scrutinised, and, above all, that you should not attempt to formulate it. The moment you attempt to do that its imperfections start to the surface, and you find it impossible to overlook them. If you lay down a simple unvarying rule, you are at once struck with the unfairness which results from it; if, on the other hand, you attempt to introduce qualifications and exceptions, you leave gaps through which a lawyer of the most moderate intelligence can with the greatest ease drive a coach-and-six. The history of the practice here in Simla very well illustrates what I have been saying. For a long time the practice of making no distinction between the rent of furnished and of unfurnished houses for the purposes of taxation went on without much friction or objection. And the reason is not far to seek. It is that the furniture which is ordinarily supplied by landlords in what are called 'furnished houses' in Simla is apt to approach the infinitesimal. I very well remember that among the pieces of practical advice which my friend Sir Arthur Hobhouse gave me before I came out to India was this. 'Remember,' he said, 'that in Simla a furnished house means a house without furniture.' But, although this is the rule, I am bound to admit that there are exceptions, and I am glad to say that there are some Simla landlords who deal more liberally with their tenants in the matter of furniture; and the fact that the practice of taxing furniture supplied by landlords tends to check the growth of this liberal practice, and to keep down the standard of what a landlord ought to supply, is one of the reasons why I object to this amendment.

"Well, as I have I said, for these reasons the practice of taxing furniture went on for some time without much dispute or objection. At last a time came when the Simla municipal authorities—very unwisely as I think—proposed to tax a householder on what was obviously not rent in the ordinary sense, but the price paid for the kind of accommodation usually given in hotels. The attempt was naturally resisted, and very properly failed. Then the local authorities proceeded to draw up a set of elaborate rules, with any number of explanations and provisos, by which they attempted to cover the ordinary cases of what are facetiously called 'furnished houses,' and to exclude such cases as that of which I have been speaking. We had these rules before us in committee, and we were all of opinion that they would not work, and I do not believe that even the legal ingenuity of my hon'ble friend Mr. Barkley would be able to frame a proviso which would work in the way in which his proviso is intended to work. I think I see a way of walking through his proviso, but I do not intend to disclose it at this moment. The fact is that, when you attempt to stray away from the broad high road of ordinary law in such matters as taxation, and strike out short cuts of your own, you are almost certain to land yourself either in a quagmire or in a labyrinth. Simla is not the only place in the world where taxes are levied on houses; Simla is not the only town in the world where houses are commonly let furnished. But I am not aware of any precedent either in English or in Anglo-Indian law for such a proviso as that embodied in my hon'ble friend Mr. Barkley's amendment, and you may feel sure that a rule which has such obvious recommendations on the score of apparent simplicity would have been adopted elsewhere if a wider experience than is obtainable here had not shown that it was either objectionable or impracticable.

"The Lieutenant-Governor has told us that the course which we propose to adopt is inconsistent and illogical, and that, if we wish to follow the English practice, we should follow it more closely. I quite admit that, in order to be perfectly fair, we ought to follow the English precedent and require the tax to be levied not on the gross annual value but on the net annual value, after making deductions for repairs and insurance. Our reason for not doing so was this. We found that the simpler and ruder rule of taxing on the gross and not on the net annual value prevailed in Bengal and some other parts of India, and we thought that we might relieve our Simla friends from the obligation of being in advance of Calcutta in this repsect.

"If, however, the Lieutenant-Governor wishes to propose that the assessment should be on the net annual value, I should be quite willing to support an amendment to that effect."

The Hon'ble Mr. BARKLEY said:—

"With reference to the remarks of my hon'ble friend Mr. Quinton, I believe his objection to the amendment substantially is that it would lead to inequality of taxation. He put the case of unfurnished houses; but this case does not arise, as in the places where the amendment will apply the practice of letting houses unfurnished does not exist. Then he referred to the variety in the amount of furniture in different houses; but it is not proposed by the proviso to make the tax vary with the amount of furniture in a house. It is the rent which would be 'payable for the use of such furniture as is usually supplied in the case of houses let furnished' for which it proposes to allow no deduction, and the amount of furniture which a landlord is usually expected to supply when he lets his house as a furnished house is, in any given station, pretty well known.

"As regards the observation of my hon'ble friend Mr. Hope, that the Simla municipal committee had included furniture in the tax levied on the letting value of houses as a rough and ready way of doing injustice, it is, I think, hardly fair to the committee to suggest that it aimed at doing injustice. Whatever may be thought of the extent to which the system of assessing on the full rent paid has been carried, this system is not an innovation but has prevailed ever since the house-tax was imposed, and there is no reason to think that the committee ever intended to demand anything more than what appeared to it to be a proper assessment under the circumstances." (MR. HOPE here said he was aware that the tax was from the first assessed on the rent of furnished houses, and did not mean to suggest that the committee had introduced a new system of assessing.) "As to furnished apartments, I have already pointed out that neither under the rules now in force nor under the Bill could the tax be assessed upon the rent paid for such apartments, and it is therefore unnecessary to consider them.

"As has already been shown in this debate, it would be as easy to base a charge of injustice upon no deduction being made on account of repairs and insurance as upon none being allowed for furniture; and, if the estimate of my hon'ble friend, that in most cases not more than two per cent. of the rent represents furniture, be correct, it can scarcely be said that the hardship of making no deduction is very great. My hon'ble friend the Legal Member has indeed quoted a remark made to him by Sir Arthur Hobhouse that a furnished house in Simla is to be understood as meaning a house without furniture. If we are to accept this as a correct statement of the case, there is no question before the Council.

"As regards the deduction allowed when one-fifth of the estimated rent is payable in respect of furniture, I have already said that I attach no importance to this. It was proposed in committee as a check which would exclude extreme cases, but the suggestion was not mine.

"My hon'ble friend Mr. Hope again urged that the proviso would lead to frequent disputes, and that in case of dispute a valuation of the furniture would be necessary. He referred to what a house might be expected to let for furnished as an imaginary standard, but this implies that the rent at which an unfurnished house would let is well known, while the reverse is the case. Houses are ordinarily let with their furniture, and, unless it is alleged that something more than usual has been supplied and that the rent has been increased on this account, no question as to the amount of furniture in the house would arise. The imaginary standard in Simla which is likely to lead to disputes is the sum for which a house may be expected to let unfurnished. Supposing that, as suggested in any case, a deduction of two per cent. from the rent actually paid is proposed to be allowed, the owner may claim a deduction of 10 or 15 per cent., and it might not be found very easy to show that the house which he lets furnished for Rs. 1,000 would let unfurnished for even Rs. 800, in the absence of experience of what the demand for unfurnished houses is. It is for those who propose a change in the present system of assessment to show that it will work satisfactorily.

"When we start with the rent paid for furnished houses, no question of the possibility of capitalizing the value of the furniture could arise unless it was proposed to make a deduction on this account.

"As regards the power of contracting out of the proviso, no doubt, if landlords in general and tenants in general agreed that any charge made for furniture should be separated from the rent of the houses, the proviso would cease to apply, as houses would then cease as a rule to be let furnished. But no one contract would have this result. If the municipality were bound by the terms of the contract between landlord and tenant, they might agree that the rent of the house should be one rupee and that of the furniture one thousand rupees, and demand that the tax should be calculated upon the one rupee. But the tax is not upon the rent agreed upon, but upon the rent for which the property may reasonably be expected to let; and the committee would therefore be entitled, if the amendment passes, to estimate what the house would let for with the usual quantity of furniture.

"We have been told by my hon'ble friend the Legal Member that he thinks he sees a way of getting out of the proviso if accepted, but he has given us no hint of what it is. Of course, it is impossible to give any opinion beforehand as to what it may be possible for legal ingenuity to do, but, until the supposed way is pointed out, I can scarcely be expected to discuss the feasibility of passing along it."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said:—

"I came into this room today with a very great desire, I confess, to support this amendment, because I understood that it met with the approval of my hon'ble friend the Lieutenant-Governor, and it would always be my wish to agree with him, particularly upon a question not in itself of any great importance, in regard to a Bill relating entirely to his own province, and also because I understood it to be the wish of those who represent the community which is considered to be most immediately interested in the result of this motion. But, after listening with great care to the arguments brought forward on both sides,—and I may say that I do not intend to prolong this discussion by adding any arguments of my own,—the arguments against the amendment appear to me to be so strong that I cannot give it my support. It is with some reluctance that, for the reasons which I have stated, I have come to that conclusion; but it does seem to me that much practical inconvenience would arise out of the amendment, and that it is possible that a great number of legal questions would be raised upon it which would lead to great litigation. It appears to me also to be an amendment inconsistent with sound principles of taxation, and it must be borne in mind that, although this subject has been discussed this morning with especial reference to Simla, nevertheless the amendment is one of a general character which is to be applied to every municipality in the Panjáb which falls under the definition of a municipality in which houses are let furnished. I do not desire to raise any verbal arguments against the amendment, but I think a good deal of dispute might come out of that word 'usually' which occurs in it; and, looking at the matter as a whole, I am compelled to say that the arguments brought forward today against Mr. Barkley's proposal are such as to convince me that it would not be consistent with sound legislation to accept it; and therefore, so far as I am concerned, I shall be obliged to vote, though very reluctantly, against it."

The Motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. BARKLEY also moved that at the end of clause (a) of section 71 the following words be added:—

"which have been constructed or are maintained out of the municipal fund."

He said:—"The object of this amendment is to limit the generality of the words 'public buildings of every description' in the description of the property which, unless specially reserved by the Local Government, is declared by the Bill to vest in municipal committees. While it is right that the public buildings required for the purposes of the Act should be vested in the committee, it is not difficult to give instances of public buildings which ought not to be so vested. As examples I may mention the Government College at Lahore, churches where the buildings are public property, post-offices and telegraph-offices, the public offices at Simla of the Government of India as well as of the Local Government, and official residences. As the section stands, it would be necessary that all such buildings should be specially reserved by the Local Government, and it would therefore be necessary for the Local Government, before declaring any place to be a municipality under the new law, to ascertain what public buildings it should order to be reserved. The amendment will obviate this, so far as public buildings are concerned, though special reservations will still have to be made in some other cases, such as the grand trunk road or other provincial high roads."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. BARKLEY also moved that in section 72, for the words "municipal funds," the words "the municipal fund" be substituted. He said :—"This amendment is merely formal, to bring the language of the section into harmony with that of section 67 and the remaining sections of Chapter IV."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. BARKLEY then moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR said :—

"Before proceeding to make such few remarks as I have to offer generally upon the Bill, I wish to take this opportunity to acknowledge with gratitude the consideration and kindness shown to me by the Select Committee in inviting me to attend their meetings informally and discuss with them various matters of principle on which at one time there threatened to be material difference of opinion. The result of these deliberations has been that a common understanding has been arrived at on most points of importance, and the Bill is presented in a form which, although I cannot say it is in all respects what the Local Government would have desired, can still be accepted as suitable, and in which I have not thought it necessary to move in this Council any amendment of importance in addition to the amendments which have been proposed by my hon'ble colleague Mr. Barkley.

"The chief difficulty I have all along felt in connection with the Bill arises from the vast variety of municipalities with which we have to deal, and the impossibility of applying uniform conditions to all of them. It is difficult for any one unacquainted with the history of municipal institutions in the Panjáb fully to appreciate the difference between this province and the other provinces of India. The system of municipal taxation and administration in the Panjáb is in reality founded upon the chúngi system inherited by us from the Sikhs. These chúngi collections were made by the Native Government in every considerable village and town in the province, and after annexation they were continued in most places by the executive orders of the British authorities, the proceeds being devoted in the first place to police, and then to municipal improvements under the management of the Magistrate assisted by a committee of the townsmen. As the country progressed under our administration and the necessity for legislation arose, these primitive local bodies were in due time converted into legally constituted municipalities under sundry Municipal Acts. Thus, in 1871-72, we find there were no fewer than 324 towns and places in the province in which municipal income was raised. Of these, two were constituted under the old Municipal Act, XXVI of 1850; 127 were constituted under Act XV of 1867; while 195 were minor towns in which the municipal income was raised under executive orders in accordance with previous custom. After Act IV of 1873 was passed, the circumstances of all these minor towns were inquired into; 69 of them were formally brought under the new Act, while in the remainder the municipal form of taxation was abandoned and the chaukídárí system established in its stead.

"To this gradual historical development of municipal institutions is due not only the fact that, of the entire municipal income raised by taxation, no less than 96 per cent. is derived from octroi, which is only the old chúngi purified from certain abuses, but also the circumstance that we have in the Panjáb a larger number and a greater variety of municipalities than is usually found elsewhere—commencing, as they do, with what are little better than agricultural villages, merging by insensible degrees into towns, and from towns into cities,—the old capitals of dynasties and provinces such as Delhi, Amritsar, Lahore, Multán and Peshawar,—and ending with the British settlements in the hills, where the arrangements are regulated almost exclusively by European requirements.

"We have now in the Panjáb 202 municipalities constituted under Act IV of 1873, containing a population of 2,118,236, and with a municipal income of over Rs. 28,00,000. The number of municipalities in the Panjáb is nearly double that in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh; and it may be instructive, as showing the kind of material with which we have to deal, if I compare on one or two points the statistics of the two Provinces. We have in the Panjáb 202 municipalities against 107 in the North-Western Provinces, or as nearly as possible double. The average population, however, is only 10,500 against 26,600, or considerably less than half. The largest population in the Panjáb is 173,000; in the North-Western Provinces 261,000. In the Panjáb, 98 municipalities or 48½ per cent. have a population under 5,000; in the North-Western Provinces there are only three. We have 95 municipalities with an income under Rs. 5,000, the North-Western Provinces has 15; and, while there are in the Panjáb 146 municipalities, or 72 per cent. of the whole, whose income is less than Rs. 10,000, there are in the North-Western Provinces only 44 such.

"It will thus be seen that in the Panjáb we have to deal with a comparatively large number of municipalities, with municipalities varying greatly in their circumstances and with incomes ranging from over Rs. 3,00,000 on the one hand, to less than Rs. 1,000 on the other; that, as pointed out by Mr. Barkley, six municipalities out of the 202 absorb half the income; and that the great majority consists of petty towns, some of them only agricultural villages, in which the arrangements differ little from the old traditional arrangements we inherited from the Native Government.

"Of course, the danger of dealing with municipalities of such varied types in one Act, especially under the influences which surround us in Simla, is the danger of sacrificing the rural communities to the interests of the large cities, and perhaps to the interests of the European settlements in the hills. On the one hand, in the petty municipalities, no change in the law is really required. We can get on very well with Act IV of 1873, and even the new arrangements called for by the local self-government policy have already been successfully carried out under that Act. On the other hand, in Simla and in the large towns in the plains, a thorough revision of the Act of 1873 had become a pressing necessity. On the whole, however, although from some points of view it might have been preferable to have limited the operation of the present Bill to the larger municipalities, leaving the minor towns under the Act of 1873, I think the Bill now before us has successfully dealt with the difficulty. At the same time, it must be admitted that the Bill is in many respects a compromise between two widely different sets of requirements, and the result necessarily is that, on the one hand, less power has been conferred on advanced municipal committees, like that of Simla, than might have been entrusted to them; and, on the other hand, the powers of the Local Government over the petty corporations have been curtailed to a greater extent than was perhaps desirable.

"I trust that the action to be taken under section 4 of the Bill will not be unduly hurried, but that ample time will be taken to carefully ascertain the suitability or unsuitability of the Act to the various municipalities. There are, of course, some to which the Act can be extended at once without hesitation or further inquiry. There are a few, chiefly in frontier districts, to which it is impossible to say that the Act will probably be extended at any time in the immediate future. But, with respect to the great majority of municipalities, careful inquiries will be necessary, one by one, in order to determine, first, the general suitability or otherwise of the Act, and second, the particular provisions, if any, to be excepted under section 170. All this will require much time, much correspondence and much careful thought, both on the part of the Local Government and of executive officers in all grades. The work which has fallen upon the officers of the Panjáb Commission during the last 18 months has been unusually heavy. I cannot press them further, but am bound to treat them with the most indulgent consideration; and I wish to take this opportunity publicly to acknowledge, with gratitude, the zeal, the energy, the loyalty and the ability with which, notwithstanding the unusually heavy calls upon them in other departments of the administration, officers of all ranks have laboured to make the Government policy a success in the Panjáb. I cannot complain if people do not read the attractive pages of the Panjáb Gazette. But any one who will take the trouble to look over the numbers of that amusing publication which have appeared during the last twelve months will be able to form some slight idea of the work that has been done. To say nothing of the District Boards Act and the constitution of committees and boards under its provisions,—a subject which has quite a literature of its own,—we have, without waiting for the present Bill, framed, under the provisions of Act IV of 1876, municipal constitutions differing in no essential respect from the constitution to be enacted in Chapter II of the Bill, and applied them to 117 municipalities in the Province, and, in nearly all of these, committees constituted largely on the elective system have been already appointed. That more has not been done is owing solely to the impossibility of exacting more from zealous officers already greatly overworked.

"There remain two points in connection with the Bill to which, although they are purely matters of detail, I should like to draw attention. The first is the provision in section 20 that, when a meeting is adjourned for want of a quorum, the adjourned meeting may dispose of the business whether there is a quorum or not. The operation of this section will have to be very carefully watched; for it may encourage packed meetings and enable minorities to carry party schemes of their own, and the knowledge that business will go on whether there is a quorum or not may tempt indolent members to stay away. It would, I think, have been safer to adopt the recommendation of the Local Government to the effect that, if there should not be a quorum at the adjourned meeting, the president should at once report the matter for the orders of the Local Government, leaving the Local Government to deal with the case under its general powers of control as a case of neglect of duty.

"Lastly, I wish to explain that section 28 of the Bill is not in accordance with the wishes expressed by a large and influential section of the Simla community last year. It will be remembered that, when the Simla election rules were under discussion in the summer of 1883, a large meeting of the United Service Club represented that, in any scheme for the municipal administration of Simla, one of three essential principles which should find place was that the appointment and dismissal of the paid secretary should be subject to the approval of the Commissioner of the division or of the Local Government. About the same time a similar representation was made by the Northern India Trades Association. These views seemed to be moderate and reasonable, and the Local Government promised as far as lay in its power to give effect to them. I have accordingly done my best, but have not succeeded. I think it right to make the above explanation, but the matter is not of sufficient importance that I should divide the Council upon it."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN TELEGRAPH ACT, 1876, AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. HOPE introduced the Bill to facilitate the construction of Telegraphs, and to amend the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Messrs. Gibbs and Ilbert and the Mover. He said:—

"In making this Motion I do not know that it is necessary for me to add very much to what I said regarding the scope of this Bill when I asked for permission to introduce it. It is a Bill which will give power to the Government and its licensees to construct and maintain lines of telegraph over or upon property belonging to private persons or public bodies. In the details of the Bill it will be seen that we have, in the first place, as regards all property on which lines are constructed, provided that the telegraph authority shall not acquire any right over such property other than that of a user, and that he shall do as little damage as possible. Beyond that, when the property belongs to a local or public body,—called local authority here,—the power given by the Act cannot be exercised over it without the consent of that authority; and it is provided that the local authorities shall be reimbursed for any expenses to which they may be put in the exercise of the power. No compensation, however, will be awarded to them, and they will not be allowed to make any charge for the accommodation thus afforded to the public. On the other hand, in the case of private property, full compensation will be paid for all damage sustained in consequence of the exercise of these powers. Provision has also been made for the removal of a line of telegraph in the event of circumstances arising on some future occasion which render it undesirable, or inconvenient or prejudicial to private rights. In the one case—the case of the local authorities—a simple order will suffice to remove it; and in the other case any dispute may be referred to the District Judge.

"As regards the general amendment of the Telegraph Act, we have added one more amendment to the two previously mentioned; that is to say, the insertion of a few words in harmony with the recent amendment of the English Act, so as to make it quite clear that telephones are within the operation of the Indian law."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. HOPE also moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the local official Gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments might think fit.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

BURMA GAMING BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. ILBERT moved for leave to introduce a Bill to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of Gaming in British Burma. He said:—

"The object of this measure is to put down certain forms of gambling which are prevalent in British Burma, and which are without doubt a fertile source of crime in that province. The particular form of gambling for which legislative provision appears to be specially needed is that which is known in Burma as the 'ti' or 36-animal game. You would probably wish to know what this game is against which the legislative powers of the Council are invoked. It is really very simple. The modus operandi appears to be this. Your banker or professional gambler, who makes his living by the game, chooses one of 36 animals, and deposits a piece of paper on which its name is written in a hollow bamboo or box. Then his emissaries go round asking people to name the animal so chosen and to back their guess by putting down their money. Any one who guesses rightly gets thirty times his stake: the others lose. The theory is that the winning animal is named beforehand by the banker, but there is reason to believe that the theory does not strictly conform to the practice, and that the banker usually so arranges matters as to select the animal on which the smallest amount is staked.

"Now, the question which has been exercising the judicial minds of British Burma for a good many years past has been whether this form of amusement—I will use a neutral term—is a kind of gaming which can be hit under the Public Gambling Act, or is a lottery within the meaning of the Penal Code, or whether it merely constitutes a series of bets which is not punishable under any provision of the existing law.

"Let me explain a little more fully how the law stands. In the first place, there is the Public Gambling Act of 1867 (Act III of that year), which is in force in the North-West, the Panjáb, Oudh, the Central Provinces and British Burma. Three sections of this Act extend to the whole of these territories: the rest of the Act can only be brought into force, by order of the Local Government, in any specified city, town, suburb or railway-station, or in any place within three miles of a railway-station. The Act provides for the punishment of public gambling and the keeping of common gaming-houses; it imposes penalties on the owners, persons in charge of, and persons resorting to, common gaming-houses, and it gives police-officers powers of entry, search and seizure. Then, under one of the sections which extend of their own force to the whole of the province (section 13) a police-officer may apprehend without warrant—

'any person found playing for money or other valuable thing with cards, dice, counters or other instruments of gaming used in playing any game, not being a game of mere skill, in any public street, place or thoroughfare.'

"The instruments of gaming may be seized and destroyed, and the person found gaming under such circumstances is liable to a fine of fifty rupees or to a month's imprisonment.

"So much for public gambling. Then there is a section (294A) which was added to the Penal Code by an Act of 1870 under circumstances which the Council may remember, and which is specially directed against lotteries.

"Under this section—

'Whoever keeps any office or place for the purpose of drawing any lottery not authorized by Government shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

'And whoever publishes any proposal to pay any sum, or to deliver any goods, or to do or forbear doing anything for the benefit of any person, on any event or contingency relative or applicable to the drawing of any ticket, lot, number or figure in any such lottery, shall be punished with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.'

"Now, for some years after the passing of Act III of 1867 it was held that a ti was a form of gaming, and that the lists and papers used in the ti were instruments of gaming, within the meaning of that Act. This view was confirmed by the High Court of Calcutta in 1869. In 1876 the late Mr. Wilkinson and my hon'ble friend Mr. Quinton, as Judges of the Special Court of British Burma, held that tis were lotteries, and that, since the enactment of section 294A of the Indian Penal Code, lotteries were punishable under that section and not under Act III of 1867. Since the date of this judgment, the prosecution of the promoters of tis under Act III of 1867 may be said to have ceased; tis have been regarded as lotteries, and the persons concerned in them have been prosecuted under section 294A of the Indian Penal Code; and until lately no doubt of the applicability of that section to this particular kind of gambling has arisen.

"But two recent rulings of the Judicial Commissioner have presented a different view of the law. In the first of the cases in question the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate, under section 13 of Act III of 1867, as having been engaged in a ti in a zayat or public rest-house beside a public road. The Judicial Commissioner called for the proceedings, and, having come to the conclusion that a ti was not a game of chance and was mere betting or wagering, he referred the matter to the Special Court. The Officiating Recorder, Mr. Allen, dissented from the Judicial Commissioner's opinion, and held that the conviction was right. Under the constitution of the Special Court the opinion of the referring Judge prevails. The Judicial Commissioner accordingly issued a circular in which his own view of the law is enjoined on the Courts subordinate to him,—in other words, on all Courts outside the jurisdiction of the Recorder of Rangoon,—and in which he lays down the doctrine that a ti is not a game nor a lottery, and that the papers used in collecting the money of the persons who take part in the ti are wrongly described as lottery-tickets. In the second of these cases the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate at Rangoon under section 294A of the Penal Code of keeping a lottery-office. On appeal to the Officiating Recorder, that officer referred the question of whether a ti is a lottery to the Special Court. The Judicial Commissioner held that it was not; the Officiating Recorder that it was. In this case also the opinion of the referring Judge prevailed. The Judicial Commissioner, however, has informed the Courts subordinate to him that his own view of the law is to be their guide. There are thus two contradictory judgments of the Special Court, and two diverse rules of law established for different parts of the province, each Judge holding to his own opinion.

"Now, the question which of these two learned authorities is right in his view of the existing law is a question on which it is not necessary for me to express an opinion. Mr. Jardine has justified his opinion by reference to some cases which have been decided in England under the English law, and I am by no means prepared to say that the cases to which he refers are not in point. But whether he is right or wrong in point of law, there can, I think, be no doubt that his decisions have had an unfortunate effect and have given a great impetus to gambling throughout the province.

"In confirmation of this statement let me read you some extracts from the Police Administration Report of British Burma for the year 1883:—

'Gambling, admittedly one of the most fruitful sources of crime in Burma, has been frightfully on the increase of late, notably in its most dangerous form—Chinese lottery: this the Judicial Commissioner ruled could not be dealt with under the Gambling Act nor under the Penal Code; the lotteries are consequently universal all over the country. As I write I receive from a Superintendent a diary from which I give the following extract:—" In the morning strolled casually along the bank of the river and entered the verandas of four brokers' houses at hazard; found lotteries going on and being collected in each one..... In the evening went through the town, and again found lotteries hard at work." And this was in a part of the country where five robberies have occurred in the last month within a few miles radius.

'78. The number of gambling cases brought to trial does not materially differ from that of the previous year; but that gambling has increased, and is daily increasing, is I fear, beyond a doubt.

'79. The Chinese lottery, or "36-animal game," has been reported on, written about and discussed by every officer in the province; it is the favourite form of gambling throughout Burma; it exercises the most extraordinary fascination over people of every class and age; men and women seem equally fond of it and children take to it eagerly; and, as it has now been declared by the Judicial Commissioner not to be illegal, it is in full swing all over the country. Rangoon is an exception; there the Recorder has declared it to be still punishable under section 294A of the Indian Penal Code, and it is therefore kept in check to some extent.

'80. So much has been said and written on the subject of gambling in British Burma that it is superfluous to dilate on the subject. The most competent judges have given it as their opinion that gambling is one of the principal sources of crime: the most dangerous form of gambling is now legalized, and crime is increasing with giant strides.

'81. A draft Bill for the prevention of gambling has, I believe, been submitted to the legislature by the Local Government. Some stringent measures are absolutely necessary if anything like order is to be preserved in the country. It is not only the magistracy and police who are calling out for help in this respect; the lugyis or elders have on several occasions petitioned the District Magistrates to put down this crying evil; and who are better judges than they of the harm that is being done by gambling?

'82. It is not only that the gambling itself does harm, but the lottery-houses in many places are the haunts of loose characters; liquor and opium add to the excitement of the lotteries, and the result is riots and quarrels, ending in one or more being carried off with dangerous or fatal wounds, and others concerned in the infliction, or abetting the infliction, of these wounds being carried off by the police or absconding from justice, possibly to become habitual criminals and pests of society.'

"The request for legislation which is embodied in this report is only a repetition of similar representations which had been made on many previous occasions. In consequence of a representation to the same effect which had been made in the previous year (1882), the Chief Commissioner issued a Resolution directing the Commissioners of the province to obtain an expression of public opinion on the question. With the Resolution were circulated various papers bearing on the subject, including a Bill for the suppression of unlawful gaming which was before the legislature of the Straits Settlements. Special inquiry was made as to whether the people of Burma desired, and were prepared to accept, a stringent gaming law similar to that Bill.

"The answers showed clearly that the Burmans as a body regarded the prevalence of gambling, specially as practised in the ti, as a very great evil. Government officers were almost equally strong in their denunciations of these tis. With a few exceptions the opinions received were in favour of suppressing this and other forms of public gaming, and the Bill proposed for the Straits Settlements was accepted as a guide to the direction which legislation should take.

"These answers came in at a time when Mr. Charles Crosthwaite was officiating as Chief Commissioner, and the advice which he gave us was by all means to legislate, but not to take the proposed Straits Settlements Ordinance as a precise guide to legislation.

"After mature consideration," says the letter of the Chief Commissioner,—

'of the opinions of the local officers and of the Native gentlemen who have been consulted, the Chief Commissioner's opinion is strongly against the endeavour to copy the measure proposed by the Government of the Straits Settlements. This draft Ordinance is a very complicated piece of legislation, very stringent in its provisions, and very likely, unless worked under closer supervision than can be given to it in Burma, to become an engine of oppression. Mr. Crosthwaite is not at all in favour of a crusade against gambling of every kind. A people like the Burmese must have amusement of some sort. It is quite possible to make gambling an expensive amusement, but to stop it altogether, if the people wish to indulge in it, is beyond the power of the law, and the attempt to do it will only result in systematic bribery and the corruption of the police. From the papers submitted it appears that what is chiefly needed is the repression of the professional ti-gambler, the man who makes his living by going about inducing people to game and as often as not swindling them out of their money. The urgent requisite is a law which will enable the authorities to deal with professional gamblers, and all who aid and abet them, with prompt severity, wherever they may be found. For other purposes the Act of 1867 appears to be sufficient, and the Chief Commissioner does not desire the extension of all its provisions to the province generally.'

"Mr. Crosthwaite submitted with the letter from which I have been quoting two alternative drafts, either of which he suggested might be taken as the basis of legislation. The chief difference between them was that one of them was so framed as to deal exclusively with ti-gaming, whilst the other proposed to repeal the Act of 1867 and re-enact it for British Burma with the necessary additions and modifications.

"Since Mr. Bernard has resumed office as Chief Commissioner, he has strongly urged upon us the necessity for early legislation on the lines of the proposals submitted to us by Mr. Crosthwaite.

"I think I have said quite enough to show that some legislation on the subject is urgently required. I will reserve until the introduction of the Bill my explanation of the precise manner in which it is proposed to amend the law. All I will say on the present occasion is that, of the two alternative proposals submitted to us by Mr. Crosthwaite, we have resolved to adopt in principle the former, that is to say, not to recast the Gambling Act, but to amend or supplement it in such a manner as to bring the game of 'ti' within the grasp of the law. There is some difficulty in adapting the provisions of the Act of 1867 to this particular game, because that Act is directed against public gambling, and the keeping of and resort to common gaming-houses, whereas the game of 'ti' is carried on also in private houses; but this is a kind of difficulty which can probably be got over by a little ingenuity of drafting. And, if the game is to be made an offence, I do not see why it should not be made punishable both under the provisions of the Penal Code and under the Gambling Act. When I say that the offence should be punishable under both these provisions, of course I do not mean that a man should be made punishable twice for the same offence, but merely that the two Acts should to a certain extent overlap each other, and that the prosecutor should be left his choice of proceeding under one or the other, according to the circumstances of the case."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Wednesday, the 27th August, 1884.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Government House, Simla, on Wednesday, the 27th August, 1884.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, K.G., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., presiding.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, K.C.S.I., C.I.E.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G.C.B., C.I.E.

Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble T. F. Wilson, C.B., C.I.E.

The Hon'ble C. P. Ilbert, C.I.E.

The Hon'ble Sir S. C. Bayley, K.C.S.I., C.I.E.

The Hon'ble T. C. Hope, C.S.I., C.I.E.

The Hon'ble J. W. Quinton.

The Hon'ble D. G. Barkley.

SETTLEMENT-OFFICERS' (PANJAB) DECISIONS VALIDATION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. ILBERT moved that the Reports of the Select Committee on the Bill for the validation of decisions passed by certain Settlement-officers in the Panjáb be taken into consideration. He said:—"The original object of this Bill was to cure some formal defects in the appellate jurisdiction exercised by certain Settlement-officers—defects which it was apprehended might have the effect of invalidating their orders. Whilst the Bill was before the Select Committee it was pointed out to us that cases had also occurred in which Settlement-officers had exercised jurisdiction as Courts of first instance without having had that jurisdiction conferred on them in the precise manner required by law; and the Bill has been amended and modified so as to meet those cases also."

The Hon'ble Mr. BARKLEY said:—"With reference to this Bill I need only say that, while no steps had been taken when it was introduced to call in question any of the appellate decisions as to the validity of which it was then proposed to remove doubts, a case has since occurred which illustrates the importance of putting an end to any doubts of this nature. In an appeal relating to a large extent of land, mostly culturable waste, which was heard in March last by a Bench of the Chief Court, it was contended on behalf of the Secretary of State for India, who was one of the parties, that the question of the ownership of the land in suit had become res judicata by a decree passed by the Settlement-officer as a Court of original jurisdiction more than ten years before. It turned out that the Settlement-officer had been empowered by notifications issued in 1869 to decide suits relating to land in two tahsíls of the district, but that the land in dispute was situated in another tahsíl, with regard to which no similar notification had been issued. It therefore became necessary to set aside the decision of the Commissioner of the division that the question was res judicata, and to remand the case for trial and decision on the merits of the claim. Thus, though the Settlement-officer's decision had not been appealed against, and the plaintiff, who was not aware of the defect in the jurisdiction of that officer, brought the fresh suit under the impression that a subsequent order, passed by that officer on an application to reopen the case, treated the question as one which had not been finally adjudicated upon, it was found necessary, when the defect came to light, to hold that the decision pronounced ten years before was passed without jurisdiction. Other questions were raised by the appeal which it therefore became unnecessary to decide, but, had the defect in the jurisdiction been removed, those questions might have been disposed of.

"As this case showed that there were instances in which the validity of original as well as appellate decisions was open to question owing to the necessary notifications not having been published, the Bill has been amended by the Select Committee so as to render valid any decisions of Settlement-officers which would have been valid if they had been duly invested with powers to decide suits or appeals relating to land, unless when such decisions have already been declared by a competent Court to be invalid. When the decision has been pronounced invalid by a competent Court, it will be seen that it is not proposed to give validity to it.

"Many decisions passed by Settlement-officers and in appeal by superior authorities are liable to be called in question on the grounds stated in the preamble to the Bill, and it cannot be doubted that it is expedient to put the validity of such decisions beyond dispute, and thus to prevent the renewal of litigation with regard to questions which have already been judicially determined, and this in many cases after an appeal to a superior Court."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. ILBERT also moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

BURMA GAMING BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. ILBERT also introduced the Bill to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of Gaming in British Burma, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee consisting of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, the Hon'ble Messrs. Gibbs and Quinton, and the Mover, with instructions to report in a month. He said:—

"The principles which I have endeavoured to keep in view in framing this Bill are, first, that it is not necessary or expedient to make a crusade against gaming generally; secondly, that it is not expedient to make any greater changes in the existing law or procedure than are absolutely necessary for the purpose of bringing within the scope of the law a particular form of gaming which has proved to be a very serious nuisance; and, lastly, that the man whom we are particularly anxious to hit is the professional gambler. We do not wish to be hard on the ordinary players of the game, who include, as the Police Reports tell us, women and children.

"The Bill begins by enacting that the game of ti shall be deemed a lottery within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code. Of course, by doing this we do not intend to declare that the Judicial Commissioner was wrong in his view of the meaning of the existing law; we merely intend to make the game of ti when played within British Burma a lottery for the purposes of the Penal Code, and punishable as such. My reason for bringing the game within the Penal Code is that at the present moment in the town of Rangoon, where the Recorder's law prevails, this particular game is punishable under the Penal Code, and I am anxious to disturb the existing practice as little as possible. If, however, the authorities of British Burma should be of opinion that the remaining provisions of the Bill are sufficient for the purpose without this section, I should be quite willing to drop the clause, or to substitute for it a clause declaring that the game of ti is not a lottery within the meaning of the Penal Code.

"Then the Bill goes on to say, in section 3, that the game of ti shall also be deemed gaming within the meaning of the Gambling Act of 1867, and the section contains some other provisions, the chief effect of which will be to make taking part in the game an offence whether the game is carried on in a public or in a private place.

"Then come two sections, which are aimed against the professional gambler. The first makes him liable to fine, and to six months imprisonment for the first offence, and two years imprisonment for a subsequent offence. The other gives Magistrates power to demand security from persons who notoriously earn their living or part of their living by gaming of this description."

The Hon'ble MR. BARKLEY said:—"Before the Motion is put, I wish to mention one point, which will, I think, have to be considered by the Select Committee, and on which it seems desirable that the opinion of the Chief Commissioner and other local authorities should be elicited before the Report of the Select Committee is presented.

"Section 2 of the Bill puts a local interpretation upon one of the provisions of the Indian Penal Code, which is a general law. It must of course be admitted that in India we cannot always avoid having local interpretations of general enactments, as the High Court of one province is not bound by the decisions of the High Court of another, and, therefore, when one High Court puts a construction upon any provision of the law, that construction, so long as it is not adopted by the other High Courts, becomes a local interpretation. If different local interpretations are thus put upon the same law, and the question involved is one of much importance, it usually becomes necessary for the legislature to intervene to amend the law, so as to put its meaning beyond doubt. But, though we may thus have judicial constructions of the same law which are in conflict, and each of which is authoritative in a particular province, it cannot be denied that this is an evil. It causes uncertainty as to what the law is, not only in other provinces, but in that where the question has been decided, as it is always possible that the High Court may be asked to reconsider its former decision in the light of the arguments which have led another High Court to a different conclusion. And, when the authoritative interpretations adopted in different provinces are in conflict, the Courts of at least one province must be administering a law different from that which the legislature would have prescribed, had its attention been drawn to the point with regard to which the difference exists.

"But, if it is necessary to ask this Council to interpret any of the provisions of a general law, it can do so by an enactment which will be co-extensive with the law to be explained, and I think that this course should be adopted, unless very strong reasons can be shown for giving the explanation a local application only. A local interpretation by the legislature may give rise to the same uncertainty as to what is the law elsewhere as that which may result from a judicial interpretation by the High Court of a particular province. It may be argued, on the one hand, that the legislature has explained its own meaning, and that this explanation must carry great weight in provinces other than that for which it was given, and, on the other hand, that, if the explanation was intended to be of general applicability, it would not have been included in a law extending to one province only, and that the legislature must have had some reason for thus limiting its effect to a single province.

"If the latter argument prevails, the High Court of any other province would have to determine the interpretation of the enactment irrespective of the interpretation put upon it by the legislature for another province, and may be led to adopt a different interpretation. It may thus be decided, in case this measure becomes law, that the game known as hi is not a lottery in the ordinary sense of the term, and that, though it must hereafter be deemed a lottery within the meaning of section 294A of the Indian Penal Code in British Burma, it cannot be so deemed in Calcutta or Assam. There would then be a conflict between the statutory interpretation of the law for one province and the judicial interpretation of the same law for another.

"Such a conflict should be avoided if possible, and I think it should be suggested—the suggestion, indeed, has already been made by my hon'ble friend the Legal Member—for the consideration of the Chief Commissioner whether it is necessary to retain section 2, considering the extension given to Act III of 1867 by sections 3 and 5, and the additional provisions contained in sections 4 and 6. If his reply is in the affirmative, and the Select Committee is satisfied by the reasons given, I would ask the Select Committee to consider whether section 2 should not be declared to extend to all India.

"I do not propose to discuss the question whether the ti game, which has been described by my hon'ble friend at our last meeting, is a lottery in the ordinary sense of the word. Apparently, different conclusions have been come to on this point by the superior Courts of British Burma at different times, and I have not the advantage of knowing the grounds on which those conclusions were based. I have no doubt that the legislature can, if necessary, give the word an artificial sense. But, if the game is not a lottery in the ordinary sense of the word, it should, I think, be considered, before it is declared by law to be a lottery, whether the object aimed at cannot be accomplished in some other way. In an Act of 1872, no longer in force, the legislature explained the expression 'Native State' in such a way that a learned Chief Judge of one of the High Courts was unable to persuade himself that it could have meant what it said, and there is always some risk in using words in an unusual sense when this can be avoided."

The Hon'ble MR. ILBERT said:—"The point raised by my hon'ble friend Mr. Barkley will doubtless be considered, and ought to be considered, by the Chief Commissioner of British Burma and by the Select Committee, and I have already expressed my willingness to drop section 2 in case it should be considered unnecessary by the local authorities.

"Meanwhile, all I need say is that the Bill only extends to British Burma, and that its effect is not to put an authoritative interpretation upon the Penal Code, but merely to make a certain kind of game when carried on within a particular province an offence punishable under a certain section of the Penal Code."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. ILBERT also moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the British Burma Gazette in English and in such other languages as the Local Administration might think fit.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

BURMA STEAM-BOILERS AND PRIME-MOVERS BILL, 1884.

The Hon'ble MR. ILBERT also moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882. He said:—"The object of this Bill is to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, in such a manner as to provide for the grant of certificates to engine-drivers, authorizing them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse-power. Under the Act as it at present stands, certificates can be granted to engineers of the first and second classes only; and all boilers and prime-movers must be in charge of engineers of one or other of these classes. The Board of Examiners appointed under the Act have recently represented to the Chief Commissioner that these provisions cause unnecessary hardship to a class of Native drivers who can be trusted to manage, and actually do manage, small engines. It would be misleading to give these men engineers' certificates of any class, inasmuch as they are in no sense engineers. On the other hand, it is only fair to them and the small mill-owners who employ them that they should be eligible for some sort of certificate and be permitted to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of low horse-power. Under these circumstances, the Board suggest that the Act should be amended in such a way as to authorize the grant to such persons, when found competent, of engine-drivers' certificates, which will empower them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse power, and they point out that there is a precedent for the grant of such certificates in the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884, sections 28 and 29. The suggestions have received the support of the Chief Commissioner."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Wednesday, the 10th September, 1884.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

REVENUE AND AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 27th AUGUST 1884.

GENERAL REMARKS.—Rain has fallen throughout the Madras Presidency, but the fall has been a light one, and more rain is wanted in almost every district. There has been slight rain in Mysore during the week, but the condition of the standing crops is still poor or precarious. In Coorg there was good rain, and the coffee and rice crops have been much benefited. Light rain fell throughout the Bombay Presidency (except Sind), but more is wanted for the young crops which are withering in parts of Poona, Ahmednagar, and Kaladgi. There was no rain in the Berars, and in Hyderabad the fall was light; but the condition of the crops continues good. There was good rain generally throughout the Central India and Rajputana States and prospects are good. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh good rain is again reported from all districts and a break is now needed. The crops are in excellent condition. In the Punjab rain fell in most districts, but more would be beneficial, especially in Hissar and Sirsa. Prospects generally are good. Rain fell throughout the Central Provinces and prospects are fair. Good falls of rain are reported from the Assam districts. At Cachar the river has risen 40 feet over the usual dry season level, owing to the heavy rain which has fallen in the hills. In Bengal the rainfall of the week has been generally light, and more is still wanted in many places.

The latest report of the Meteorological Department, dated the 28th instant, states that rain continues heavy along the west coast. No rain is reported from Punjab, except in Mooltan and Simla, and none from Behar or Chota Nagpur, Sind, Rajputana, and the Carnatic. In other parts of the country rain has fallen everywhere, though in the Central Provinces the fall is partial.

Harvesting continues in some districts in Madras. The condition of the standing crops in some districts in the Bombay Presidency is unsatisfactory owing to insufficient rainfall; the cotton crop has been attacked by blight in Hyderabad. The kharif sowings have been nearly completed in Punjab, and preparations for the rabi are in progress there and in the Central Provinces. In Bengal, unless heavy rain falls shortly, the prospects of aman will, it is reported, be much affected. Harvesting of aus and jute continue, but the outturn where completed does not exceed 12 annas. In Assam agricultural prospects are on the whole good. The public health is generally good; but cholera and small-pox prevail sporadically in several districts. Prices are generally stationary, except in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh where they show a tendency to fall.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Home Department (Public),—dated Simla, the 23rd August 1884.

Resolution of the Government of India, in the Home Department, No. 26-953, dated the 19th July 1883, on the subject of the filling up, by a system of competitive examination, of vacancies in the clerical establishments of the Secretariat Offices connected with the Government of India.

SURVEY OF INDIA.

NOTIFICATIONS.

MEMORANDUM FOR CIRCULATION.

The application of the electric telegraph to finding differences of longitude being only of comparatively recent date, the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India was necessarily based on the best value of longitude available from celestial observations at the time the Survey was begun: accordingly the longitude of the Madras Observatory was adopted for the origin of the Survey. Various improved provisional values of longitude for this origin have since been published by the Government Astronomer, corresponding to the aggregating celestial observations; of these provisional values only the two following need be given here numerically, viz. :—

Values of longitude of the Madras Observatory.

Provisional.

(A). Adopted by the Great Trigonometrical Survey in all its publications . . 80° 17′ 21″

(B), [redacted] in all the Atlases of India . 80° 18′ 30″

[redacted] now able to state also the value

(2). It will be understood that the publications of the Trigonometrical Survey must continue to be exhibited in terms of the value (A), in order that all the longitudes shall be consistent with one another; at the same time, to express these longitudes in terms of the value (C), it is only necessary to diminish the former by the difference between (A) and (C), i.e., by 2′ 30″. Similar remarks apply to (B), and hence the longitudes exhibited in the Atlas Sheets of India should be diminished by the difference between (B) and (C), i.e., by 3′ 39″.

(3). But, from what has been said, between the period of the adoption of (A) and (B) and that of the recent determination of (C), it was necessary to accept temporarily several other values of approximate corrections than those stated in article (2), corresponding to the improved values of longitude for the Madras Observatory published from time to time; and these different temporary corrections have accordingly been noted on the publications and Atlas Sheets in question as the latter were printed.

(4). Now however that a (nearly) final value of the longitude of Madras Observatory, i.e., (C), is known, it becomes necessary to disregard all the different temporary corrections hitherto published, and instead simply to follow the following precepts:—

To find true longitude from Greenwich.

(b). Diminish all the longitudes shown on the Atlas Sheets of India by 3′ 39″.

(5). It is obviously important that the facts of Article (4) should be circulated for general information, and especially in maritime interests: the following note embodying the required precepts has accordingly been prepared, and copies are available on application to the Survey of India Offices at Calcutta and Dehra Dún.

Corrections to be applied to the Longitudes on Charts, Maps, &c., of the Survey of India.

NOTE.—The longitude of the Madras Observatory as recently determined by the electric telegraph is 80° 14′ 51″ or 5ʰ 20ᵐ 59ˢ·4 east of Greenwich, but in all the publications of the Trigonometrical Survey this longitude is assumed at 80° 17′ 21″, and in all the Atlas Sheets of India at 80° 18′ 30″; consequently all longitudes in the publications of the Trigonometrical Survey should be diminished by 2′ 30″ and in the Atlas Sheets by 3′ 39″, after which the resulting longitudes will be in correct reckoning from Greenwich and consistent with the value 80° 14′ 51″ of Madras Observatory. The above directions are in supersession of all others, if any, on the documents in question.

OFFICERS IN CHARGE.

2. Mr. J. Westland was Head Commissioner, but Mr. A. C. Tupp officiated for him from 19th September to 5th October 1883, and Mr. E. T. Atkinson from 22nd November to 22nd January 1884, and again from the 20th to the 31st March 1884. In Madras, Mr. H. F. Clogstoun was Commissioner, but Mr. W. Donald acted for him from the 3rd May to the 2nd August 1883. In Bombay, Mr. E. Gay was Commissioner for the whole year, and in Rangoon Mr. W. Wells.

OPENING OF RANGOON CIRCLE OF ISSUE.

3. The year was marked by the establishment of a currency circle at Rangoon for Burma, which was opened on the 1st August 1883 under the provisions of the Indian Paper Currency Act, 1882 (Act XX of 1882), and was placed in charge of the Comptroller of British Burma. (Resolution, Financial Department, No. G. I. 2275, dated 24th July 1883.)

ACCOUNTS AND AUDIT.

4. The monthly audit of the accounts has been duly reported for each office to the Comptroller General, and the following special audits have also been made :—

Accounts of	Auditing Officer.	Date of report.	Period under audit.
Calcutta . .	Deputy Auditor General.	28th May 1884 .	1st April 1883 to 31st Mar. 1884.
Bombay . .	Ditto ditto .	27th May 1884 .	1st Jan. 1883 to 31st Dec. 1883.
Madras . .	Ditto ditto .	10th May 1884 .	Ditto.

CIRCULATION.

5. The following figures show the state of the net circulation :—

	Gross Circulation.	Retired by other offices.	Net Circulation.
1st April 1883 . .	14,98,49,685	47,85,610	14,50,64,075
31st March 1884 .	13,08,17,520	32,52,110	12,75,65,410

It must be explained that a note is in "gross circulation" when it is not yet returned to the original office of issue; but if it has meantime been paid off by another office of issue, and is held by it pending return to the original office of issue, then it has ceased to be in "net circulation," though it is still part of the "gross circulation."

6. The details of the net circulation of March 31st, 1884, are as follows:—

	Number of Notes for Rupees								Total.

Total for March, 31st, 1882 .	470,288	1,519,549	507,935	157,950	268,432	28,404	38,488	2,395	2,993,150	13,90,71,780

The figures under Bombay include the outstanding circulation of the abolished sub-circles of Nagpur and Akola.

There is a falling-off of 175 lakhs in the net circulation; but as this occurs in notes of ₹1,000 and 10,000 held by Banks for commercial convenience, it shows that the decrease is due to the dullness of trade, especially during the last quarter of the year. The people's investment, or the lower denominations show no decrease. As noted last year, there were special reasons for the decrease in the 20-rupee note circulation, but this is met by an increase in the 5-rupee and 10-rupee note issues.

7. From these figures it will be found that the average value of each note in circulation on the last day of the year, compared with the past two years, was :—

	1881-82.	1882-83.	1883-84.		1881-82.	1882-83.	1883-84.
Calcutta Circle .	40	39	30	Kurrachee . .	56	58	61
Allahabad . .	108	94	60	Madras . .	69	71	63
Lahore . . .	72	71	73	Calicut . .	43	34	32
Bombay . .	44	41	41	Rangoon . .	...	...	167

The high average in Rangoon indicates the great use made of the Currency Office by the local Banks as the store for their reserves. The figures in the other circles indicate a lower banking reserve than in previous years.

8. The variations in the net circulation of each circle are shown in the following table, omitting 000 :—

9. On these the following remarks are offered :—

First, for Calcutta, I show for the last three years the figures of the net circulation (in lakhs of rupees), excluding the Reserve Treasury of Government—

Last day of	1881-82.	1882-83.	1883-84.	Last day of	1881-82.	1882-83.	1883-84.
April . .	580	554	576	October . .	556	627	539
May . .	566	540	574	November .	531	535	575
June . .	569	546	548	December .	533	549	555
July . .	590	523	569	January . .	536	656	552
August . .	527	538	547	February .	543	603	536
September .	591	557	520	March . .	549	586	552

The experience of 1879-80 and 1880-81 seemed to establish the fact of a low range of circulation from April to September, and a sudden increase at the opening of the cold weather and a rapid diminution in February, as the normal state of the circulation in Calcutta. The figures of the year under report show the maximum in April and November but with little variation throughout the year.

The figures from April to September are above those of last year, and there was no great rise in October or succeeding months resembling in this respect 1881-82. Some years must, however, elapse before any very useful lessons can be drawn from these phenomena.

10. The same figures for Bombay and Madras are :—

Month.	Bombay.		Madras.
	₹	₹	₹	₹
April	344	330	126	130
May	406	334	116	121
June	394	311	117	111
July	389	338	105	106
August	388	331	108	106
September	457	351	110	106
October	450	373	112	110
November	399	381	111	108
December	323	344	117	116
January	400	316	127	117
February	386	319	123	122
March	345	332	123	118

There is a steady decrease in each month both in Madras and Bombay. In both the net decrease is chiefly on the aggregate of notes for 500, 1,000, 10,000 Rupees, whilst in the 5 and 10-rupee notes circulation there is an increase : thus, so far as we examine the returns under each set of relations, they all show that the falling-off occurs among the notes of the highest denominations, and that so far as the general public is concerned there is no decrease. In Bombay this year the maximum fell in November and the minimum in June. Last year the maximum was in September and the minimum in December. In Madras in both years the maximum was in the last quarter and the minimum in July—September.

11. The following figures show (in lakhs and thousands) the "gross circulation" (see paragraph 5) in the head circles of notes not exceeding ₹100 each :—

Last day of	1882-83.			1883-84.
	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Madras.	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Madras.

August	284·22	170·93	75·98	293·09	176·80	74·62
September	280·91	173·60	74·81	294·90	179·34	77·14

November	289·61	178·62	79·68	302·78	181·18	76·84
December	291·58	172·77	83·43	308·10	177·41	83·13
January	305·36	168·67	86·29	313·67	168·27	86·50
February	318·09	174·47	86·61	312·51	169·00	91·39
March	322·67	179·00	89·06	307·74	171·33	89·75

ANALYSIS OF CIRCULATION.

12. The following statement analyses the outstandings on 31st December 1883 by years of issue.

As explained in former reports, the amount thus shown is necessarily much greater than the circulation of the date in question, as it includes, among other things, balances of notes held in the currency offices themselves for issue to the public.

EXPLANATIONS.

a and d—These are the ordinary issues and receipts in exchange for other notes or for coin.

b and c—These are exchange transactions with treasuries, as the agencies do not deal direct with the public, but only enable the treasuries to do so to a greater extent than would otherwise be the case.

f—This figure represents notes cashed at other currency circles from March 16th, 1883, to March 15th, 1884, and returned during the year under report to the circles to which they belong.

c and g—These remittances are for the most part payments and receipts of one currency office, in consideration of receipts or payments at another.

The same movement as noticed in last year's report goes on, the decrease in the issue of 20-rupee notes and increase in the lower denominations. This table again confirms the remarks made in paragraphs 9-11 that the gross decrease in the circulation is due to a decrease in the highest values which are only held as certificates of their reserves by the Banks.

19. The average number of notes that passed over the counters at each head office on each working day during the past three years, and the daily average of cancellations, may be shown thus :—

	Notes cashed.			Notes issued.			Notes cancelled.

These figures show the steady increase in the work of the Calcutta Currency Office, a matter which has attracted my attention, and regarding which a separate report will be made. A separate report will also be made on the subject of cancellations, which appear to be far more than is necessary and to cause undue expense and trouble.

The withdrawal of the permission to cash foreign notes at Allahabad and Lahore, referred to in paragraph 28 of last year's report, has reduced the value of these notes by two-thirds in Allahabad and one-half in Lahore. Those received have come through payments made on behalf of Government dues, or through the Railways. The Deputy Commissioner of Paper Currency at Allahabad writes: "It will be observed that the value of these notes (foreign circle notes) is less by more than two-thirds than the value of foreign circle notes cashed during the year 1882-83. The encashment of foreign circle notes presented by Banks and the public ceased on the 11th April 1883, up to which date about six lakhs of such notes had been cashed."

STATE OF THE COINAGE.

25. The following table (in thousands of rupees) shows the operations during the year in the withdrawal of shroff-marked and defaced coins from circulation and their remittance to the mints for re-coinage :—

The remittances of these coins to the mints amount to just half of the figure of last year, but the accumulation is steady in the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab, and shows no sign of abatement.

27. In 1875 it was considered advisable to collect data for an enquiry into the subject of the rate of absorption of the silver coinage in British India, and we have since then endeavoured to ascertain each year the proportion of the several issues of Government rupees from 1835, in actual circulation in different parts of the country. Our plan has been to ask each Collector or district officer to have 2,000 rupees of his treasury balance sorted according to the several issues, taking care that the bag or bags selected for examination are such as are made up of small sums received in current collections, or are received from one of the rural tahsíl or talúk treasuries, in order that they may represent as fairly as possible the description of coin in current use in the district. The result of this examination has now been collected for the ten years from 1875 to 1884.

28. It was in view of this enquiry that arrangements were made in 1874 to stamp the year of coinage on the rupees in order to separate the issues of each year, and this has since been regularly done. Between the years 1835 and 1874 four descriptions of rupees were issued from the Indian Mints, namely, (1) the William IV; (2) the Victoria 1840, first issue, which are of rather greater diameter than the earlier and later issues, and have the words "Victoria Queen" close together; (3) the Victoria 1840, second issue, with a diameter of 1·2 inch and the words "Victoria Queen" on either side of Her Majesty's head; and (4) the Victoria 1862. I have been able to ascertain the numbers of rupees of each of the above descriptions coined in the Indian Mints, except in regard to Madras, where it cannot be stated exactly how much of the coin issued between the years 1841-42 and 1861-62 appertain to the first and second issues respectively. I am informed, however, that the new dies were introduced in Calcutta in 1850-51, and in the absence of more precise data the same year may be taken to divide the Madras rupees between the two issues. It is also deserving of note here that, in the interval between 1835-36 and 1841-42, there appears to have been no silver coinage in Madras, the bullion purchased having been sent to the Calcutta Mint for coinage. The coins examined at the district treasuries have been sorted according to the several issues mentioned above.

29. I now present the following statements, which show what materials have been collected in pursuance of this enquiry. The first is a statement of whole rupees coined and issued from the Indian Mints between the years 1835 and 1883 inclusive. The second shows the proportion of the several issues of Government rupees in actual circulation as ascertained by the examination, each year, of a bag containing R2,000 in every Government treasury in British India. The third statement affords the same information as the second, but gives it separately for each province and for each of the three years 1875, 1880, and 1884. I do not propose to review these figures at present, my object in producing them being rather to show what we are doing, and to elicit suggestions as to the particular points on which information is required.

33. The receipts for the last five years have been—

	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Total.

1883-84	89,36,643	2,40,52,521	3,29,89,164

The fluctuations are entirely governed by the supply of bills and the rates obtained for them by the Secretary of State. The highest importations of bullion were during the last quarter of the year. There were some remittances of silver to Allahabad to make up for the depletion of the current stock due to the withdrawal of shroff-marked coin, and to relieve the plethora in Bombay. This has been accomplished during the year, and there are now no greater accumulations than are necessary to provide for what is now the custom to send shipments of specie direct to Rangoon for the rice season. The flow of bullion is still steady to Bombay, and but little reaches Calcutta, so that it is necessary to make use of every opportunity to get actual specie to the Calcutta side. The demands of the Banks therefore for Burma are met by direct shipments to Rangoon instead of payment from our local reserve, which would have at once to be replenished by land-carriage from Bombay.

34. The operation of the bullion clauses of the Currency Act is shown in the following monthly figures :—

38. The diminution in the annual amount still continues; but as only in a very few cases indeed is an application for payment refused, it cannot be laid to the fault of the new rules which work well and satisfactorily, and place on record all that is necessary to be known regarding any note on which a claim is made and accepted.

FORGERY AND FRAUD.

39. The forged twenty-rupee notes referred to in paragraphs 46—51 of last year's Report continue to be presented, and a large number that had not been presented was surrendered to the Police, but it is not yet known where or by whom the forgeries were perpetrated. The notes are of the $\frac{O}{87}$, Calcutta series, and are fairly well executed, and would certainly pass in the hurry of ordinary business with persons not well acquainted with Currency notes.

The total number presented up to date is as follows :—

Calcutta.		Bombay.

40. When this series of forgeries was first detected, a warning was issued on the 2nd August 1882 to the public, which, as reported last year, was followed by a singular panic, the Currency Office being crowded daily with persons offering twenty-rupee notes for exchange. Seven of these forgeries were discovered in August 1882; two in October and one in November 1882, and five during 1883. The history of all has been traced as far as some firm or other of native brokers or merchants, who state that, owing to the smallness of the value, they kept no record of the person from whom they received the note, or of the person to whom they delivered it. This practice follows our own, and to it is no doubt due the attempts now made to place in circulation forged notes of the lower denominations, as detection is so much more difficult.

41. The effect of these forgeries on the circulation of twenty-rupee notes of the Calcutta Circle, and on the circulation of those of lower denominations, is still very marked:—

Calcutta Circle.			Five-rupee Notes. Value. ₹	Ten-rupee Notes. Value. ₹	Twenty-rupee Notes. Value. ₹

42. A forged note for ₹100 ($\frac{M}{12}$ 75436) was also presented at the Bombay Currency Office for encashment, and was detected. It apparently belongs to the work of a gang of forgers who were prosecuted to conviction in 1877.

43. Four forged notes for ₹5 each, numbered $\frac{P}{52}$ 68068, $\frac{P}{52}$ 6968, $\frac{P}{52}$ 69860, and $\frac{P}{52}$ 69800, were found in the possession of a man at Bussirhaut, in the 24-Pergunnahs. These seem to have been done a good deal by hand and were on the whole clumsy imitations not likely to deceive.

44. A forged note for five rupees ($\frac{P}{52}$ 6680) was presented by a Marwari on the 7th March 1884, and is apparently connected with the preceding and a series of similar forgeries in the Baraset district. The execution is clumsy, the medallion being thick and coarse and the printing in the body very rough. The paper appears to be letter paper, and there were only four instead of the usual five figures.

45. Another forged note for five rupees ($\frac{P}{52}$ 69806) was presented at the Calcutta Currency Office, and actually paid on the 9th April 1884, but the forgery was at once detected and the money recovered. Though the holder was prosecuted and acquitted of guilty intent, the employés of the Currency Office concerned have been punished for their gross carelessness in admitting at all such a palpable forgery. This case properly belongs to next year's report.

46. On the 8th November 1883, a forged note for ten rupees of the Calcutta Circle ($\frac{P}{69}$ 71751) was presented and shows a very skilful imitation. The paper is of a similar texture to that used by the Bank of England, and the medallions and devices are very cleanly imitated. But the printing in the body "I promise to pay, &c.," together with the serial letters and numbers, are rough and coarse.

47. In November 1883, Bhojraj of Tappal, in the Aligarh district, was found in possession of a hand-drawn imitation of a currency note of the Nagpur Circle for ₹100, and was charged with the offence of having it in his possession with the intention of fraudulently or dishonestly using it as genuine. Bhojraj was acquitted of the fraudulent intent by the Sessions Judge, and the note was sent to me. It is a very coarse imitation by hand, without a signature, and without any attempt at copying the engraved lines in any portion of it, and could not take in any one that had ever seen a genuine note.

48. One cannot help suspecting, in the cases that come before me for payment on halves of notes, that some are those of persons who obtain halves of mismatched notes and claim on both as parts of separate notes. A case of this sort has been prosecuted to conviction in September 1883. Sayyid Jafar Husain of Rai Bareli, and Ata Husain of Lucknow, were prosecuted in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner, Rai Bareli, for presenting a mismatched note $\frac{D}{14}$ 40987 and $\frac{D}{14}$ 40988 and claiming value on both halves, and were, on conviction under sections 417, 109, and 511 of the Indian Penal Code, sentenced to two months' simple imprisonment.

49. A case similar to the preceding was noticed at paragraph 53 of last year's report as having occurred in Bombay. The particulars of this case belong to this year. On the 2nd November 1882, Shiulal Atmaram presented a mismatched note, No. $\frac{M}{60}\frac{44107}{44169}$, with a declaration in the usual form as to how the note had come into his possession. He stated that he had received it in the course of business on the 27th October 1882. As there was at that time no counter-claim, the claim was simply registered. On the 8th February 1883, one Ghulam Husain Hasan Ali presented the two corresponding halves of the above notes, and at first claimed payment on a single note only. He subsequently, however, in his declaration stated that he was originally the proprietor of the two entire notes, that they were received by his firm in the course of business at Surat, that they were divided for the purpose of remittance, and that he therefore claimed payment of value on both halves; further, that the two missing halves were lost by him about 1st December 1882. This was of course impossible, as the other halves of the notes were on that date in possession of the Currency Office, and had been so since 2nd November 1882. During the year Borah Ghulam Husain Hasan Ali has been convicted of fraud and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. As remarked in the previous paragraph, I cannot but think that more cases of this kind must crop up, as our rules and practice are too lenient in this respect.

REMITTANCES OF SILVER.

50. The following is the detail of silver remittances :—

Allahabad to Calcutta	40,39,845
Lahore to Calcutta	14,57,475
Kurrachee to Bombay	8,000
Bombay to Kurrachee	15,30,000
Bombay to Calcutta	1,25,00,000
Bombay to Rangoon	15,00,000

51. The Allahabad remittance comprised twenty lakhs of current coin, and the remainder in shroff-marked coin sent for recoinage to the Mint.

52. The remittances from Lahore and Kurrachee were wholly in shroff-marked coin sent for recoinage. Bombay furnished Kurrachee in return with a remittance to replenish its reserve.

53. The Bombay remittances to Calcutta and Rangoon were made to equalise the silver reserves of the Currency, which were in great excess in Bombay owing to the frequent importations of bullion by the Banks in Bombay, and were in deficit in Calcutta by being drawn on for commercial purposes.

* Includes 948 acres irrigated in Kalsia State, which were shown separately against that State in Statements Nos. I and II for Kharif, 1883-84.

† Superintending Engineer explains that in the half-yearly return for kharif, 1883, the rainfall in Karnal District for May 1883 was, by clerical error, shown as 1·64 instead of 1·14, and the total for the half-year as 15·69 instead of 15·17; hence the cause of difference in the total rainfall between the half-yearly and annual statements.

IRRIGATION BRANCH.

IRRIGATION OPERATIONS, NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES, FOR THE "RABI" SEASON, 1883-84 (1st OCTOBER to 31st MARCH).

No. 2724I. of 1884, dated Allahabad, the 26th July 1884.

READ—

Statements A18, B18, and C18, showing irrigation operations for rabi, 1883-84, of canals in the North-Western Provinces.

OBSERVATIONS.—The failure of the cold-weather rains caused a great demand for canal water. The area irrigated, 1,471,927 acres, is again the largest on record, having exceeded the previous maximum (of 1882-83) by 237,701 acres; whilst the assessments under occupiers' rate amount to R31,16,061, or an increase of R5,08,919.

2. Table I. shows in detail the acreage irrigated during the last four years:—

CANAL.	1880-81.	1881-82.	1882-83.	1883-84.
	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.
Upper Ganges	642,324	475,747	520,465	627,872
Lower Ganges	116,250	426,633	406,902	450,143
Agra	105,378	96,106	103,624	171,864
Eastern Jumna	128,408	150,689	142,030	159,400
Dún	6,867	8,138	9,448	8,983
Rohilkhand	29,985	48,544	46,844	46,918
Bijnor	2,041	2,137	3,207	4,802
Hamírpur tanks	442	1,300	1,111	1,285
Jhánsi tanks	315	529	595	660
TOTAL	1,032,010	1,209,823	1,234,226	1,471,927

The chief increase is on the Upper Ganges Canal, which shows an excess of 107,407 acres over the area attained in 1882-83. The area irrigated on this canal, viz., 627,872 acres, is within 15,000 acres of the amount watered in 1880-81, previous to the transfer of the Cawnpore and Etáwah Branches to the Lower Ganges Canal, thus showing the greater economy in the distribution of water.

On the Lower Ganges Canal there is an increase of 43,241 acres over the returns of the previous year, which, however, were 19,731 acres less than in 1881-82. The old Divisions, viz., the Cawnpore and Etáwah Branches, show a total of 211,908 acres, or an increase of 7,604 acres.

On the new Divisions, viz., Narora, Mainpuri, and Bhognipur, there has been an increase of 35,637 acres. The irrigation on these Divisions is still undeveloped, and there is no doubt that in time the area irrigated on the Lower Ganges Canal will at least equal that now obtained on the Upper Ganges.

The large increase of 68,240 acres on the Agra Canal is due not only to the season, but also to the extension of the distributary system which took place last year. The result is the more satisfactory, as the increase has occurred at a time when the river Jumna fell lower than ever known before; and the scanty supply in the canal had to be eked out with the assistance of Ganges water, which was given without detriment to the irrigation depending on the canals taking out from that river.

The increase, over the previous year, on the Eastern Jumna Canal is 17,870 acres; whilst the minor irrigation works, viz., the Dún and Rohilkhand Canals and the Bundelkhand tanks, remain at their normal figures. On the Bijnor Canals there has been a marked increase during the last two years, due chiefly to the remodelling works undertaken in 1881-82.

3. Table II. gives the areas of the principal crops irrigated during the last six "rabi" seasons:—

TABLE II.

	Wheat.	Barley.	Other crops.	Pulses.	Poppy and other drugs.	Total area.
	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.
1878-79	586,776	266,472	115,914	66,901	15,371	1,075,952
1879-80	482,703	210,959	83,861	33,401	15,104	844,330
1880-81	545,364	261,813	130,011	55,222	18,309	1,032,010
1881-82	726,332	261,602	102,549	77,238	18,203	1,209,823
1883-84	824,607	292,028	221,280	116,967	17,045	1,471,927

The area under wheat and barley alone amounted to 1,116,635 acres, and 116,967 acres of pulses were watered, or about 50,000 acres more than the average. Poppy and other drugs remained at about the usual figure of 17,000 acres; whilst other crops watered rose from 146,662 to 221,280 acres.

4. Table III. shows the percentage of wheat to the total area irrigated on each canal:—

Canals.	1879-80.	1880-81.	1881-82.	1882-83.	1883-84.
					Area.	Percentage of wheat to whole area.

The small amount of 29,360 acres under wheat cultivation on the Agra Canal is noteworthy.

The acreage of inferior grains and pulses on this canal is 76,979, and of gram 34,774 acres, or a total of nearly four times the area under wheat; whilst that under barley is 24,035 acres, or nearly the same as wheat—a remarkable contrast to the areas cultivated on other canals. As irrigation is extended superior crops will, as elsewhere, be sown and the present slovenly style of cultivation improved.

5. Table IV compares the assessments under occupiers' rate with those of the three preceding years:—

Total	21,09,061	25,39,377	26,07,142	31,16,061	2·11

The rate per acre is R2·11, or the same as last year. In 1881-82 it was R2·09.

6. These figures show very satisfactory economical results, and are decidedly creditable to the administration of the canals.

Order.—Ordered that copies of this Resolution be submitted to the Government of India; that it be circulated to other Governments and to Local Departments; and that it be published in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Government Gazette.

(3) Any inhabitant objecting to the proposed tax may, within thirty days from the publication of the notice, submit his objection in writing to the committee ; and the committee shall, at a special meeting, take his objection into consideration.

(4) If no such objection is received within the said period of thirty days, or if such objection, having been considered as aforesaid, is deemed insufficient, the committee may forward its proposals to the Local Government, with the objections (if any) which have been submitted as aforesaid, and its decision thereupon.

(5) The Local Government, on receiving such proposals, may sanction the same, or refuse to sanction them, or return them to the committee for further consideration.

(Chapter III.—Taxation.—Sections 43-52.

(6) When the Local Government sanctions any such proposals which require the further sanction of the Governor General in Council, it shall submit the same to the Governor General in Council, with the objections (if any) received through the committee; and the Governor General in Council may sanction the proposals, or refuse to sanction them, or return them to the Local Government for further consideration.

(7) When the proposals of a committee have been sanctioned by the Local Government, or by the Local Government and the Governor General in Council, as the case may be, the committee may, at a special meeting, direct the imposition of the tax in accordance with such proposals.

(8) In giving such direction the committee shall fix a date from which the tax shall come into force:

Provided that—

Power for Local Government to suspend levy of tax.

45. (1) If at any time it appears to the Local Government, on complaint made or otherwise, that any tax imposed under the foregoing sections is unfair in its incidence, or that the levy thereof or of any part thereof is injurious to the interests of the general public, it may require the committee to take within a specified period measures to remove the objection; and if within that period the requirement is not complied with to the satisfaction of the Local Government, the Local Government may by notification suspend the levy of the tax or of such part thereof until the objection has been removed.

(2) The Local Government may at any time, by notification, rescind any such suspension.

Limitation of appeal.

50. (1) No appeal shall lie in respect of a tax on any land or building, unless it is preferred within one month after the publication of the notice prescribed by section 56, and no appeal shall lie in respect of any other tax unless it is preferred within one month from the time when the demand for the tax is made:

Provided that an appeal may be admitted after the expiration of the period prescribed therefor by this section if the appellant satisfies the officer before whom the appeal is preferred that he had sufficient cause for not presenting the appeal within that period.

(2) No appeal shall be entertained unless the amount of the tax to which it relates is deposited with the committee before the appeal is preferred.

(2) For the purpose of preparing the list, the committee may require the owners or occupiers of the buildings or lands to furnish it with returns of the measurements and of the rent or annual value.

Publication of notice of assessments.

54. When the assessment-list has been completed, the committee shall give public notice thereof, and of the place where the list or a copy thereof may be inspected; and every person claiming to be either owner or occupier of property included in the list, or the agent of any such person, shall be at liberty to inspect the list and to make extracts therefrom without charge.

(2) The list when amended under this section shall be deposited in the committee's office, and shall there be open during office hours to all owners and occupiers of property comprised therein, and a public notice that it is so open shall forthwith be published.

Further amendments of assessment list.

57. (1) The committee may at any time amend the list by inserting the name of any person whose name ought to be inserted, or by inserting any property which ought to have been inserted, or by altering the assessment on any property which has been insufficiently valued or assessed through mistake, oversight or fraud, after giving notice, to any person interested in the amendment, of a time, not less than one month from the date of service of such notice, at which the amendment is to be made.

(2) Any person interested in any such amendment may tender his objection to the committee in writing before the time fixed in the notice, or orally or in writing at that time, and shall be allowed an opportunity of being heard in support of the same in person or by authorized agent as he thinks fit.

Provided that it shall be in the discretion of the committee to direct that no remission shall be granted unless notice in writing of the vacancy has been given to it within such time from the beginning of the year or of the period as it may, from time to time, fix in this behalf.

(2) When in any case not provided for by the foregoing part of this section a building in respect of which a tax is payable under section 39, sub-section (1), clause (a), or under section 40 or section 41, is wholly or in greater part demolished or destroyed by fire or otherwise, the committee may remit such proportion of the tax as it thinks equitable.

(3) The amount of every such arrear, besides being recoverable in any other manner provided by this Act, shall, subject to any claim on behalf of Her Majesty, be a first charge on the property in respect of which it is payable, and shall be recoverable, on application made in this behalf by the committee to the Deputy Commissioner, as if the property were an estate, assessed to land-revenue and the arrear were an arrear of such revenue due thereon:

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall authorize the arrest of a defaulter.

(2) The committee may cause any property so seized, or so much thereof as is necessary, to be sold by auction to satisfy the demand, with the expenses occasioned by the seizure, custody and sale thereof, unless the demand and expenses are in the meantime paid, after the lapse of five days from the seizure, and after the issue of a proclamation fixing the time and place of sale:

Provided that, by order of the president or a vice-president, articles of a perishable nature which could not be kept for five days without serious risk of damage may be sold after the lapse of such shorter time as he may, having regard to the nature of the articles, think proper.

82. The committee may close temporarily any street vested in it or any part thereof for the purpose of repairs, or for the purpose of constructing or repairing any sewer, drain, culvert or bridge, or for any other public purpose; and may divert, discontinue or permanently close any such street, and sell the land or such part thereof as is not required for the purposes of this Act.

Power to permit temporary occupation of streets, &c.

83. The committee may grant permission in writing for the temporary occupation of any street or land vested in it for the purpose of depositing any building materials or making any temporary excavation therein or erection thereon, subject to such conditions as it may prescribe for the safety or convenience of persons passing by or dwelling or working in the neighbourhood, and may charge fees for such permission, and may at its discretion withdraw the permission.

Names of streets and numbers of buildings.

85. (1) The committee at a meeting may cause a name to be given to any street, and to be affixed on any building in such place as it thinks fit, and may also cause a number to be affixed to any building; and in like manner may, from time to time, cause such names and numbers to be altered.

(2) Whoever destroys, pulls down or defaces any such name or number, or puts up any different name or number from that put up by order of the committee, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to twenty rupees.

Roofs and external walls not to be made of inflammable materials.

86. The committee at a meeting may direct that, within certain limits, to be fixed by it, the external roofs and walls of huts or other buildings shall not be made or renewed of grass, mats, leaves or other highly inflammable materials unless with the permission of the committee in writing; and the committee may, by written notice, require any person who has disobeyed any such direction to remove or alter the roofs or walls so made or renewed as it may think fit.

Power to regulate line of buildings.

87. (1) If any building or part of a building projects beyond the regular line of a public street, either existing or determined on for the future, or beyond the front of the building on either side thereof, the committee may, whenever the building or part has been either entirely or in greater part taken down or burnt down, or has fallen down, by notice require the building or part, when being rebuilt, to be set back to or towards the said regular line or the front of the adjoining buildings; and the portion of the land added to the street by such setting back or removal shall become part of the public street and shall vest in the committee:

Provided that the committee shall make full compensation to the owner for any damage he may sustain in consequence of his building or any part thereof being set back.

(2) The committee may, on such terms as it thinks fit, allow any building to be set forward for the improvement of the line of the street.

Provided that the committee shall make full compensation to the owner for any damage he may sustain in consequence of the prohibition of the erection or re-erection of any building, or of its requiring any land belonging to him to be added to the street.

(2) If any such building is begun or erected without giving notice, or without submitting particulars as aforesaid when required, or in contravention of the legal orders of the committee issued within one month, the committee may by notice require the building to be altered or demolished as it may deem necessary.

Explanation.—The expression "erect any building" includes all additions or alterations which involve new foundations or increased superstructure on existing foundations, or the conversion into a dwelling-house of any building not originally constructed for human habitation, or the conversion into more than one dwelling-house of a building originally constructed as one dwelling-house only.

Removal of projections and obstructions.

Penalty for disobedience to orders of committee under last chapter.

144. Whoever disobeys any lawful directions given by the committee by public notice under the powers conferred upon it by the last preceding chapter, or any written notice lawfully issued by it under the powers so conferred, or fails to comply with the conditions subject to which any permission was given by the committee to him under those powers, shall, if the disobedience or omission is not an offence punishable under any other section, be punishable with fine which may extend to fifty rupees, and, in the case of a continuing breach, with a further fine which may extend to five rupees for every day after the first during which the breach continues:

[Second publication]

ACT No. XIV OF 1881.

An Act for the validation of decisions passed by certain Settlement-officers in the Panjab.

XIX of 1865. WHEREAS section 21 of the Panjab Courts Act 1865, after conferring certain powers on the Local Government in any district in which a settlement of land-revenue might be in progress, provided as follows, namely —"The Local Government may also, with the previous sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, invest any special officer in such district with the civil powers of a Commissioner, Deputy Commissioner, Assistant Commissioner or Tahsildar, as defined in this Act, for the purpose of deciding suits in respect to land, or the rent, revenue or produce of land, such powers to be exercised on the Revenue side", and whereas doubts have recently been raised as to whether the said section conferred power to invest a special officer as aforesaid with power to decide appeals in such suits, and whereas section 19 of the Panjab Courts XVII of 1877. Act, 1877, provides that the Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, invest any officer making or controlling a settlement of land-revenue in any local area with all or any of the powers of any Court constituted under that Act, for the purpose of trying all or any specified class of suits and appeals relating to land, or the rent, revenue or produce of land, arising in that local area, and whereas certain officers making or controlling settlements of land-revenue have decided suits of the description mentioned in section 21 of the XIX of 1865. Panjab Courts Act, 1865, or section 19 of the XVII of 1877. Panjab Courts Act, 1877, and appeals in such suits, without being invested with power to decide the same;

and whereas it is apprehended that certain officers making or controlling settlements of land-revenue have exercised judicial powers when at places beyond the local limits of their jurisdiction;

and whereas for the quieting of titles and the avoidance of litigation it is expedient that the decisions passed by officers engaged in making or controlling settlements in suits of the description mentioned in section 21 of the Panjab Courts Act, XIX of 1865. 1865, and in section 19 of the Panjab Courts Act, XVII of 1877. 1877, and in appeals in such suits, should not be impeached for want of authority in such officers, and that the validity of such decisions should be affirmed,

It is hereby enacted as follows —

1 In the portion of section 21 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1865, hereinbefore recited the word "suits" shall be deemed to have always included appeals. XIX of 1865.

Construction of section 21 of Act XIX of 1865

2 When any officer making or controlling a settlement of land-revenue has decided a suit of the description mentioned in section 21 of the Panjab Courts Act, 1865, or section 19 of the Panjab Courts Act, 1877, or an appeal in any such suit, and his decision would, if he had been duly invested with power under either of those sections to decide such suits or appeals, have been valid the decision shall not be deemed invalid or deprived of any of its effect by reason of the objection that he was not so invested XIX of 1865 XVII of 1877.

Validation of decisions of certain unauthorized officers

Provided that a decision heretofore declared by any competent Court to be invalid on the ground that the officer who decided the suit or appeal was not authorized to decide the same shall not be rendered valid by this section

3 When the decision of an officer making or controlling a settlement of land-revenue would be deemed valid if it had been passed by him within a particular local area, it shall not be deemed invalid or deprived of any of its effect by reason of the objection that at the time when he passed it he was beyond the limits of that local area.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th August, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 9 OF 1884.

A Bill to legalize the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of certain functions assigned to the Governor General in Council.

WHEREAS certain functions which are by enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces assigned to the Governor General in Council are in practice discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those Provinces, and it is expedient that these functions should continue to be so discharged, and that their discharge in the past should be legalized;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Transfer to Lieutenant-Governor of certain functions of Governor General in Council.

The sections of the enactments hereto scheduled which are specified in the third column of the schedule shall have effect, and, so far as may be necessary to validate anything heretofore done under them by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, shall be deemed to have had effect, as if the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces were therein referred to instead of the Governor General in Council.

THE SCHEDULE.

(a) Regulations of the Bengal Code.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
V of 1799	To limit the interference of the Zilá and City Courts of Diwání Adálat in the execution of wills and administration to the estates of persons dying intestate.	7
II of 1800	For laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Gházipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty.	10 & 14
IX of 1833.	To modify certain portions of Regulation VII of 1832 and Regulation IV of 1828; to provide for the more speedy and satisfactory decision of judicial questions cognizable by officers of Revenue employed in making settlements under the above Regulations; for enforcing the production of the village accounts; for the more extensive employment of native agency in the Revenue Department; and to declare the intent of section 5, Regulation VII of 1822, touching claims to mahkána.	16, 17 & 25

(b) Act of the Governor General in Council.

Number and year.	Subject.	Section.
XII of 1856.	To amend the law respecting the employment of amins of the Civil Courts in the Presidency of Fort William.	2

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER certain enactments in force in the North-Western Provinces certain functions are assigned to the Governor General in Council, which in practice are now discharged by the Lieutenant-Governor of those provinces. Thus, by sections 10 and 14 of Bengal Regulation XXXIII of 1800 (for laying open to public use the stone-quarries at Chunar, Gházipur and Mirzapur, in the Province of Benares, subject to a fixed duty), the Governor General in Council is empowered to sanction the allowances and establishment of the dároghas of the stone-quarries referred to, to fix the rate of duty payable in respect of stone excavated from those quarries, and to make further rules respecting the quarries. As these quarries have now become Provincial both financially and administratively, they have long been under the control of the Local Government, which has been in the habit of exercising the powers above noticed, though they are by law assigned to the Governor General in Council.

2. As the discharge by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of these and similar functions assigned by other enactments to the Governor General in Council, though in accordance with existing administrative arrangements, would seem to be of doubtful legality, the present Bill has been prepared with the object of empowering the Lieutenant-Governor to continue to discharge these functions in the future and legalizing their discharge by him in the past.

"(b) direct, either retrospectively or prospectively, that section forty-one shall not apply throughout any part of those territories to any property in which a member of any race, sect, tribe or class specified in the notification is interested."

2. The following clause shall be deemed to have been added to the first section of the said Act from the date on which it came into force, namely :— Addition to same section.

"Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing part of this section, sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall not extend or be extended to any district or tract of country excluded from the operation of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, under the power conferred by the first section of that Act or otherwise." III of 1877.

3. To section 4 of the said Act the following shall be added, namely :— Addition to section 4 of same Act.

"And sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall be read as supplemental to the Indian Registration Act, 1877." III of 1877.

4. In section 69 of the said Act— Amendment of section 69 of same Act.

(a) after the words "is valid in the following cases" the words "and in no others" shall be inserted; and

(b) after the words "Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist," in both places where they occur, there shall be inserted the words "or a member of any other race, sect, tribe or class from time to time specified by the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, in the local official Gazette in this behalf."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE last clause of section 1 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, provides that any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, throughout the whole or any part of the territories administered by such Local Government, the members of any race, sect, tribe or class from all or any of the following provisions, namely, sections 41, 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3), 59, 69, 107 and 123.

54. * * Such transfer, in the case of tangible immoveable property of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards, or in the case of a reversion or other intangible thing, can be made only by a registered instrument.

In the case of tangible immoveable property of a value less than one hundred rupees, such transfer may be made either by a registered instrument or by delivery of the property.

59. Where the principal money secured is one hundred rupees or upwards, a mortgage can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses.

Where the principal money secured is less than one hundred rupees, a mortgage may be effected either by an instrument signed and attested as aforesaid, or (except in the case of a simple mortgage) by delivery of the property.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to render invalid mortgages made in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karachi and Rangoon, by delivery to a creditor or his agent of documents of title to immoveable property, with intent to create a security thereon.

107. A lease of immoveable property from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year, or reserving a yearly rent, can be made only by a registered instrument.

All other leases of immoveable property may be made either by an instrument or by oral agreement.

123. For the purpose of making a gift of immoveable property, the transfer must be effected by a registered instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor, and attested by at least two witnesses.

For the purpose of making a gift of moveable property, the transfer may be effected either by a registered instrument signed as aforesaid or by delivery.

Such delivery may be made in the same way as goods sold may be delivered.

2. In a letter, dated the 6th September, 1882, the Chief Commissioner of Assam asked for an expression of opinion from the Government of India as to the effect which the exemption under that clause, of "any race, sect, tribe or class" from the provisions of section 54 (paragraphs 2 and 3) and sections 59, 107 and 123, which are set out on the margin, has upon transactions, one of the parties concerned in which is a member of such race, sect, tribe or class, while the other party does not belong to an exempted class.

3. To this reference the Government of India, on the 13th December, 1882, replied that the precise manner in which the exemption would operate under the circumstances described was a matter of some difficulty; and the only satisfactory means by which an intelligible operation might be given to section 1 of the Act seemed to be the amendment of that section so as to make the exemption from sections 54, 59, 107 and 123 local and not personal.

4. The Chief Commissioner, in a letter dated 12th January, 1883, suggested as an alternative, and in his opinion a preferable one, a power to exempt not persons or places but transactions in which one or both of the parties might be members of the race, sect, tribe or class for which the sections in question might be deemed unsuitable.

5. It was thought desirable to obtain the opinions of the other Local Governments on the two alternative proposals thus put forward, and accordingly, on the 7th May, 1883, a circular was issued for this purpose.

6. It will be observed that the question thus raised was confined to the power conferred by section 1 of the Act to exempt from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123; but, attention having been once drawn to the subject, it was natural that the effect of an exemption from the other two sections of the Act (41 and 69) mentioned in section 1 and set out in the margin should also be considered; and, on looking into the matter, it was found that, while an exemption under either of those sections would give rise to questions very similar to those raised by the Chief Commissioner of Assam in the case of the sections referred to by him, there was this further difficulty in regard to section 69 that the object of allowing any power to exempt from it was not apparent. The circular accordingly asked for the opinions of the local Governments in regard to these sections also.

41. Where, with the consent, express or implied, of the persons interested in immoveable property, a person is the ostensible owner of such property and transfers the same for consideration, the transfer shall not be voidable on the ground that the transferor was not authorized to make it: provided that the transferee, after taking reasonable care to ascertain that the transferor had power to make the transfer, has acted in good faith.

69. A power conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee, or on any person on his behalf, to sell or concur in selling, in default of payment of the mortgage-money, the mortgaged property, or any part thereof, without the intervention of the Court, is valid in the following cases (namely)—

(a) where the mortgage is an English mortgage, and neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist;

(b) where the mortgagee is the Secretary of State for India in Council;

(c) where the mortgaged property or any part thereof is situate within the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karáchí or Rangoon.

But no such power shall be exercised unless and until—

(1) notice in writing requiring payment of the principal money has been served on the mortgagor or one of several mortgagors, and default has been made in payment of the principal money, or of part thereof, for three months after such service; or

(2) some interest under the mortgage amounting at least to five hundred rupees is in arrear and unpaid for three months after becoming due.

When a sale has been made in professed exercise of such a power, the title of the purchaser shall not be impeachable on the ground that no case had arisen to authorise the sale, or that due notice was not given, or that the power was otherwise improperly or irregularly exercised; but any person damnified by an unauthorised, or improper or irregular exercise of the power shall have his remedy in damages against the person exercising the power.

The money which is received by the mortgagee, arising from the sale, after discharge of prior incumbrances, if any, to which the sale is not made subject, or after payment into court under section fifty-seven of a sum to meet any prior incumbrance, shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be held by him in trust to be applied by him, first, in payment of all costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him as incident to the sale or any attempted sale; and, secondly, in discharge of the mortgage-money and costs and other money, if any, due under the mortgage; and the residue of the money so received shall be paid to the person entitled to the mortgaged property or authorized to give receipts for the proceeds of the sale thereof.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to powers conferred before this Act comes into force.

The powers and provisions contained in sections six to nineteen (both inclusive) of the Trustees and Mortgagees' Powers Act, 1866, shall be deemed to apply to English mortgages, wherever in British India the mortgaged property may be situate; when neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist.

7. The replies of the Local Governments have now been received and considered by the Government of India, and the following are the conclusions to which they seem to point.

8. In the first place, as regards the power of exempting from the operation of sections 54, 59, 107 and 123, it seems to the Governor General in Council best to make it simply a power of exempting locally, that is to say, the exemption should be absolute and cover transactions relating to any immoveable property within the specified area, whether both or one or none of the parties may belong to those races or tribes for whose benefit the exemption is intended. To give a personal character to the exemption and restrict it, as some suggest, to transactions within the area, to which either both parties or one of the parties are of particular races, would give rise to uncertainty of title and other difficulties and doubts noticed by Sir C. Turner and others. With a local exemption clause of an absolute character an intending purchaser has to look to nothing but the situation of the property.

9. It is true that there may be advanced people living in exempted localities for whom the sections in question would provide a law more suitable than that which prevails where they do not apply, but it must be remembered that these people always could, and Europeans, it is believed, generally would, follow the practice of having formally executed and registered documents, and this would to a great extent give them the benefits aimed at by the Act; for it must be borne in mind that in the places in question titles would not usually be complicated, and in any case the sections of the Act referred to are not an essential part of the law, but merely an improvement of it, which is not in force as yet in great provinces like Bombay, the Panjáb and British Burma. Again, on the other hand, it is true that there may be members of wild tribes settled in some non-exempted localities, and that they may find it difficult to learn to act up to the law; but, as has been observed by some of the authorities consulted, wild people scattered in this way among a population the great mass of which is civilized soon get into the ways of the people among whom they live.

In either case the objection is one that must apply to most of our enacted laws, and indeed to a good deal of the customary law of the country. We cannot get a law that will suit everybody; we must be content with a reasonably close approximation.

10. The first section of the Bill accordingly amends section 1 of the Act so as to empower a Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to exempt any part of the territories under its administration from the operation of any of these sections.

11. Next, as regards the powers to exclude the operation of section 41, the considerations to be borne in mind are fully stated by the Chief Justice of Madras in his opinion.

Sir C. Turner observes that the general rule that no one can confer a higher right in property than he himself possesses in some cases worked obvious hardship; and, as the science of jurisprudence advanced, it was limited by the exception declared in section 41, on the principle that, where one of two innocent persons must suffer from the fraud of a third party, the loss should fall on him who has created or could have prevented the opportunity for the fraud. To races which have not made a substantial progress in civilization, this rule appears to Sir Charles Turner to be unsuited for the following reasons, as stated in his own words:—

"Regarding the question in its sentimental aspect, it is certain that a member of a race unacquainted with the refinements of equity would fail to recognize the justice of a rule which caused him to be deprived of his property by what is ex hypothesi a fraud.

"I do not contend that legislation is to be governed by sentimental considerations, but I have heretofore asserted, and still hold, that legislation should only be such as is in advance of the general understanding that its justice should be recognized by the mass consulted.

"There is, however, a substantial reason to be deduced from the rule itself, which shows its inapplicability to uncivilized races. The rule affords protection only to a purchaser for consideration who acts in good faith after reasonable inquiry.

"The imposition of these conditions on the purchaser suggests to persons, who have occasion to create an ostensible ownership of their property in others, the prudence of providing certain safeguards. If they are well advised, they will be careful to secure evidence of the actual ownership, so that a purchaser, on making due inquiry, must either ascertain the true character of the transaction, or entertain such suspicions of the circumstances that he can no longer assert that he acted in good faith.

"The transactions of uncivilized races in the matter of property are of the simplest character; they are unacquainted with the precautions which technical skill has devised to secure property.

"Again, as society progresses, men are habituated to exercise greater caution in their dealings with their fellows, and have larger opportunities for selecting agents who are reputed either to be worthy of confidence or to be in a position to answer for a breach of confidence. A prudent man selects for an office of trust a person of tried probity and some substance. The uncivilized races have less choice in the selection of agents and less opportunity for forming a judgment of the character and position of their agents."

12. The conclusion to which these remarks seem to point is that the Government should be empowered to direct that section 41 should not apply throughout any particular local area to any property in which a member of any particular race, sect, tribe or class is interested, and it is on these lines that sub-clause (b) of the new fifth clause which the Bill proposes to insert in the first section of the Act has been framed.

13. The discussion regarding section 69 has opened out questions extending beyond the particular difficulty first brought to notice, and it is fortunate that the Government have had in considering them the assistance of Sir C. Turner, who was a member of the Commission by which the Transfer of Property Bill was settled.

The circumstances under which the section was enacted will be found stated in the following extract from his Minute:

"In England, it is usual to confer on a mortgagee, in case of default, a power to sell the mortgaged property without the intervention of a Court of justice; and, where the instrument of mortgage does not confer the power, but does not in express terms negative it, a mortgagee is empowered by statute to sell on the expiry of twelve months after the date of default and of six months from the date on which notice is given of his intention to exercise the power—23 & 24 Vic., c. 145. This statutory provision was, by Act XXVIII of 1866, extended to mortgages in this country to which the English law is applicable.

"On the other hand, the simple mortgage in India did not authorize a sale without the order of a Court, and by Regulation XVII of 1806 in the Bengal Presidency it had been enacted that a mortgage by conditional sale should not become foreclosed without the service of a notice through the District Court, and on the expiry of a year of grace. Inferring the policy of the legislature from this Regulation, the Sadr Diwani Adálat refused to give effect to an express power of sale—S. D. A., 1847-51. In the Bombay Presidency, Mr. Justice Melville expressed a doubt whether a private sale of property in the Mufassal, effected by a mortgagee under a power, would be valid—VIII Bombay H. C., A. C., 113.

"On the other hand, I entertained the opinion, and I believe acted on it before the Transfer of Property Act came into operation, that, in the absence of a prohibition of law, the owner of property was competent to confer on a mortgagee what powers he himself possessed, and that, if a mortgagor having, as owner, authority to sell, created a power of sale in a mortgagee, and the mortgagee duly exercised the power, the Courts were bound to recognize the validity of the sale.

"In Bhanoomutty Chowdhun vs. Premchund Nuggee, XV B. L. R. 28, property in the Mufassal had been mortgaged by an instrument in the English form containing a power of sale, and subsequently mortgaged to a third party by a conditional sale. The first mortgagee then exercised his power of sale, and subsequently to the sale the second mortgagee took proceedings to foreclose. It was held that the purchaser under the power was entitled to notice of foreclosure, and impliedly that a sale under a power might be valid."

"In this state of the authorities," Sir Charles Turner continues, "it fell to the Law Commission to offer for the acceptance of the legislature a proposal to settle the law. It was felt that, in accordance with the principles of freedom of contract, an owner of property should be at liberty to confer on a mortgagee any of the powers which he could himself exercise, and that a borrower might more readily obtain accommodation, or obtain it on easier terms, if he could offer a security which would be speedily converted by the lender without the delay and the cost of an application to a Court of justice. On the other hand, it was recognized that in this country the large majority of mortgage-securities are created by persons who are poor and illiterate in favour of more sharpwitted creditors, and that, in an agricultural country, landed securities are subject to sudden and excessive variations in value, which are rarely foreseen by borrowers. The Commission came to the conclusion that, while more wealthy borrowers in the country and all borrowers in the presidency-towns might be left to deal with their property as they pleased, it was necessary in the present state of British India to create a legislative safeguard for the poorer classes in the country. They, therefore, proposed that the creation of a power of sale should be declared invalid except in mortgages where the principal money secured exceeded Rs. 500, or in mortgages to the Secretary of State or in mortgages of property in the presidency-towns. In Committee, the section was recast. Instead of declaring that a power of sale conferred by the instrument of mortgage is invalid except in the cases specified, the section, as it now stands, declares that in certain cases it is valid."

"Unless it be held that the express declaration of the validity of such a power in certain cases is tantamount to a declaration of its invalidity in other cases, which I incline to doubt, the object sought by the Law Commission has not been attained, and the validity of the power in cases other than those specified is still left an open question.

"It may have been desirable that the protection the Law Commission intended to confer in the case of mortgages for small amounts should have been extended to mortgages for somewhat larger sums, but I think it is to be regretted that the amendment should have been effected in such terms as to leave the question doubtful whether any protection is given to mortgages of any class or amount, and I trust advantage may be taken of the opportunity to reconsider the provisions of the section. It will be seen that the section, as it now stands, affects only—

"(1) parties to an English mortgage, i.e., a mortgage in the English form, who are not Hindús, Muhammadans or Buddhists (an inexact enumeration of the creeds held by natives of India);

"(2) parties to a mortgage to the Secretary of State;

"(3) parties to mortgages of property in the presidency-towns.

"As the section now stands, I do not see any reason for including it in the class of sections for which certain races may be exempted; I apprehend it was included before it was recast."

14. Section 4 of the Bill accordingly amends section 69 of the Act so as to express clearly what was actually intended, and no power to exempt from the main provisions of the section has been retained; but, as Mr Justice Muthuswami Aiyar has pointed out that there are other classes whom it is even more necessary to exclude from the operation of the exceptional provision in clause (a) than Hindús, Muhammadans and Buddhists, words have been added to that clause to provide a power of excluding them.

15. Section 2 of the Bill is intended merely to remove a formal defect in the Act which has been brought to notice in the course of the recent discussions. It was of course never intended that the provisions of the Act which assume the existence of a registration system should take effect in those tracts which are excluded from the operation of the Registration Act; but the Act omitted to make any express provision to that effect, and that omission is now supplied.

16. The addition which it is proposed to make to section 4 of the Act by section 3 of the Bill has for its object merely to remove a difficulty which has been felt in some quarters as to the bearing which the provisions of the Act relating to registration and the Registration Act have on one another.

"Provided that the fines so imposed shall not exceed the following limits, namely:—

"(1) when the licensee or lessee is punishable for the breach, one thousand rupees, and in the case of a continuing breach a further fine of two hundred rupees for every day after the first during the whole or any part of which the breach continues;

"(2) when a servant of the licensee or lessee or any other person is punishable for the breach, one-fourth of those amounts."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE main object of this Bill is to give power to the Government, and to any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially empowered in this behalf, to place telegraph lines under or over property belonging whether to private persons or to public bodies.

2. The attention of the Government has recently been directed to the fact that, as the law now stands, the Governor General in Council and his licensees have no power to place telegraph lines upon the land of municipal or other similar bodies or of private persons. In England the requisite powers are conferred on the Postmaster General, who works and maintains the telegraphs in that country, by 26 & 27 Vic., cap. 112, as amended by 41 & 42 Vic., cap. 76; and as it seems desirable that the Government in which the exclusive privilege of establishing telegraphs in this country is vested should possess somewhat similar powers, the present Bill has been prepared.

3. Section 3 empowers the Government or any company or person licensed under section 4 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, and specially authorized by a Government officer to place and maintain telegraph lines and posts under, over, along, across, in or upon the property of any "person", which term includes a body corporate. It is considered that licensees should have these powers, because the licenses granted always strictly limit the area of the operations of the licensees, and it would be somewhat anomalous for local bodies and private persons to have the power to neutralize the licenses granted by the Governor General in Council by objecting to the licensees' operations, or by hampering them by the exaction of fees for permission to work under their licenses. The powers thus given are, however, to be exercised so as to do as little damage as possible, and their exercise is moreover made subject to important restrictions and conditions.

4. When the property belongs to a municipal board or other local authority, the powers conferred by the Act cannot be exercised over it without the consent of that authority; and that consent may be given subject to conditions. Among other conditions which can be imposed is one requiring that any expenses to which the local authority may be put by the exercise of the power shall be made good; but it will be observed that no provision is made for the payment of compensation on any other account to a local authority whose property is made use of for this purpose, it being considered that, as the construction of telegraphs is a matter in which the public are interested, no charge should be made for accommodation of this sort when it can be granted without inconvenience to the public or expense to the local authority concerned.

5. It may sometimes happen that, though at the time when a telegraph authority desires to exercise its powers over some property of a local authority there may be no reasonable ground for objecting, and the local authority may thus find itself compelled to consent, a state of things may subsequently arise under which the continued exercise of the powers would be felt as a grave public inconvenience or a cause of serious loss. Land, e.g., which was waste at the time the telegraph line was constructed over, it might afterwards be required for some important public object or might acquire great value for building purposes, and, as no compensation (except for actual expenses out of pocket) would have been paid to the local authority at the time the line was constructed, it is but just that provision should be made for the removal or alteration of the line in such an event. This accordingly is done by section 5 of the Bill, which empowers the local authority to call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter its telegraph or post, and, in the event of the telegraph authority refusing or neglecting to do so, gives an appeal to the Local Government.

6. In the event, which it is believed will be rare, of a local authority arbitrarily refusing its consent to the exercise by a telegraph authority of the powers conferred by the Bill or clogging its consent with unreasonable conditions, it will (section 7) be open to the telegraph authority to appeal to the Local Government, whose decision will be final.

7. Turning now to the case in which it may be desired to exercise the powers given by the Bill over the property of private persons, it will be seen that here provision is made for the payment of full compensation, the amount of which in the event of dispute will (section 9) be determined by the Civil Court, and that, in the event of a person upon whose property a telegraph line or post has been placed desiring subsequently to deal with the property in such a way as would make it necessary or convenient that the line or post should be removed to another part of it or to a higher or lower level or altered in form, he can (section 10) tender the cost of the work and call upon the telegraph authority to remove or alter the line or post, and, if that authority refuses to do so, can appeal to the Civil Court.

8. It may be observed, however, that in practice in this country the power of taking telegraph lines through private property is not likely to be exercised either by the Government or by its licensees except on rare occasions, and then as a rule only to the extent of crossing with the wire, a post being scarcely ever erected on private land. Private property has hitherto been always avoided as much as possible, and it is likely to be still more carefully avoided in future if it is made clear, as it is proposed to do by this Bill, that full compensation will have to be paid for exercising the power over private and not for exercising it over public property.

9. The present opportunity has been taken to make three amendments of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1876, which experience has shown to be desirable. The first has for its object the expansion of the definition of "telegraph" so as to bring it into more exact conformity with the construction put upon the definitions in the English Acts by a recent decision of the High Court of Justice in England.

10. The second is intended to provide for the regulation of telegraph lines constructed by the Government but leased to companies or individuals, by whom they are worked. The position of such lines under the Act as it at present stands is far from clear, and the object of the amendment proposed in section 12 of the Bill is to put them on much the same footing as licensed lines.

11. The object of the third amendment, which is made by section 13 of the Bill, is to prescribe penalties for the breach of the rules made under section 8 of the Act for the conduct of telegraphs worked under license or lease. In such cases, as the Act now stands, the only remedy is to revoke the license or lease, but this course would in most cases cause such great public inconvenience that it is impracticable. The result is that at present there is virtually no penalty for the infringement of the rules made under section 8 of the Act. To remedy this state of things, the Bill adds a clause to that section empowering the Governor General in Council to prescribe by the rules moderate fines for the breach of them.

Extract from the Tribune of 14th June, 1884 [Papers No. 9].

2. Instead of repealing the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, and bringing the new law into force at once, as was proposed in the Bill as introduced, we have thought it better (section 4 of the amended Bill) to require the Local Government to apply the new law to any place to which that Act had been extended, unless the Local Government comes to the conclusion, and declares by notification in the official Gazette, that the provisions of the Act are not suited to any such place. The Local Government is at the same time empowered to continue in office the members of the present committees as if they had been elected or appointed under the new law for any term not exceeding three years which it may fix. When the new law is thus made applicable to any place to which the Act of 1873 had been extended, that Act will cease to apply, and other consequences will follow, which are set forth in section 12. In the Supplemental chapter, the Local Government is further empowered to withdraw the area of any municipality from the operation either of Act IV of 1873 or of the new law, if the latter has been made applicable. The Local Government will thus be enabled to abolish any municipality constituted under Act IV of 1873, if it appears undesirable to continue municipal institutions in the area under its control.

3. The provisions as to the term of office of members, the removal of members and the filling up of casual vacancies in the committee have been assimilated, as nearly as possible, to the corresponding provisions in the District Boards Act.

4. On the recommendation of the Local Government, we have by section 14 empowered the Commissioner of a division to approve of the election of a president by a second class committee, and to appoint the president of a committee of this class where the committee is not empowered to elect, or fails or does not desire to exercise the power.

5. The provision in section 25 enabling the president or, in his absence, a vice-president to exercise the powers of the committee in cases of emergency has been limited to the power, at the cost of the municipality, to direct the execution of any work or the doing of any act which he considers necessary for the service or safety of the public; and, when he exercises this power, he is required to report his proceedings to the next following meeting of the committee. Where the case is sufficiently provided for by the rules of business under section 24, as to the exercise of the executive authority of the committee, the extraordinary powers given by section 25 of course will not arise, as there would not then be a case of emergency.

6. In section 27 we have provided that nothing done under the Act should be questioned on account of the existence of a vacancy in a committee or joint committee or of any merely formal defect.

7. We have not retained the provision of the Bill as introduced requiring the sanction of the Commissioner of the division to the removal of a paid secretary, and his sanction to the appointment is confined (section 28) to the appointment of a paid secretary and to the rate of pay to be allowed, and does not extend to approval of the person selected. The responsibility for appointing a proper person will thus rest exclusively with the committee. In cases, however, in which Government officers were employed in the service of a municipality before the passing of this Bill into law, section 12 provides for their remaining in the service of the new committee, and prohibits their dismissal unless under the sanction of the Local Government.

8. The employment of other officers and servants (when there is available budget provision) is made subject only (section 29) to what is necessary and proper for the efficient execution of the duties of the committee, and to any rules which the Local Government may make as to the employment of persons appointed to offices requiring professional skill; but power is given to the Commissioner of the division, subject to an appeal by the committee to the Local Government (section 30), to require the reduction of excessively large or expensive establishments or of unduly high rates of pay.

9. We have raised the limit of the power of first class committees (section 33) to delegate the authority to enter into contracts on their behalf to 500 rupees, and have required all contracts for larger amounts on behalf of any committee to be sanctioned at a meeting of the committee before they can be entered into. It has been suggested that separate provision is required for contracts which do not fix the quantity of work to be done, but only the rate to be paid per unit of work; but we are of opinion that these contracts can be brought within this section by fixing a maximum limit, not exceeding five hundred rupees, on the sum which may become payable under them.

10. In section 34 the limit of value above which contracts are required to be in writing has been increased from Rs. 20 to Rs. 100 in the case of first class committees, and Rs. 50 in the case of second class committees.

11. The prohibition in section 35 of members, officers or servants of the committee being interested in contracts with the committee, unless with the Commissioner's permission, has been assimilated to section 62 of the District Boards Act.

12. Section 36, which takes the place of section 99 of the Bill as introduced, has been modified so as to require notice to be given of all suits against committees, or against their officers for their official acts; the sub-sections as to limitation and as to tender of amends being omitted as unnecessary. The protection thus given corresponds with that given to Government and to public officers by section 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, except that the notice required is shorter.

13. In the Taxation chapter the taxes which committees are empowered to propose for the general purposes of the Act are brought together in section 39, a higher rate of tax on buildings and lands being allowed in certain scheduled municipalities, all of which are hill-stations, than that which is fixed as the maximum elsewhere.

14. In the second sub-section of section 39 we have defined the expression "annual value" as meaning the gross annual rent for which buildings or lands might reasonably be expected to let, and we have omitted the first proviso, as, though it has been the practice in hill-stations to let houses furnished, the furniture supplied is ordinarily of small value; and as most of us are of opinion that the rent to be considered in estimating the annual value is the sum for which they would let if unfurnished, we have added words making this clear.

15. Special powers are also given to impose a scavenging-tax and a water-tax as payment for services rendered to the occupiers of any buildings or land or for the construction and maintenance of works for the supply of water from which such occupiers may benefit. No special power has been thought necessary to enable committees to charge fees for the use of schools or other public institutions maintained by them, as they may impose any conditions they may think proper upon persons who wish to avail themselves of the benefit of such institutions.

16. We have modified the procedure for imposing and assessing taxes (section 42) by providing that new taxes leviable by the year should not come into force except at the commencement of the year, and other new taxes until at least six months have elapsed from the date of the meeting at which, after the requisite sanction has been obtained, their imposition is directed.

17. We have enabled the Local Government (section 45), where any tax appears unfair in its incidence or injurious to the interests of the public, to require the committee to take the necessary measures to remove the objection and, if it fails to comply with the requisition, to suspend the levy of the tax.

18. We have (section 49) given an appeal against assessments, on account of octroi, as in the case of other taxes, and we have also enabled officers hearing appeals against assessments, if they entertain reasonable doubt on any question as to the liability to, or principle of, the assessment, to state a case for the decision of the Chief Court.

19. We have (section 52) saved taxes leviable under the Municipal Act now in force so far as they are consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, the new law.

20. We have in section 59 conferred upon the committee a power to remit a tax on buildings on certain equitable grounds.

21. We have made taxes on buildings and lands, other than the scavenging-tax and the water-tax, payable by the owner and also a charge upon the property, and have therefore found it unnecessary to make them recoverable from the occupier if not paid by the owner after notice.

22. We have added a section (62) giving power to inspect the contents of a conveyance or package to ascertain whether octroi is payable by having it brought before a Magistrate for the purpose, if the person bringing or receiving it within the municipality refuses to allow the necessary inspection, and have in other respects amended the provisions of the Bill as introduced on the subject of the recovery of octroi.

23. The provisions of the Bill on the subject of the municipal fund and of municipal property have been brought together in a new chapter (Chapter IV). In this chapter we have provided (section 68) for prior charges on the municipal fund for loans, establishment-charges and payments for maintenance of pauper-lunatics, audit of accounts, and services rendered to the committee by Provincial Departments of Government, and have empowered the Local Government to make rules with respect to the relative priority to be given to the other duties of the committee. We have also (section 71) declared certain descriptions of property held for municipal purposes to vest in the committee, and have (section 72) introduced a clause, based on a somewhat similar provision of the Bombay Municipal Act, providing that the administration of every public institution maintained out of municipal funds shall vest in the committee, but that the extent of the independent authority of the committee may be prescribed by the Local Government.

24. The sections relating to municipal police have also been collected in a separate chapter (Chapter V). We have added a section (78) defining the powers and duties of the police in respect of offences against the Act or rules made thereunder. By this section they are empowered to arrest persons committing such offences when necessary, and are required to give immediate information of the commission of such offences to the committee, and to assist members or officers of the committee in the exercise of their lawful authority.

25. Another new chapter (Chapter VI) sets forth the powers of the committee to do, or to require others to do, or to abstain from doing, particular acts. This and the following chapter, which deals with offences affecting the public health, safety or convenience, take the place of the powers to make rules for the prevention of nuisances, and for entry on private property for the detection and abatement of nuisances, given by section 67 of the Bill as introduced, and of the powers to issue injunctions and make conditional orders as to nuisances given by sections 68 to 70, and this chapter also embodies the additional powers to make rules and other powers expressly given by the Bill as introduced.

26. In framing these sections, the existing bye-laws of the principal municipalities, and the detailed Municipal Acts in force in other provinces of British India, have been referred to, and we have endeavoured to give all the powers not elsewhere given in the Bill which it appears to be necessary or proper that Panjab municipalities should possess. While there may be municipalities in which some of these powers are not required, these municipalities can be excepted by the Local Government under one of the provisions contained in the Supplemental chapter from the sections giving the powers which the circumstances of the municipality render unnecessary.

27. Instead of enabling committees to make rules regulating for sanitary reasons the crops which may be grown within municipal limits, we have, by section 116, empowered the Local Government to prohibit by notification the cultivation of any crop, the use of any manure or the irrigation of land in any manner, which is reported by the Sanitary Commissioner to be injurious to health, or to impose such conditions thereupon as may remove the risk of injury, and have provided for compensation where the practice prohibited was of long standing.

28. In section 117, which relates to the regulation of offensive or dangerous trades, and corresponds with section 74 of the Bill as introduced, we have omitted manufactories of gunpowder or fireworks, which can now be regulated by rules made by the Local Government under the Explosives Act, IV of 1884, and shops for smoking opium, as these must be licensed under the Opium Act, and the Local Government may, if it thinks proper, instruct Deputy Commissioners to consult municipalities before granting a license under that Act.

29. In section 119 we have extended the power given by the Bill as introduced to make rules for the inspection and proper regulation of lodging-houses to houses occupied by members of more than one family, and have stated in greater detail the subjects with which such rules may deal. This power, with that given in section 115, to prohibit the use for human habitation of houses unfit to be so used, will enable committees to exercise more effective control than hitherto over the arrangements for the accommodation of human beings where this appears necessary for the preservation of the public health, and will, it is believed, be of special importance, not only in hill-stations, but in places the population of which is liable to be largely increased at particular seasons by the resort of pilgrims or the holding of large fairs.

30. Chapter VII provides for the punishment of certain offences affecting the public health, safety and convenience and of disobedience to orders given by the committee under the powers conferred by the preceding chapter.

31. In Chapter VIII, which deals with control, the changes made have been in the direction of assimilation with the provisions of the Panjáb District Boards Act. We have also revised the list of subjects on which the Local Government is empowered to make rules.

32. In the Supplemental chapter (Chapter IX) we have added provisions that copies of rules should be kept by committees available for inspection and for sale to the public (section 160); that rules or bye-laws made under the Panjáb Municipal Act, 1873, should, so far as consistent with, and within the powers conferred by, this Bill, continue in force until repealed by new rules, which the proper authority is required to make and take the necessary steps for bringing into force so soon as may be (section 161); and we have included provisions for altering the boundaries of municipalities or the class to which they belong (sections 165 to 169), for excepting them from the operation of such parts of the Bill as are not suited to their circumstances (section 170), and for withdrawing them from the operation of the law relating to municipalities (section 171).

33. A special section applicable only to Simla (section 177) has also been added to save the land-tax which has been substituted for the ground-rent formerly charged by Government, and which is levied concurrently with a tax on the annual value of property.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of gaming in British Burma.

2. It has long been the opinion of the most experienced District and Police Officers that the systematic gambling originally introduced by the low class Chinese who infest the towns and villages, and now carried on by them and by Burmans of a similar stamp, is doing great injury to the people of that province. In 1882, on the representation of the Inspector-General of Police of the prevalence of tis and of the inadequacy of the law to repress them effectually, the matter was taken up by the Chief Commissioner, who by a Resolution directed Commissioners to obtain an expression of public opinion on the question. With the Resolution were circulated various papers bearing on the subject, including a Bill for the suppression of unlawful gaming which was before the legislature of the Straits Settlements. Special inquiry was made as to whether the people of Burma desired, and were prepared to accept, a stringent gaming law similar to that Bill.

3. The answers showed clearly that the Burmans as a body regarded the prevalence of gambling, especially as practised in the ti,* as a very great evil. Government officers were almost equally strong in their denunciations of these tis. With a few exceptions the opinions received were in favour of suppressing this and other forms of public gaming, and the Bill proposed for the Straits Settlements was accepted as a guide to the direction which legislation should take.

4. The history of the means which the Courts have hitherto used to check the opening of tis is briefly as follows. For some years after the passing of Act III of 1867 it was held that a ti was a form of gaming, and that the lists and papers used in the ti were instruments of gaming, within the meaning of that Act. This view was confirmed by the High Court of Calcutta in 1869. In 1876 Mr. Wilkinson and Mr. Quinton, as Judges of the Special Court of British Burma, held that tis were lotteries, and that, since the enactment of section 294A of the Indian Penal Code, lotteries were punishable under that section and not under Act III of 1867. It is not clear what effect the learned Judges of the Special Court gave to section 15 of Act XXVII of 1870, the Act by which section 294A of the Indian Penal Code was enacted. However, since the date of this judgment, the prosecution of the promoters of tis under Act III of 1867 may be said to have ceased; tis have been regarded as lotteries and the persons concerned in them have been prosecuted under section 294A of the Indian Penal Code; and until lately no doubt of the applicability of that section to this particular kind of gambling has arisen.

5. Two recent rulings of the Judicial Commissioner have presented a different view of the law. In the first of the cases in question the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate, under section 13 of Act III of 1867, as having been engaged in a ti in a zayat or public rest-house beside a public road. The Judicial Commissioner called for the proceedings, and, having come to the conclusion that a ti was not a game of chance and was mere betting or wagering, he referred the matter to the Special Court. The Officiating Recorder, Mr. Allen, dissented from the Judicial Commissioner's opinion, and held that the conviction was right. Under the constitution of the Special Court the opinion of the referring Judge prevails. The Judicial Commissioner accordingly issued a circular in which his own view of the law is enjoined on the Courts subordinate to him,—in other words, on all Courts outside the jurisdiction of the Recorder of Rangoon,—and in which he lays down the doctrine that a ti is not a game nor a lottery, and that the papers used in collecting the money of the persons who take part in the ti are wrongly described as lottery-tickets. In the second of these cases the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate at Rangoon under section 294A of the Penal Code of keeping a lottery-office. On appeal to the Officiating Recorder, that officer referred the question of whether a ti is a lottery to the Special Court. The Judicial Commissioner held that it was not; the Officiating Recorder that it was. In this case also the opinion of the referring Judge prevailed. The Judicial Commissioner, however, has informed the Courts subordinate to him that his own view of the law is to be their guide. There are thus two contradictory judgments of the Special Court, and two diverse rules of law established for different parts of the province, each Judge holding to his own individual opinion.

6. The object of the present Bill is to obviate the effect of the judgments and circulars of the Judicial Commissioner above referred to, which bar all prosecutions for ti-gaming, and the effect of which has already been to give a fresh impetus to that kind of gambling.

It has not been thought expedient to copy the measure proposed by the Government of the Straits Settlements. The draft Ordinance is a very complicated piece of legislation, very stringent in its provisions, and very likely, unless worked under closer supervision than can be given to it in Burma, to become an engine of oppression. Moreover, it does not seem either necessary or desirable to endeavour to check gambling of every kind. A people like the Burmese must have amusement of some sort. It is quite possible to make gambling an expensive amusement, but to stop it altogether, if the people wish to indulge in it, is beyond the power of the law, and the attempt to do it would probably only result in systematic bribery and the corruption of the police. What appears to be chiefly needed is the repression of the professional ti-gambler, the man who makes his living by going about inducing people to game and as often as not swindling them out of their money. The urgent requisite is a law which will enable the authorities to deal with professional gamblers, and all who aid and abet them, with prompt severity, wherever they may be found. For other purposes the Act of 1867 appears to be sufficient, nor does the extension of all its provisions to the province generally appear even to be necessary.

* The nature of the game or lottery or series of bets called ti is as follows:—The banker, or professional gambler, who makes his living by the game, chooses one of 36 animals and deposits a piece of paper on which its name is written in a hollow bamboo or box. Then his emissaries go round asking people to name the animal so chosen and to back their guess by putting down their money. Any one who guesses rightly gets thirty times his stake; the others lose.

7. The present Bill has, therefore, been framed so as to deal particularly with ti-gaming, for which fresh legislation is urgently required.

Section 2 removes the doubt which has been felt as to the construction of section 294A of the Penal Code, by declaring the game of "ti" and other like games to be "lotteries" within the meaning of that section.

Section 3 similarly removes the doubt which has been felt as to the construction of Act III of 1867, by declaring that taking part in the game of "ti" and other like games shall be deemed to be "gaming" within the meaning of that Act. It also contains other provisions the chief effect of which will be to make it an offence to take part in such games in a private as well as in a public place.

The penalties imposed by section 4 on those who, as managers, dairys, &c., conduct or assist in conducting such games have been advisedly made severe. Experience has shown that nothing but great severity of punishment will suffice to check this profitable form of gambling.

Section 6 of the Bill gives power to the Courts to demand security from persons who notoriously earn their living, or part of their living, by gaming of this description. The necessity for this provision arises to some extent from the fact that gambling of the kind which it is the object of the proposed enactment to suppress has been held to be an ostensible means of subsistence within the meaning of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

If this Bill becomes law, the powers in the hands of the authorities for the suppression of gambling will, it is believed, be sufficient and will at the same time be such as to secure, it may be confidently hoped, the desired results without risk of oppression.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 3rd SEPTEMBER 1884.

GENERAL REMARKS.—Rain has fallen throughout the Madras Presidency, but, except in Malabar, it has been insufficient in all districts. In Mysore agricultural prospects have been somewhat improved by the rain which fell during the week under report, but in the eastern half of the province the outlook is still very unpromising. Heavy rain still continues to fall in Coorg. There was good rain in all districts of the Bombay Presidency, and agricultural prospects have been much improved. In parts of Poona, Nasik, Sholapur, and Dharwar more rain is still required for the crops. Rain has fallen throughout the Berars and Hyderabad, and standing crops are in good condition. General rain is reported throughout the Central India and Rajputana States and agricultural prospects are generally very favourable. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh good rain has again fallen in all districts; in some places the fall has been excessive, and a break would be beneficial. There was a fair amount of rain in most districts of the Punjab, and crop prospects are good. Rainy weather continues to prevail in the Central Provinces, where a break is necessary to permit of weeding and ploughing. In the Assam districts, there was good rain during the week, and the prospects of standing crops and of tea are good. In Bengal agricultural prospects are fair, but the rainfall is still insufficient, and more is wanted for transplanting of rice.

The last report, dated 4th instant, of the Meteorological Department, states that rain is reported from Assam, Bengal (except Behar and Orissa), the Central Provinces, Central India and Rajputana, and the west coast; that elsewhere there is little or none reported and that in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh it has almost ceased.

Harvest operations continue in a few districts of the Madras Presidency. In the Bombay Presidency the kharif crops have been injured in parts of the Upper Sind Frontier by excessive rain; sowing for the rabi has commenced in places. The kharif prospects in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and Punjab are good. Weeding and transplanting are in progress in the Central Provinces. In Bengal the transplanting of aman is backward, owing to insufficient rain; and in many districts the young plants are reported to be suffering. Harvesting of the bhadoi and of aus and jute are in hand.

Cholera is reported from most provinces, and fever is very prevalent in places in Bengal.

Prices are generally stationary, with local fluctuations, or exhibit a slight tendency to fall.

* Passed down to supplement the Agra Canal.

Executive Engineer, Northern Division, Ganges Canal, reports—Fair rain fell during the month, and even demand in rice almost ceased after the 20th July; there has, however, been a break and rice is again calling for water. River high; no very heavy floods.

Executive Engineer, Meerut Division, Ganges Canal, reports—Fair demand during the first half of the month for kharif crops generally, but for rice only during the second half, and this demand was confined to the 1st sub-division.

Executive Engineer, Bulandshahr Division, Ganges Canal, reports—Demand general until the 20th, after that water was only taken for cane and indigo. Good rain fell in most parts of the division on the 30th and 31st.

Executive Engineer, Aligarh Division, Ganges Canal, reports—The quantity of rain registered during the month was below the average and unequally distributed; water was taken in some villages for cotton and maize not previously irrigated.

Executive Engineer, Narora Division, Lower Ganges Canal, reports—No new irrigation during July, the areas shown being arrears from previous month.

Executive Engineer, Mainpuri Division, Lower Ganges Canal, reports—There has been a partial demand for water up to the end of the month, when it ceased entirely. Average rainfall 4·3 inches, maximum 6·2, and minimum 2·9. The decrease compared with last year is due to the short supply in April and May.

Executive Engineer, Cawnpore Division, Lower Ganges Canal—Shows an increase of 666 acres as compared with the same period last year.

Executive Engineer, Etawah Division, Lower Ganges Canal—Shows a decrease of 2,426 acres as compared with July 1883, and reports—There was good rain during the month and little new irrigation was secured.

Executive Engineer, Bhognipur Division, Lower Ganges Canal, reports—Rain rather slack at beginning of month, but good rain everywhere subsequently. Crops irrigated and unirrigated, doing very well.

Executive Engineer, Eastern Jumna Canal, reports—The demand below Baraut was very heavy for all crops up to 23rd, when rain fell. Further rain on 29th and 30th stopped all demand except for rice. Between Saharanpur and Baraut steady demand for all crops, from 6th to 23rd, afterwards for rice and sugar only. Above Saharanpur demand only for rice throughout the month. Excess over last year due to earlier rain and subsequent break.

Executive Engineer, Rohilkhand Canals, reports—From 1st to 9th it rained more or less every day, but only enough for sugar and grain crops, and then there was a break up to the 19th. There was good rain during the last 10 days of the month, and some small floods came down. Owing to insufficient rain the area under rice this year is much smaller than usual. The area irrigated during month is "late kharif" and previous irrigation "early kharif." Water was in great demand for rice throughout the month.

Executive Engineer, Dún Canal, reports—Good rain throughout the month. Rice sowings almost finished.

Deputy Commissioner of Jhánsi and Collector of Hamírpur, report that no irrigation was effected during the month of July 1884.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

ACT No. XIV OF 1884.

An Act for the validation of decisions passed by certain Settlement-officers in the Panjáb.

XIX of 1865. WHEREAS section 21 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1865, after conferring certain powers on the Local Government in any district in which a settlement of land-revenue might be in progress, provided as follows, namely:—"The Local Government may also, with the previous sanction of the Governor General of India in Council, invest any special officer in such district with the civil powers of a Commissioner, Deputy Commissioner, Assistant Commissioner or Tahsildár, as defined in this Act, for the purpose of deciding suits in respect to land, or the rent, revenue or produce of land, such powers to be exercised on the Revenue side";

and whereas doubts have recently been raised as to whether the said section conferred power to invest a special officer as aforesaid with power to decide appeals in such suits;

XVII of 1877. and whereas section 49 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1877, provides that the Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, invest any officer making or controlling a settlement of land-revenue in any local area with all or any of the powers of any Court constituted under that Act, for the purpose of trying all or any specified class of suits and appeals relating to land, or the rent, revenue or produce of land, arising in that local area;

and whereas certain officers making or controlling settlements of land-revenue have decided suits of the description mentioned in section 21 of the XIX of 1865. Panjáb Courts Act, 1865, or section 49 of the XVII of 1877. Panjáb Courts Act, 1877, and appeals in such suits, without being invested with power to decide the same;

and whereas it is apprehended that certain officers making or controlling settlements of land-revenue have exercised judicial powers when at places beyond the local limits of their jurisdiction;

and whereas for the quieting of titles and the avoidance of litigation it is expedient that the decisions passed by officers engaged in making or controlling settlements in suits of the description mentioned in section 21 of the Panjáb Courts Act, XIX of 1865. 1865, and in section 49 of the Panjáb Courts Act, XVII of 1877. 1877, and in appeals in such suits, should not be impeached for want of authority in such officers, and that the validity of such decisions should be affirmed;

Construction of section 21 of Act XIX of 1865.

1. In the portion of section 21 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1865, hereinbefore recited the word "suits" shall be deemed to have always included appeals. XIX of 1865.

Validation of decisions of certain unauthorized officers.

2. When any officer making or controlling a settlement of land-revenue has decided a suit of the description mentioned in section 21 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1865, or section 49 of the Panjáb Courts Act, 1877, or an appeal in any such suit, and his decision would, if he had been duly invested with power under either of those sections to decide such suits or appeals, have been valid, the decision shall not be deemed invalid or deprived of any of its effect by reason of the objection that he was not so invested: XIX of 1865. XVII of 1877.

Provided that a decision heretofore declared by any competent Court to be invalid on the ground that the officer who decided the suit or appeal was not authorized to decide the same shall not be rendered valid by this section.

Validation of decisions passed beyond local limits of jurisdiction.

3. When the decision of an officer making or controlling a settlement of land-revenue would be deemed valid if it had been passed by him within a particular local area, it shall not be deemed invalid or deprived of any of its effect by reason of the objection that at the time when he passed it he was beyond the limits of that local area.

6. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or, when he is specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, a Magistrate of the first class receives information that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction earns his livelihood, wholly or in part, by carrying on, or assisting in carrying on, the game of ti, or any other game or pretended game of a like nature, he may deal with such person as nearly as may be as if the information received about him were of the description mentioned in section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure; and for the purposes of any proceeding under this section the fact that a person earns his livelihood as aforesaid may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise. X of 1882. [Act X of 1882, s. 117.]

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to provide more effectually for the suppression of certain forms of gaming in British Burma.

2. It has long been the opinion of the most experienced District and Police Officers that the systematic gambling originally introduced by the low class Chinese who infest the towns and villages, and now carried on by them and by Burmans of a similar stamp, is doing great injury to the people of that province. In 1882, on the representation of the Inspector-General of Police of the prevalence of tis and of the inadequacy of the law to repress them effectually, the matter was taken up by the Chief Commissioner, who by a Resolution directed Commissioners to obtain an expression of public opinion on the question. With the Resolution were circulated various papers bearing on the subject, including a Bill for the suppression of unlawful gaming which was before the legislature of the Straits Settlements. Special inquiry was made as to whether the people of Burma desired, and were prepared to accept, a stringent gaming law similar to that Bill.

3. The answers showed clearly that the Burmans as a body regarded the prevalence of gambling, especially as practised in the ti,* as a very great evil. Government officers were almost equally strong in their denunciations of these tis. With a few exceptions the opinions received were in favour of suppressing this and other forms of public gaming, and the Bill proposed for the Straits Settlements was accepted as a guide to the direction which legislation should take.

4. The history of the means which the Courts have hitherto used to check the opening of tis is briefly as follows. For some years after the passing of Act III of 1867 it was held that a ti was a form of gaming, and that the lists and papers used in the ti were instruments of gaming, within the meaning of that Act. This view was confirmed by the High Court of Calcutta in 1869. In 1876 Mr. Wilkinson and Mr. Quinton, as Judges of the Special Court of British Burma, held that tis were lotteries, and that, since the enactment of section 294A of the Indian Penal Code, lotteries were punishable under that section and not under Act III of 1867. It is not clear what effect the learned Judges of the Special Court gave to section 15 of Act XXVII of 1870, the Act by which section 294A of the Indian Penal Code was enacted. However, since the date of this judgment, the prosecution of the promoters of tis under Act III of 1867 may be said to have ceased; tis have been regarded as lotteries and the persons concerned in them have been prosecuted under section 294A of the Indian Penal Code; and until lately no doubt of the applicability of that section to this particular kind of gambling has arisen.

5. Two recent rulings of the Judicial Commissioner have presented a different view of the law. In the first of the cases in question the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate, under section 13 of Act III of 1867, as having been engaged in a ti in a zayat or public rest-house beside a public road. The Judicial Commissioner called for the proceedings, and, having come to the conclusion that a ti was not a game of chance and was mere betting or wagering, he referred the matter to the Special Court. The Officiating Recorder, Mr. Allen, dissented from the Judicial Commissioner's opinion, and held that the conviction was right. Under the constitution of the Special Court the opinion of the referring Judge prevails. The Judicial Commissioner accordingly issued a circular in which his own view of the law is enjoined on the Courts subordinate to him,—in other words, on all Courts outside the jurisdiction of the Recorder of Rangoon,—and in which he lays down the doctrine that a ti is not a game nor a lottery, and that the papers used in collecting the money of the persons who take part in the ti are wrongly described as lottery-tickets. In the second of these cases the accused had been convicted by the Magistrate at Rangoon under section 294A of the Penal Code of keeping a lottery-office. On appeal to the Officiating Recorder, that officer referred the question of whether a ti is a lottery to the Special Court. The Judicial Commissioner held that it was not; the Officiating Recorder that it was. In this case also the opinion of the referring Judge prevailed. The Judicial Commissioner, however, has informed the Courts subordinate to him that his own view of the law is to be their guide. There are thus two contradictory judgments of the Special Court, and two diverse rules of law established for different parts of the province, each Judge holding to his own individual opinion.

6. The object of the present Bill is to obviate the effect of the judgments and circulars of the Judicial Commissioner above referred to, which bar all prosecutions for ti-gaming, and the effect of which has already been to give a fresh impetus to that kind of gambling.

It has not been thought expedient to copy the measure proposed by the Government of the Straits Settlements. The draft Ordinance is a very complicated piece of legislation, very stringent in its provisions, and very likely, unless worked under closer supervision than can be given to it in Burma, to become an engine of oppression. Moreover, it does not seem either necessary or desirable to endeavour to check gambling of every kind. A people like the Burmese must have amusement of some sort. It is quite possible to make gambling an expensive amusement, but to stop it altogether, if the people wish to indulge in it, is beyond the power of the law, and the attempt to do it would probably only result in systematic bribery and the corruption of the police. What appears to be chiefly needed is the repression of the professional ti-gambler, the man who makes his living by going about inducing people to game and, as often as not swindling them out of their money. The urgent requisite is a law which will enable the authorities to deal with professional gamblers, and all who aid and abet them, with prompt severity, wherever they may be found. For other purposes the Act of 1867 appears to be sufficient, nor does the extension of all its provisions to the province generally appear even to be necessary.

* The nature of the game or lottery or series of bets called ti is as follows:—The banker, or professional gambler, who makes his living by the game, chooses one of 36 animals and deposits a piece of paper on which its name is written in a hollow bamboo or box. Then his emissaries go round asking people to name the animal so chosen and to back their guess by putting down their money. Any one who guesses rightly gets thirty times his stake; the others lose.

7. The present Bill has, therefore, been framed so as to deal particularly with ti-gaming, for which fresh legislation is urgently required.

Section 2 removes the doubt which has been felt as to the construction of section 294A of the Penal Code, by declaring the game of "ti" and other like games to be "lotteries" within the meaning of that section.

Section 3 similarly removes the doubt which has been felt as to the construction of Act III of 1867, by declaring that taking part in the game of "ti" and other like games shall be deemed to be "gaming" within the meaning of that Act. It also contains other provisions the chief effect of which will be to make it an offence to take part in such games in a private as well as in a public place.

The penalties imposed by section 4 on those who, as managers, daings, &c., conduct or assist in conducting such games have been advisedly made severe. Experience has shown that nothing but great severity of punishment will suffice to check this profitable form of gambling.

Section 6 of the Bill gives power to the Courts to demand security from persons who notoriously earn their living, or part of their living, by gaming of this description. The necessity for this provision arises to some extent from the fact that gambling of the kind which it is the object of the proposed enactment to suppress has been held to be an ostensible means of subsistence within the meaning of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

If this Bill becomes law, the powers in the hands of the authorities for the suppression of gambling will, it is believed, be sufficient and will at the same time be such as to secure, it may be confidently hoped, the desired results without risk of oppression.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 10th September, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 13 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the Burma Steam boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882; It is hereby enacted as follows:

XVIII of 1882.

1. This Act may be called the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1884; and it shall come into force at once.

Short title and commencement.

2. In section 4 of the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, after the words "first or second class" the words "or as engine-drivers" shall be added.

Amendment of section 4 of Act XVIII of 1882.

XVIII of 1882.

3. In section 5, sub-section (2), section 8, clause (b), and section 11, clause (b), of the said Act, after the word "engineer" the words "or in the case of a boiler or prime-mover attached to an engine of not more than twenty horse-power of an engineer or engine-driver" shall be inserted.

Amendment of sections 5, 8 and 11 of same Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, in such a manner as to provide for the grant of certificates to engine-drivers, authorizing them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse-power. Under the Act as it at present stands, certificates can be granted to engineers of the first and second classes only, and all boilers and prime-movers must be in charge of engineers of one or other of these classes. The Board of Examiners appointed under the Act have recently represented to the Chief Commissioner that these provisions cause unnecessary hardship to a class of Native drivers who can be trusted to manage, and actually do manage, small engines. It would be misleading to give these men engineers' certificates of any class, inasmuch as they are in no sense engineers. On the other hand, it is only fair to them and the small millowners who employ them that they should be eligible for some sort of certificate and be permitted to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of low horse-power. Under these circumstances, the Board suggest that the Act should be amended in such a way as to authorize the grant to such persons, when found competent, of engine-drivers' certificates, which will empower them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse-power, and they point out that there is a precedent for the grant of such certificates in the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884, sections 28 and 29. In order to carry out these suggestions, which are supported by the Chief Commissioner, the present Bill, which makes the necessary amendments in the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, has been prepared.

REVENUE AND AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 10th SEPTEMBER 1884.

GENERAL REMARKS.—The rainfall continues insufficient over the Madras Presidency (the Malabar Coast excepted), and the crops in the districts bordering on Mysore and in Madura and Coimbatore are in a very backward condition. In the eastern portion of Mysore the state of the crops is reported to be critical, though prospects have slightly improved in the province. Pasture is scarce in Bellary and Coimbatore and parts of Mysore. Rain is also wanted in the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country, while in Shikarpur and Ahmedabad the crops have been damaged by excessive wet. In two districts the want of fodder is much felt. Throughout Hyderabad, Berar, Central India, and Rajputana the prospects are favourable, though in some localities a break in the rains would be beneficial. The same remark applies to the Punjab and the North-West Provinces and Oudh. In the Central Provinces there has been heavy rain during the week, causing floods and much damage to standing crops, especially in Seoni. Prospects have somewhat improved in Bengal with recent general rain, but more is much needed in Behar and Orissa; and the transplanting of rice is retarded. The tea plants in Cachar are reported to have been attacked by the tea bug and red spider, and floods have done some injury to rice; otherwise prospects are favourable in Assam. In Burma the crop prospects are also favourable.

The latest report of the Meteorological Department (dated 11th instant) shows that the rainfall is confined to the North-West Himalaya, Darjeeling, Lower and Western Bengal, the Central Provinces, and the west coast of the peninsula.

Harvesting of paddy, cholum, ragi, and other crops are in progress in Madras, and the kharif harvest has commenced in Northern India, where the land is also being prepared for the rabi. Weeding is much impeded in the Central Provinces by excessive rain. The aus rice harvest is not yet completed in Bengal, and the transplanting of seedlings for the next crop cannot be carried out in several district till more rain falls.

Small-pox and cholera are present in most Provinces, but the latter is prevalent only in Akyab Patna, Ahmedabad, and parts of Madras. The usual autumnal fever is reported from Assam, Bengal, and the North-West.

Prices are falling in the Punjab and North-West Provinces, while in Bengal they are fluctuating.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Department of Finance and Commerce.

Read again—

Resolutions No. 684, dated 31st January 1878, and No. 2811, dated 3rd September 1881, regarding the mode of selecting officers for employment in the Assay Department.

Read the following papers regarding the terms of the home qualifications required for candidates for employment in the Assay Department :—

Despatch from the Government of India to the Secretary of State for India, No. 240, dated 31st August 1883, and enclosures.

Despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 10, dated 10th January 1884, and enclosures.

Despatch to Secretary of State, No. 135, dated 12th May 1884.

Despatch from Secretary of State, No. 254, dated 21st August 1884.

RESOLUTION.—With the approval of the Secretary of State for India, the Governor General in Council is pleased to determine, in supersession of the Resolutions No. 684, dated 31st January 1878, and No. 2811, dated 3rd September 1881, that the selection of officers for employment in the Assay Department shall be made in the following manner :—

I.—As directed in Resolution No. 121, dated 12th May 1876, commissioned officers only shall, as a general rule, be appointed substantively to the Assay Department.

II.—No officer shall be appointed substantively to the Assay Department without producing the following four certificates after practical examination :—

(1) Of attendance at a three-months' practical course of Inorganic Chemistry (qualitative only) at the Normal School of Science, London.

(2) Of attendance at a three-months' practical course of Metallurgy at the Royal School of Mines, especially with reference to the assaying of gold and silver and their alloys.

(3) Of attendance for a month at the Assay Laboratory of the Royal Mint, London, permission to attend the Mint being previously obtained from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

The above courses not to be taken out simultaneously, but to occupy seven months in all.

(4) A certificate from the Head Assayer of the Royal Mint as to the candidate's ability to assay the precious metals, to be tested by practical examination.

III.—The certificates, when obtained, should be forwarded by the officer to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, who will then inform the Government of India whether the officer is pro tanto qualified for the Assay Department, subject to completion of his qualification by attendance at the Assay Office Laboratory at Calcutta or Bombay for a certain probationary period.

IV.—Whenever a want of candidates eligible for admission to the Assay Department is foreseen, the Government may permit a selected officer to attend at the Laboratory of the Assay Master at Bombay or Calcutta for a period not exceeding six months in order to prepare himself for a prescribed examination. During this period of probation, the full salary of the office he may happen to hold at the time, subject to a minimum of Rs. 450 a month, and in addition the presidency house-rent of his rank, will be granted to him. At the expiry of the term of probation, the probationer will be examined by the Assay Master of the Mint to which he is attached, the examination being framed so as to test the practical familiarity of the probationer with the ordinary work of an Indian Assay Laboratory, and with the duties expected of an Assay Officer attached to a Mint, and his knowledge generally of the methods of assaying both gold and silver, and particularly of the method of assaying silver which is peculiar to the Indian Mints. Certain alloys should be given to the probationer, and a report on their fineness required according to such methods of assay as may be stipulated at the discretion of the Assay Master; and it must be a condition that the whole of the manipulating details shall be conducted by the probationer with his own hands. The ability of the probationer to prepare pure gold and silver for assay check purposes should also be carefully ascertained. An officer who has so passed the prescribed local examination only may, at the discretion of the Government of India, be employed temporarily in the Assay Department. The period of such employment, however, is not to exceed twelve months at one time, unless under very special circumstances, and with the sanction of the Secretary of State.

V.—The Governor General in Council desires it to be understood that the mere successful result of the examination thus prescribed, or of any other, will not entitle the probationer to appointment to the Assay Department. The Assay Master under whom he is employed should report confidentially to Government his opinion as to the aptitude and general (apart from mere technical) fitness of the probationer for the position of an Assay Officer. A similar report will be required also in the case of officers who have obtained the certificates referred to in clauses II and III.

ORDER.—Ordered, that this Resolution be published in the Gazette of India and communicated to—

The Mint Masters, Bombay and Calcutta;
The Assay Masters, Bombay and Calcutta Mints;
The Accountants General, Bengal and Bombay; and The Military Department.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 10th September, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 13 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882; It is hereby enacted as follows:

XVIII of 1882.

1. This Act may be called the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1884; and it shall come into force at once.

Short title and commencement.

2. In section 4 of the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, after the words "first or second class" the words "or as engine-drivers" shall be added.

Amendment of section 4 of Act XVIII of 1882.

3. In section 5, sub-section (2), section 8, clause (b), and section 11, clause (b), of the said Act, after the word "engineer" the words "or in the case of a boiler or prime-mover attached to an engine of not more than twenty horse-power of an engineer or engine-driver" shall be inserted.

Amendment of sections 5, 8 and 11 of same Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, in such a manner as to provide for the grant of certificates to engine-drivers, authorizing them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse-power. Under the Act as it at present stands, certificates can be granted to engineers of the first and second classes only, and all boilers and prime-movers must be in charge of engineers of one or other of these classes. The Board of Examiners appointed under the Act have recently represented to the Chief Commissioner that these provisions cause unnecessary hardship to a class of Native drivers who can be trusted to manage, and actually do manage, small engines. It would be misleading to give these men engineers' certificates of any class, inasmuch as they are in no sense engineers. On the other hand, it is only fair to them and the small millowners who employ them that they should be eligible for some sort of certificate and be permitted to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of low horse-power. Under these circumstances, the Board suggest that the Act should be amended in such a way as to authorize the grant to such persons, when found competent, of engine-drivers' certificates, which will empower them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse-power, and they point out that there is a precedent for the grant of such certificates in the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884, sections 28 and 29. In order to carry out these suggestions, which are supported by the Chief Commissioner, the present Bill, which makes the necessary amendments in the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, has been prepared.

The 28th August, 1884.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 17th SEPTEMBER 1884.

GENERAL REMARKS.—In the Madras Presidency the rainfall was again light, and the prospects of the crops continue unfavourable in the Ceded Districts and in parts of Madura and Coimbatore. Rain still holds off in Mysore, and the prospects of the crops in most districts are very bad. Fodder is also becoming scarce. In Coorg prospects are favourable. In parts of the Deccan and the Southern Mahratta Country rain is still insufficient; elsewhere in the Bombay Presidency there has been good rain, and in parts it was excessive and crops have been slightly damaged. In the Nizam's territories, the Berars, and the Central India and Rajputana States prospects are very good. There was rain throughout the North-Western Provinces, Oudh, and the Punjab, and prospects are good.

The heavy rain which continues in the Central Provinces is injuring the crops in places, and a break would be beneficial. In Bengal rain is still insufficient, and more is very much wanted in many districts. Good rain fell in three districts of Assam, but more is wanted in Gauhati. The last report of the Meteorological Department, dated 18th instant, shows that rain is confined to the western, central and southern parts of India, to Burma, and to Eastern Bengal.

Harvesting is in progress in a few districts of the Madras Presidency. Kharif prospects are good in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and the Punjab. Preparations for the rabi are in progress in Bombay and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. In Bengal transplanting of amun is still going on, and the aus harvest continues.

Cholera, small-pox, and fever are prevalent in most provinces. Prices are rising in Bellary and Kurnool and are fluctuating in Bengal. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh they show a tendency to fall; elsewhere they are generally stationary.

Presidency or Province and District.	Rainfall for week under report.	State of agricultural prospects.
Madras—(Sept. 17th)

Kistna ...	·91 (average)	Standing crops generally good; harvest gingelly, outturn poor. River 5·60 feet over anicut. Small-pox, fever, and cattle-disease in places; 45 deaths from cholera.
Chingleput (Madras) ...	·04 (average)	Insufficient rain. Standing crops generally fair; harvest paddy and ragi, yield half the average. Small-pox generally prevalent; 44 deaths from cholera.
Coimbatore ...	·09 (average)	Standing crops wet good in 5 taluks, elsewhere withering; dry crops fading; harvest dry crops, outturn below average. Slight small-pox and fever. Fodder scarce. Cattle suffering in parts.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Revenue and Agricultural Department (Meteorological),—dated Simla, the 19th September 1884.

Read—

Summary of the Weather Reports for August 1884.

Except at a few stations in the north-west of India the barometer has been generally low in the past month. The depression has been most strongly marked in Orissa, Ganjam, and the Central Provinces in the east, and in Guzerat and Sind in the west. Otherwise, with the single exception, shortly to be noticed, the relative distribution of pressure has been fairly in accordance with that which is usual at the time of year. In August there exists, as a general rule, a broad band of relatively low barometer stretching from the Indus Valley south-eastward to Behar, but, in the present month, this normal band was divided into two portions and formed two distinct areas of low pressure, one lying over Behar and Chutia Nagpur, the other over the Indus Valley. This change in the distribution of pressure coincided with a considerable variation of the winds from their normal character and consequently of the weather of Northern India.

Of travelling cyclonic disturbances, such as usually appear during the summer monsoon, there have been no examples of importance during the present month.

Temperature has been a little above the average at most of the Carnatic and Deccan stations and locally at a few places in Northern India also, but in general the temperature of the month has been below the average. In the Punjab and North-Western Provinces the changes of temperature have been sudden and considerable, but in other parts of the country the departures from the mean have as a rule been slight and gradual.

The humidity of the atmosphere has been slightly in excess over Northern and Central India, but in the peninsula the amount of moisture has shown either a slight deficiency, or, as on the Bombay coast, an almost exact agreement with the average.

The rainfall returns display considerable variations in the amount of precipitation. In the Punjab, with the exception of Murree, Rawalpindi, Simla, and Delhi, there has been more or less deficiency on the average, while over nearly the whole of the North-Western Provinces, on the contrary, there has been excessive rain. At Allahabad, however, a region of deficient rainfall commences, and from that station eastwards, in Behar, Bengal, and as far as Burma, the present month has been one of general deficiency. Over the central parts of the country the departures from the average were very irregular, ranging from an excess of 12 inches at the stations of Jubbulpore and Sutna to a deficiency of 5 inches at Khandwa. Rajputana, like the Punjab, has had a somewhat scanty rainfall, while Sind and Guzerat, though deficient on the mean of all stations, show irregularities similar in character to those of the more central parts of the country. On the west coast from Ratnagiri southwards, as well as at the inland stations of Belgaum, Mercara, Madura, Salem, and Wellington, the rainfall has been above the average, but both on the coast to the north of Ratnagiri and at almost every peninsula station to the east of the Ghauts, the amount of rain has been below the average of the month.

The largest total fall in the month has been 42 inches at Mercara, and there were 38 inches at Moulmein, 34 inches at Ratnagiri and Akyab, 32 inches at Mangalore, 30 inches at Karwar, and 27 inches at Goa and Simla. According to the data the largest number of wet days, 27, occurred in Burma and on the west coast, while the Central Provinces had 25 and Bengal (excluding Behar) and the North-Western Provinces 23.

Very heavy falls of rain were experienced in the west on the 28th and 29th, and in the North-West Himalaya and neighbouring region on the 7th, 10th, and partially on the 12th.

The following table sums up the rainfall returns under the divisions adopted in the weather summaries previously issued. It will be noticed that the deficiency reported from Behar and mentioned in the text is masked in the table by the excessive rain which has fallen in the North-Western Provinces and similarly the excess which is shown in Bombay, Madras, and Mysore is due to the heavy rain which occurred within a limited portion of the west coast and not to general excess over the whole region :—

No. 840 R. T., dated Simla, 9th September 1884.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Public Works Department.

Read again—

Public Works Department Resolution No. 933 R. T., dated 27th August 1883.

" " " " " 485 R. T., dated 2nd June 1884.

Read also—

Returns of accidents to trains, &c., on the open lines of Railway in India for the quarter ending 31st March 1884.

OBSERVATIONS.—As compared with the corresponding quarter of the previous year, the number of accidents to trains, rolling stock, permanent-way, &c., shows a decrease of 90 or 12·57 per cent. against an increase of 498 miles or 4·93 per cent. in the open mileage, and of 67,719 miles or 0·66 per cent. in the train-mileage. The following are the Railways on which the fluctuations chiefly took place :—

	Increase.	Decrease.
East Indian	. .	30
South Indian	. .	18
Great Indian Peninsula	. .	38
Bombay, Baroda, and Central India	10	. .
Punjab Northern	. .	23
Indus Valley	. .	53
Rajputana-Malwa	28	. .
Northern Bengal	. .	13

2. The decrease on the East Indian Railway was mainly due to the number of accidents under "goods trains or parts of goods trains, engines, &c., leaving the rails" being only 1 against 9, that under "trains running over cattle on the line," 8 against 18, and that under "other accidents," nil against 6.

3. On the South Indian Railway the number of cattle accidents diminished from 43 to 23.

4. Of the decrease of 38 accidents on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, 11 occurred under "goods trains, or parts of goods trains, engines, &c., leaving the rails," 16 under "fire in trains," and 10 under "other accidents."

5. The largest increase on the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway took place under "other accidents," the number of cases shown under this head being 25 against 18.

6. On the Punjab Northern State Railway there was a satisfactory decrease under "fire in trains," the number of cases having been only 1 against 25.

7. On the Indus Valley State Railway the number of cattle accidents decreased from 33 to 22, "the failures of machinery, springs, &c., of engines" from 35 to 13, and "fires in trains" from 25 to 16.

8. The increase on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway principally occurred under "trains running over cattle on the line."

9. On the Northern Bengal Railway there was no noticeable variation under any particular heads.

10. The total number of accidents on the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway shows an increase of 2 only, but it appears from the details that while the number of cattle accidents rose from 8 to 20, the number of miscellaneous accidents was nil against 7.

11. The casualties resulting from accidents to trains, &c., were among passengers, nil against 4 injured, and, among servants, 1 killed and 11 injured, against 2 killed and 6 injured. In a case of derailment of a material lorry, caused by the sudden application of the brake at the Bhore Ghât reversing station, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, 6 servants of the Company were more or less injured.

12. The following table exhibits the number of accidents under the different classes, and the number of persons killed and injured thereby:—

Description of Accidents.	Number of Accidents.	Number of Passengers and others.		Number of Servants.		Total.
		Killed.	Injured.	Killed.	Injured.	Killed.	Injured.

13. The number of cattle accidents was the same as in the corresponding quarter of 1883, but it appears that there were decreases of 10, 20, 8, and 11 on the East Indian, South Indian, Great Indian Peninsula, and Indus Valley and Kandahar Railways, and increases of 24 and 12 on the Rajputana-Malwa and Calcutta and South-Eastern State Railways, respectively.

14. Of 21 cases of "bursting of boilers or tubes, &c., of engines," 9 occurred on the Indus Valley and 7 on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway. On the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway there was a large decrease under this head, the number reported being 1 only against 11 in the 1st quarter of 1883.

15. The number of cases of "failures of machinery, springs, &c., of engines" decreased from 66 to 43 or by 23, of which the largest number 22 is due to the Indus Valley Railway.

16. The couplings failed in 34 instances, of which 6 took place on the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi, and 14 on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway.

17. All the 4 cases of "broken rails" occurred on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway, but, as compared with the corresponding quarter of the previous year, there has been a reduction of 6 accidents.

18. The cases of "fire in trains" decreased from 95 to 53, or by 44 per cent. As already noticed, the decrease principally took place on the Great Indian Peninsula, Punjab Northern, and Indus Valley Railways.

19. The casualties to passengers from causes other than accidents to trains, &c., were—

21. Of other persons killed and injured by running trains, &c., 2 were killed whilst passing over the line at level-crossings; 21 were killed and 4 injured whilst trespassing on the line; 9 committed suicide; and 2 were killed and 5 injured from miscellaneous causes.

22. The following table shows the total number of persons killed and injured from causes connected with the working of trains, as compared with the corresponding quarter of 1883 :—

RESOLUTION.—The satisfaction of the Government of India should be communicated to the authorities concerned at the decrease in the number of accidents on the East Indian, South Indian, Great Indian Peninsula, Punjab Northern, and Indus Valley Railways, and especially the decrease under "trains running over cattle on the line" on the South Indian Railway, and "fire in trains" on the Great Indian Peninsula and Punjab Northern Railways. The attention of the Director General of Railways should be invited to the increase under cattle accidents, and the large number of "failures of couplings" on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway.

ORDER.—Ordered, that this Resolution, together with the Abstract Returns compiled by the Government of India, be forwarded to the Governments, Administrations, and Officers noted in the margin for information.

Ordered also, that copies be forwarded to the Secretary of State for the information of Her Majesty's Government.

PART IV.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

ACT NO. XV OF 1884.

An Act for the validation of certain licenses to solemnize Marriages granted to Ministers of Religion under Act XXV of 1864.

WHEREAS by section 4 of Act XXV of 1864 (to provide further for the solemnization of Marriages in India of persons professing the Christian Religion) it was enacted that, from and after the first day of July, 1864, certain Governments therein named should have authority to grant licenses to ministers of religion to solemnize marriages within the territories subject to such Governments respectively;

And whereas, in exercise of the authority so conferred, the Governments therein named granted licenses to certain ministers of religion to solemnize marriages;

And whereas Act XXV of 1864 was repealed by Act V of 1865 (to provide for the solemnization of Marriages in India of persons professing the Christian Religion);

And whereas by section 9 of the latter Act it was enacted that, from and after the commencement of that Act, all marriages which should be solemnized in India otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of the fifth and sixth sections of that Act should be null and void;

And whereas by section 6 of the same Act it was enacted that marriages might be solemnized in India by (among other persons) any minister of religion who, under the provisions of that Act, had obtained a license to solemnize marriages;

And whereas Act V of 1865 was repealed by the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872; XV of 1872.

And whereas by section 4 of the latter Act it is enacted that every marriage between persons, one or both of whom is a Christian or Christians, shall be solemnized in accordance with the provisions of the next following section; and that any such marriage solemnized otherwise than in accordance with such provisions shall be null and void;

And whereas by the next following section of the same Act it is enacted that marriages may be solemnized in India by (among other persons) any minister of religion licensed under the same Act to solemnize marriages;

And whereas neither in Act V of 1865 nor in the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, was there or is there any provision either saving licenses granted under Act XXV of 1864 or permitting a marriage to be solemnized by a minister of religion who had obtained a license to solemnize marriages under Act XXV of 1864 only; XV of 1872.

And whereas certain marriages have been solemnized both while Act V of 1865 was in force and since the passing of the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, by ministers of religion who had obtained licenses to solemnize marriages under Act XXV of 1864, but had never obtained licenses to solemnize marriages under Act V of 1865 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, as the case may be, and doubts have therefore arisen as to the validity of such marriages; XV of 1872. XV of 1872.

And whereas it is expedient to remove such doubts and to declare the continued validity of licenses to solemnize marriages granted to ministers of religion under Act XXV of 1864;

Validation of licenses to solemnize marriages granted to ministers of religion under Act XXV of 1864.

1. A license to solemnize marriages granted to a minister of religion under Act XXV of 1864 shall be deemed, if in force on the date on which Act V of 1865 came into force, to have been, while that Act was in force, a license granted under that Act, and, if in force on the date on which the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, came into force, to have been since that Act came into force, and to be, a license granted under that Act. XV of 1872.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 10th September, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 13 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Burma XVIII of 1882. Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882; It is hereby enacted as follows:

1. This Act may be called the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1884; and it shall come into force at once.

Short title and commencement.

2. In section 4 of the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, after the words "first or second class" the words "or as engine-drivers" shall be added.

Amendment of section 4 of Act XVIII of 1882.

3. In section 5, sub-section (2), section 8, clause (b), and section 11, clause (b), of the said Act, after the word "engineer" the words "or in the case of a boiler or prime-mover attached to an engine of not more than twenty horse-power of an engineer or engine-driver" shall be inserted.

Amendment of sections 5, 8 and 11 of same Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to amend the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, in such a manner as to provide for the grant of certificates to engine-drivers, authorizing them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse-power. Under the Act as it at present stands, certificates can be granted to engineers of the first and second classes only, and all boilers and prime-movers must be in charge of engineers of one or other of these classes. The Board of Examiners appointed under the Act have recently represented to the Chief Commissioner that these provisions cause unnecessary hardship to a class of Native drivers who can be trusted to manage, and actually do manage, small engines. It would be misleading to give these men engineers' certificates of any class, inasmuch as they are in no sense engineers. On the other hand, it is only fair to them and the small millowners who employ them that they should be eligible for some sort of certificate and be permitted to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of low horse-power. Under these circumstances, the Board suggest that the Act should be amended in such a way as to authorize the grant to such persons, when found competent, of engine-drivers' certificates, which will empower them to take charge of boilers and prime-movers attached to engines of not more than twenty horse-power, and they point out that there is a precedent for the grant of such certificates in the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884, sections 28 and 29. In order to carry out these suggestions, which are supported by the Chief Commissioner, the present Bill, which makes the necessary amendments in the Burma Steam-boilers and Prime-movers Act, 1882, has been prepared.

The 28th August, 1884.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 24th SEPTEMBER 1884.

GENERAL REMARKS.—In the Madras Presidency the rainfall of the week has been heavier than that hitherto recorded and prospects have generally improved. In Coimbatore and Madura, however, the crops are still suffering from want of rain and in the former district fodder is becoming scarce. There was slight rain throughout Mysore and the condition of the crops has been slightly improved, but prospects still continue unfavourable. In Coorg the weather continues to be very beneficial to the standing crops and a good ragi harvest is expected. Good rain has fallen in most parts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country and prospects have much improved. In several Deccan districts, however, more rain is still wanted for the young crops. There was rain throughout the Berars and the Nizam's territories and the Central India and Rajputana States, and prospects continue very good. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh the rains are reported to be breaking up, and in the Punjab also there has been little or no rain during the week under report. In both Provinces prospects are good. In the Central Provinces there has been a slight break, but it was not of sufficient duration. Crops have been damaged in places by excessive rain, but prospects continue good. In Bengal the rainfall continues insufficient, and the prospects of the aman paddy are unfavourable. Rain is wanted in all the Assam districts for the sali crop and for tea.

The last report of the Meteorological Department, dated the 25th instant, shows that in the North-Western Provinces, except at one or two places in Bengal, the Central Provinces, the Berars, Central India, Bombay and Burma, rain has been general and in places heavy.

Harvesting continues in a few districts of the Madras Presidency. The earlier kharif crops are being cut in parts of Bombay and ploughing and sowing for the rabi have also commenced in Bombay, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, Punjab, and the Central Provinces. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and Punjab the kharif prospects are very favourable. In Bengal it is feared that transplanted paddy will be much damaged in many districts if heavy rain does not fall before long. The bhadoi harvest is in progress and sugarcane is doing well.

The public health is generally good, though cases of cholera, small-pox, and fever are reported in most Provinces.

Prices are rising in Bengal and falling in Madras; elsewhere they are generally stationary.

ALTERATION OF THE MODE OF VALUING SUITS RELATING TO REVENUE-PAYING LAND FOR THE PURPOSE OF DETERMINING THE JURISDICTION OF THE VARIOUS GRADES OF CIVIL COURTS.

No. 1260, dated Simla, the 26th September 1884.

From—A. MACKENZIE, Esq., Secy. to the Government of India, Home Dept.,

To—The Chief Secretary to the Government of Madras.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 449, dated the 15th February 1883, regarding the question of altering the mode of valuing suits relating to revenue-paying land for the purpose of determining the jurisdiction of the various grades of Civil Courts.

2. Under section 14 of the Madras Civil Courts Act, No. III of 1873, when the subject-matter of any suit or proceeding is land, a house, or a garden, its value is, for the purposes of the jurisdiction conferred by that Act, fixed in the manner provided by the Court-fees Act, 1870, section 7, clause V.

3. The following are the rules under the last-quoted Act by which the computation of court-fees is regulated :—

(1) permanently settled land paying annual revenue to Government, which forms an entire estate or a definite share of an estate, or forms part of such an estate and is recorded in the Collector's register as separately assessed with such revenue, is valued at ten times the revenue so payable ;

(2) temporarily settled land paying annual revenue to Government, where it forms an entire estate or a definite share of an estate, or forms part of such estate and is recorded as aforesaid, at five times the revenue so payable ;

(3) land wholly or partially exempted from the payment of such revenue, or charged with any fixed payment in lieu of such revenue, where net profits have arisen therefrom during the year next before the date of presenting the plaint, at fifteen times such net profits ;

(4) land forming part of an estate paying revenue to Government, not being a definite share of such estate, and not separately assessed as above mentioned, at the market value of the land.

4. In the communication from the High Court at Madras submitted to this Department with your letter No. 316, dated the 1st May 1882, it was represented that in the Madras Presidency the effect of the above artificial system of valuation is to cause suits relating to land to be greatly undervalued, the result being that District Munsifs, while nominally disposing only of suits valued at Rs. 2,500 or less, are in fact deciding cases which involve much higher values. The High Court expressed an opinion that the market value of the land should be adhered to as the true criterion of valuation for purposes of jurisdiction in all cases ; but, as there might be practical difficulties in the way of ascertaining this value, the Court suggested that the principle provided in the Court-fees Act should continue to be followed, the multiples being increased twofold and fixed under the first of the three foregoing rules at 10, 20 and 30 times the revenue or net profits, respectively. This proposal received the concurrence of the Government of Madras, who recommended legislation for the purpose of giving effect thereto.

5. It was intimated to the Madras Government in this office letter No. 1570, dated the 23rd October 1882, that, before deciding what measures should be taken in order to place on a more satisfactory footing the system under which suits of the nature described are at present valued for the purpose of determining the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in the Madras Presidency, the Governor General in Council had deemed it advisable to consult other Local Governments and Administrations on the subject generally, with the view of ascertaining the systems followed in this respect in the several provinces, and of determining whether a uniform scheme of valuation of land cannot be adopted throughout British India for the purposes of court-fees as well as for the purposes of jurisdiction.

6. From the replies received to this reference it appears that, while the Civil Courts Acts of the several Provinces, unlike that in force in Madras, prescribe no special rules for fixing the value for jurisdiction of the subject-matter of land suits, but simply define the limit of the jurisdiction of each grade of Court by the money value of the subject-matter in suit, thus leaving the market value to be the strictly legal criterion, a practice has sprung up generally in the inferior Courts of accepting, in the absence of any express provision of law to the contrary, the court-fee valuation for purposes of jurisdiction also. The generally admitted result is that land suits are in consequence much undervalued and disposed of by Courts not duly competent to try them. It is agreed by the great majority of the authorities consulted that the prescription of some artificial mode of fixing valuation for jurisdiction would prove of great advantage, and that, if a mode founded on the principle adopted in the Court-fees Act should be accepted, a fair average approximation to the market value of temporarily and permanently settled lands respectively might be secured by doubling the multiples of 5 and 10, by which the fees on suits for such lands are computed. In the case of lands falling under the third of the classes enumerated in paragraph 2 supra, the weight of opinion seems to be in favor of considering the multiple therein mentioned as securing a fair approximation to the market value of such lands.

From the foregoing statement must be excepted the Bombay Presidency, where, under rulings of the local High Court, the jurisdiction of Civil Courts in regard to suits for land is reported to be determined in each case solely by the market value of the land.

7. The Government of India agree with the generally expressed opinion that it is extremely desirable to introduce some simple mode of valuing land suits for purposes of jurisdiction—some mode which will give a fair approximation to the true criterion of market value. It would no doubt be the most logical course to adhere, as Sir C. Turner recommends, to the true market value as ascertained in each individual case. But the practical objections to such a course are weighty, and indeed irresistible. In default, some artificial measure capable of easy application must be devised. The simplest means of effecting the object in view is, the Government of India consider, to adopt and apply the principle of the Court-fees Act, which has received legislative sanction in Madras and has established itself in practice in most of the other Provinces, but to alter the multiples so as to bring the value thus determined into as close accord as possible with true market value. As the market value of land varies considerably in the different provinces, and even in different districts of the same province, it has been suggested to the Government of India that a rule to secure the end proposed would most appropriately be laid down somewhat to this effect, that, for the purpose of determining the jurisdiction of the Courts in all suits relating to land, the Local Governments shall have power to declare from time to time in each district what multiple of the land revenue payable to Government in the case of revenue-paying lands, and what multiple of the profits or what rate per acre in the case of revenue-free lands, most nearly represents the market value; that the rate so declared shall remain in force for ten years; and that such valuation, so long as it remains in force, shall be accepted by the Courts.

8. It would be evidently convenient as well as expedient that there should be one and the same mode both for the purpose of court-fees and for that of jurisdiction, and this object will be kept in view when the Court-fees Act comes under amendment. But as it is uncertain when the Government may be able to undertake a revision of this Act, and as it is desirable that the anomalies in the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Courts, brought to notice, should be removed; it has been considered advisable to confine any modification which may be introduced in the present law and practice to points which do not raise any financial issues. In the meantime, I am to enquire whether the suggestion above referred to commends itself to His Excellency the Governor of Madras in Council and to the Honourable the Chief Justice and Judges of the High Court at Madras.
